NUMBER FORTY-FOUR

SOUTH FULTON WINS TWIN BILL TUESDAY

The South Fulton Red Devils and Red Angels emerged victorious in two thrilling games against Obion, played on the South Fulton hardwood Tuesday night, the girls winning 20 to 16 while the boys ran rampant to win 53 to 39. A capacity crowd jammed the gymnasium with large cheering squads from both schools.

In the girls' game, both teams played a bang-up game of basketball to the finish whistle, neither team ever gaining a good lead on the other. The score was tied at half, and during the third quarter Hastings, Red Angel forward, fouled out. Bowlin did some fancy goal shooting to pull South Fulton out of the pinch. Fox of Obion bagged 14 of the 16 points for her team.

The boys' game was a fast affair, with Obion and South Fulton rated as two of the best teams in the county, neither team having been defeated by an Obion County quintet. At half the score was 27-24, in favor of South Fulton. The Red Devils broke loose in the third quarter with a passing and shooting attack that put them in front several points before the quarter was finished. Cunningham of Obion was by far the outstanding player in the game displaying some fancy shooting, passing and guarding for his team. Bud Frankum played a good game, with "Pop" Allen, lanky Red Devil center, showing up well on the defense.

"Short Changer" Fails In Fulton

UNION CITY, Tenn., Nov. 29.—A well dressed woman working the old "mixup game" in making change got away with $5.00 in working her scheme at Red Star drug store Sunday night, using W. C. Dorna as her victim.

The woman called for a package of cigarettes and tendered a ten dollar bill in payment. After the change had been given back to her she told the clerk she didn't want to break her ten, and offered him a $1.00 bill in payment. She then decided to give him five one dollar bills for a $5.00, and in doing this handed him four one dollar bills and a five dollar bill. He called her attention to the error of the $5.00 bill and handed that back to her. She then gave him another dollar, and received her $5.00 bill. She then handed him another $5.00 saying "Here is the balance of the $10.00 bill you gave me back."

Mr. Doran checked up on her varied maneuvers after she had left to find that the $5.00 bill was all he ever got for the $10.00 bill he had given. She had gotten her change back for the $1.00 in the first move.

A woman answering this description is believed to have started to work the game at Oliver's drug store earlier in the evening. She purchased a package of aspirin and gave a $10 bill in payment. But when the clerk started to the rear of the store to get change from Dr. H. M. Oliver from the safe she told him she had found the change.

Sheriff Burcham traced the woman to Fulton where he found she had attempted to work the trick at three places, but had been unable to put it over. Trace of her was lost there.

Widening of Church Street Is Improvement

A project, which was proposed a good many months ago by the city council has been started, and is nearing completion Church St., between State Line and the railroad is now much wider, which is a real asset to traffic traveling along this route.

This improvement has long been needed to prevent traffic congestion at this point.

SCHOOL BOARD FACES PROBLEM AT TRACKS

J. O. Lewis, superintendent of the Fulton City School, stated today that the school board is facing a problem created by the construction work now underway on the State Line bridge across the railroad tracks at the New Yards. Razing of this bridge will require school children beyond the tracks to go around and cross the other bridge at Riceville.

There are possibly two solutions which will be considered, Mr. Lewis stated. One is to construct a foot bridge across the tracks at State Line, and the other is to provide a bus for transporting the children to and from school.

Former Fulton Man Burns To Death

J. A. Wingate, 47, barber and formerly a resident of Fulton, burned to death Friday morning in his locked "home-made" shanty, the body of an old truck, at Mulberry and Butler, in Memphis. He was dead when police shot their way thru the locked doors of the shanty. Wingate was the husband of Mrs. Margaret Wingate, who has been living at 516 LaCade. Mrs. Wingate had been to see her husband to take him a pie, a short time before his shanty burst into flames.

Mrs. Wingate said she and her husband had been separated for some time. She said he was in ill health, suffering from diabetes, and that she had asked police "several times to put him in a hospital."

"When I knocked on the door of his home he answered me, and I told him to let me in. He said 'all right', he did not open the door. I had to be at work a short time later, so after I had knocked again and he did not open the door I left. I was riding street car, passing Butler and Main, when I looked down Butler and saw smoke coming from his home. I got off the car and ran down," Mrs. Wingate said.

Firemen stationed at No. 2 Engine House, Butler and Main, also had seen the smoke and rushed down. Officers Anderson and Edgerly, also called, tried to break down the doors, then had to shoot away the locks. On the inside they reported Wingate had wired the doors shut. District Fire Chief Clarence Baugh reported "It looked like the fire started from an overheated stove." The stove was made out of an old iron barrel.

Mrs. Wingate said her husband came to Memphis from Fulton, Ky., six months ago. She said he had had several jobs here but did not hold any of them long because of his bad health.

"He was a good husband. He provided well for me until he became ill," Mrs. Wingate cried hysterically as firemen and police were breaking into her husband's burning home.

Patience and resignation are the pillars of human peace on earth.

KITTY LEAGUE SEASON WILL OPEN APRIL 25

April 25 has been set as the opening date of the 1934 Kitty League season, which will be composed of 13 games, and the closing date will be September 4, Labor Day. This is the earliest start since the Class D loop was reorganized in 1934. Keener interest in baseball early in the season was attributed as the reason for starting earlier.

A proposal by Owensboro for a 24 game season was discarded for lack of a second.

The Kitty League did not open until May 1 this year, and cold weather set in as the season closed stopped the play-off series.

"The Kitty League has never completely finished a season," Ben Howard, new loop president said, "but we're going to finish the 1934 season if we have to play in snow." He also warned that rained-out games must be played in the following series according to regulations.

Hershel Bard while coming to work the other morning, at first thought he was seeing things, when he looked down the railroad track and saw an automobile coming toward him lickety-split. But the car was mounted on special wheels for the tracks, and it bore some railroad officials. So he decided he hadn't had too much to drink after all.

BUSINESS FIRMS HOLD BRIGHTER OUTLOOK

For the past week actual business conditions, as well as sentiment, continued to improve gradually, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from 37 key cities, just received by its Louisville District Office. Industrial activity, and automobile assemblies were stepped up, steel production was above the October average, and production of electric power was up. Retail and wholesale trade, as well as manufacturers, felt the improvement. Practically all cities reported increases in retail trade over previous week, and only 9 registered more than a 5 per cent decrease from last year's comparative. Merchants in many cities, notably New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia, were optimistic with regard to prospects for good Christmas business, with the volume expected to equal or exceed that for the 1932 season.

Louisville reported that retail trade, influenced by steady seasonal increase, was only 3 to 5 per cent under 1932 levels. The drug trade was down 12 to 15 per cent. Wholesale dry goods and notions moved at about the same rate as last year. Reduction of 10 to 15 per cent under year ago was reported on collections in all lines of business. Manufacturing volume unchanged, some plants operating 25 per cent under last year.

Kentucky Employment Services reported placements, 448; decrease of 17.6 per cent from the previous week.

Louisville bank clearings decreased 4.7 per cent under year ago.

Kentucky's 1933 corn crop estimate 74,704,900 bushels; last year 75,556,000; average annual production 61,768,000, 1927-36; Irish potato crop estimate, 4,224,000 bushels; 1937, 4,371,000. Other 1933 estimates: sweet potatoes, 2,290,000 bushels; sorgho syrup production, 695,000 gallons; buckwheat, 27,000 bushels; apples 801,000 bushels.

Distilling company in Lebanon resumed operations after a shutdown since February.

Records show that approval has been given, and PWA grants obtained, since last July for 55 schools building projects in Kentucky in the next few months, estimated to cost $5,439,702.

XMAS DECORATIONS BEING INSTALLED

Holiday decorations, including vari-colored lights and evergreen, is being installed in the downtown district of Fulton, under the auspices of the Young Business Men's Club and the Chamber of Commerce. Members of the former organization have been busy this week preparing the city in appropriate Yuletide dress.

An entirely new plan of decoration is being used this year. Instead of long streamers of lights on each side of the street, numerous arches of evergreen and colorful lights are being installed across the streets. The new scheme of decoration is expected to be the most attractive ever installed here.

Local stores are turning out in festive holiday styles, with beautiful displays in the windows and on the counters. Interiors of the stores are being rearranged of the new holiday spirit. Already there has been a noticeable upward trend in shopping, and many gifts are being purchased and laid aside for the eventful Christmas night. The spirit of Christmas is here.

BEWARE OF THE PEDDLER

It is wise to beware of the house-to-house salesman, canvasser and peddler, unless he represents an established local firm, the wisest thing to do is to ask to see their permit, for it is against the law for outside salesmen, canvassers and peddlers to go from house-to-house without special permit from the authorities.

With a few exceptions legitimate business firms do not use house-to-house canvassers and peddlers to sell merchandise, so the chances of getting stung when you buy from these fly-by-night gentry are very high. When you buy from local firms, you know they are right here to make good, if anything goes wrong, for they are established and intend to stay here and continue to do business with you.

Again with a few exceptions, the house-to-house canvassers and peddlers never expect to see you again, have no interest in you or in what they are selling, beyond the immediate interest of making a sale. They are out to get your money, anyway they can, without regard as to whether or not you get full value.

The best way to handle peddlers and canvassers from outside the community is to close the door on them and notify the police. Only in this way can the people of the community be protected from fly-by-night schemes to gyp them out of their money. If the housewives would cooperate with the police, this community nuisance and menace could soon be abated.

A NEW FRONTIER

Many Americans are inclined to lament the fact that we have no more frontiers to conquer. In the past, they say, this nation has staged one come-back after another by creating new cities, opening new lands, winning the West, pushing railroads across the continent, manufacturing automobiles, and so on.

Now, they complain, there is not much left to do. The West is won, immigration checked and population becoming stabilized. No new enterprise to take the place of the automobile is in sight. But perhaps we are so close we cannot see the forest for the trees. For in the opinion of competent British and European economists, all this is nonsense.

The fact of the matter is that all America is still frontier country from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf. Compared with the overbuilt, over-famed, over-populated Old World, America is just beginning to grow, just starting to go places.

Take housing. The enormous majority of America's 130,000,000 people live and work in buildings which, to Europeans, seem purely ordered, intensively cultivated and country. Compared with the temporary. That is true of both city farms and solid brick and stone settlements of Britain, France, Holland, the Scandinavian nations and other countries, even our eastern seaboard seems "frontierish".

Millions of people live in rickety frame dwellings. Others live in cabins, shacks and shanties. Many industries and business concerns are likewise poorly quartered.

Ignoble But Not Ignominious

By IRVIN S. COBB

LAST spring, while boxing bouts were still being held in the city armories, two of us set out for an evening at one of the big barracks where the national regiments are housed and drilled. The hall was packed with spectators. Outside, a crowd of late comers struggled at the ticket windows. But we bethought ourselves to secure reserved seats in advance so we marched right on in.

The preliminaries were over. The main event of the night got under way—a ten-round go between middleweights. Now, this had been touted beforehand as a set-to where two evenly matched and expert ringsters would show us all they had.

But alas, the trouble was that one of the fisticuffers had nothing to show. From the first moment, it was quite plain that not only was he outclassed but also that he had no stomach for punishment.

As his antagonist crowded upon him, slashing, jabbing and punching, he covered up, hiding his distressed face in his glove and backed away. He scarcely offered any blows in return for the heavy rain of gloved clouts which played upon his ribs and his breadbasket. He just backed and kept on backing.

Above the disappointed murmurs of the multitude rose the deep bass tones of our friend:

"That's right, kid," shouted a ringside customer, "ignore him! Ignore him!"

JUST HUMANS

By GENE CARR

"Fifteen for That! And Looka th' Baby! Pulled for Five Berries!"

Changing all this is a typical American job, and the biggest job this nation ever faced—a job that would keep our industrial and business machine running at high speed for a long time.

British economists also laugh at our complaint of a lack of new discovery, like the automobile, to keep us prosperous. They contend that air conditioning, new heating and cooling, airplanes and so forth, in a great country like the United States, may even exceed the motor industry a stime goes on. Europeans look with envy on all American, for in their eyes we are still new, just starting to grow. In other words, there are new frontiers all around us yet to be conquered.

GOOD CITIZENS

A democracy depends upon its citizens. If democracy is to survive in the modern world, its citizens must be more alert, better informed, better trained than ever before. In a democracy we secure freedom by putting forth efforts to understand and cooperate.

Many of us do not understand that each individual citizen of the United States is a powerful influence in the public affairs of the nation, and even in the affairs of other nations. By our collective opinions and votes we guide the domestic and foreign policies of the nation, and thus each citizen becomes important.

There are many ways today that a citizen can express his opinion and make his influence felt, besides his single vote in elections, such as through the popular "public opinion" polls, letters to the newspapers, letters to Congressmen, the boycott, at public meetings, and other devices enable him to make his will felt.

Because of this the citizen today is confronted on all sides by propaganda, most often disguised and always designed to mold his or her opinion into certain lines. All kinds of organizations, pressure groups, political groups and selfish interests of a thousand kinds, both domestic and foreign, are seeking to use to their own advantage the political, economic and social power of the American citizen.

Thus it behooves each citizen to keep abreast of the times, get the best and most reliable information possible to guide his opinions and decisions. It is hard to sift the true from the false, to detect what is propaganda, but to insure our freedom and make democracy work each citizen must put forth the effort to understand the important events taking place in the world today and act for the best interests of the nation.

Never before have the citizens of a democracy had such a heavy responsibility and such a great duty to be well informed, to make the right decisions, to be alert and intelligent in weighing affairs, to make his or her opinion, influence and vote count on the right side of the ledger. So good citizens must work together for the best interests of the community, the state, the nation and the world. Good citizens must stand ready to make some personal sacrifices, if necessary, to preserve our free institutions and our democracy.

CONSTRUCTIVE ADS

In the last year there has been a noticeable shift in the character of advertising copy, one which should be for the better. Advertisers are not only stressing the quality of their products but they are becoming more social-minded.

Where formerly they shrank from defending themselves in public prints, now they buy space and present their cases of the country. Where formerly they ignored the country and looked upon it as a vast treasure trove to be exploited, now they're praising it and consider it the public domain and not a private hunting ground for a few. Where formerly they were content with sniping at a competing preacher, now they are spending thousands of dollars to tell the nation that they have an abounding faith in its future and its citizens.

This is constructive advertising in the true sense of the word. Combined with the election results it should help to dispel that fear that has kept the country in the economic doldrums.

Advertisements of this nature should narrow the angry gap that has separated the consumer and the producer. They should usher in a new era of co-operation and result in mutual benefits.

The Only Thing That Would Reach That High is the H. C. of L.

EARLY HISTORY OF FULTON COUNTY

Early religious activities in Fulton county were conducted by various churches. Some of the early Missionary Baptist preachers were Reuben Owen, J. P. Edwards, who built Poplar Grove church; George White and Samuel Crider, who came over from Tennessee. The regular Hardside Baptist were represented by Fleming Cayce, Wesley Bowden, John Starks, Silas Caven-der, Abram Cook, Conyer and McGowan. Methodist—Joshua Cole, Peter Sullivan, William Bynum. Cumberland Presbyterians—Collins Bradley, Dr. Bard, William Bar-net and John Barnett.

The first society of the Metho-dist church was organized about 1825 at Martin Oliver's about two miles east of Cayce. It is now called Ebenezer church. The first church by the Missionary Baptists was the Poplar Grove church, organized probably in 1828-29. Another was established a little later about three miles south of Cayce. The first Hardside Baptist church in the county, was organized in 1826, on Mud Creek. The Presbyterians organized about the same date at Mr. Samuel Hodges'.

Railroads—In 1833, the Hickman and Obion Railroad was projected, a charter secured in 1854, and the road completed in 1858 from Hick-man to Union City. In 1856 the Nashville & Northwestern road ob-tained possession of it, and changed its name about 1869-70 to the Nash-ville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Rail-road.

The Mobile & Ohio Railroad, passing through Fulton county from north to south, was built about 1856.

The Southern Division of the Illinois Central, passing through the eastern portion of the county and giving superior transportation facilities between the North and the South, was built in 1873-74 from Jackson to Cairo, as the extension of the Mississippi Central Railroad.

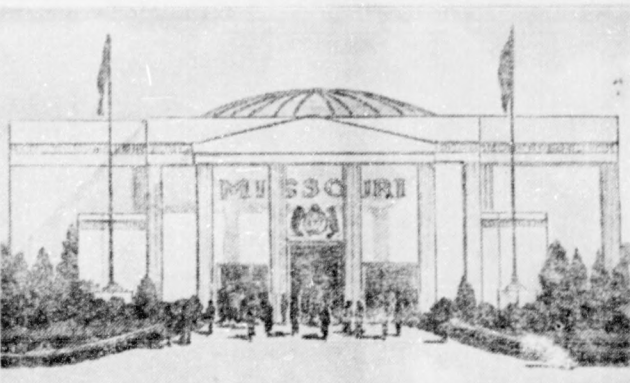

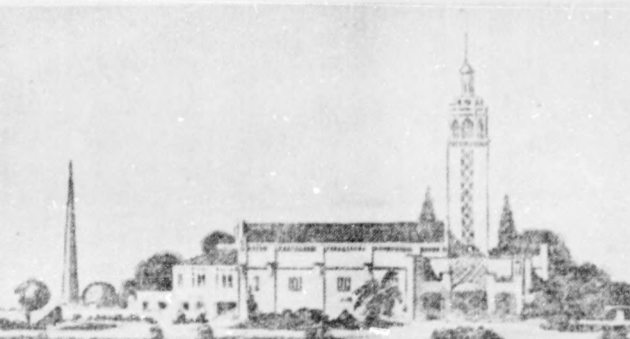

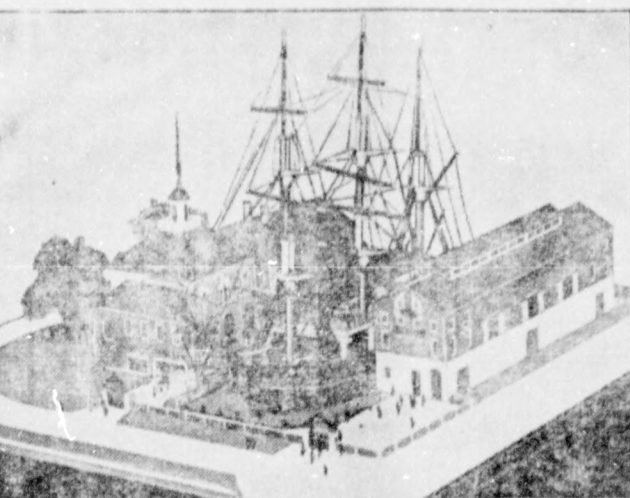

The Chesapeake, Ohio and South-western Railroad passed through the southeastern corner of the county, and was graded about 1869, reach-ing the town of Fulton in 1861. It was later taken over by the Illi-nois Central.

Fulton county was, during the Civil War, the scene of military ac-tivity by both the Confederate and Federals. In addition to the opera-tions of the regular troops of the armies, hordes of guerrillas swept over the country, destroying life and property indiscriminately.

The Confederate cause was repre-sented by several organizations that did heroic service on many fields. Among those organizations the fol-lowing are mentioned: Alexander Guards, commanded by Capt. Ed-ward Crossland, went to Virginia and participated in the first battle of Bull Run in 1861. Capt. John A. Lauderdale organized a company which went to Tennessee and joined the First Tennessee Cavalry. He af-terward became a major and was assigned to the Quartermaster's De-partment. Capt. Henry Campbell raised a company which went to Columbus, Ky., joined the Seventh Kentucky Infantry, and was sub-sequently mounted to operate with Forrest's Cavalry. Capt. Henry A. Tyler recruited a company that fought with Forrest's command through the war. A Home Militia was organized in 1861 by Capt. Thomas R. McMahon to protect Hickman against the encroachments of the Federal gunboats. A confed-erate flag blowing from the banks of the river was supposed to be likely to provoke an attack from the gunboats passing up the river. McMahon's brave guards, armed with rifles, flint-rock muskets, pitch-forks, battle axes, spears, spades and other weapons, were ready to protect their flag.

The Union cause had few repre-sentatives in the county. Hickman, the county seat, is situ-ated on the eastern banks of the Mississippi river, 38 miles below its confluence with the Ohio at Cairo.

Typical State Buildings At New York Fair 1939

At the top is a model of the New England Building for the New York World's Fair which opens on April 30, 1939. The scene is a typical New Eng-land waterfront with a 135-foot sailing vessel lying at dock. On one side is a merchant's warehouse; on the other, a two story structure indicating the Bullfinch contributions to New England architecture.

In the middle is the Florida exhibit which will occupy 2 1/2 acres of ground and will depict the citrus industry, phosphate mines, animal life and other resources and advantages of the state.

At the bottom is the building of the state of Missouri in which will be shown the industrial, agricultural and recreational life of the state.

It consist of three divisions, West Hickman, Hickman and East Hick-man. The main residence portion is located on the bluffs or behind the town in East Hickman. The business district found along the river front in the early days, and was flooded some times by the overflowing Mississippi river. Now, however, the city has the protection of a sub-stantial concrete flood wall and levees.

"Prior to 1834," wrote Rev. Willis White, "the site where Hickman now stands was called Mills' Point, in honor of Mr. Mills who settled there in 1819. The writer visited the place in the fall of 1824, and there was but one house in it. It stood near the Millet corner, and was occupied by John Doons, whose father Jake Doons lived about two miles on the bluff above Hickman near where the railroad now ascends the bluff. The river was about one-half mile from the cabin where John Doons lived. The site on which Hickman stands was covered by a military survey, known and recog-nized as good. This was not ques-tioned for several years after the settlement of this country. Mr. G. W. L. Marr, who lived in Madrid Bend, and was quite a shrewd man, especially in land matters, became satisfied that the military title was not good; therefore, he entered the land as State land and then tested the military title by a suit of eject-ment, and succeeded in getting pos-session of the land after a long and expensive law suit. The land in dis-pute embraced 3,000 or 4,000 acres, including the site whereon the town now stands."

The town of Hickman was laid out by A. S. Tyler, and by Mr. Marr called Hickman, in honor of his wife's maiden name. In 1837, the town was incorporated by an act of the legislature. Mr. Marr held his lots at high rates, and thus checked the growth of the new town. Sev-eral years later he sold his pos-sessions in and around Hickman to Samuel Wilson, which gave new impetus to the village.

The first business house in the town is said to have been built by McIntosh and Drabblebreast about 1835, and was situated where the Hickman Lumber Manufacturing Company building stood for many years. By some it is said that the first store was kept by Robert White, in a hewed log house. Aunt Polly Hoffman said, however, that a Mr. Green, who clandestinely mar-ried a daughter of Jacob Doons, kept a grocery store at an earlier date.

The first mayor under the new charter was Jesse Edmonson. The first church edifice was erected at Hickman about 1840, and was a frame building 20 x 40, used for school purposes also. It stood on the ground later occupied by C. L. Ran-die's residence.

FAN HANDBAGS

Evening handbags grow more and more frivolous with every passing week. Among the newest ones are those of ostrich feathers which look like a fan. They come in all evening colors but the very bright ones used with black or white gowns are particularly effective.

CHRISTMAS TREE JEWELRY

Some of the newest costume jew-elry looks as if it has been picked right off of a Christmas tree. Brace-lets and necklaces are made of wee bright globes like the larger ones used to decorate trees. They dress up a simple black cocktail or din-ner dress no end.

THE FORUM

Congress will have before its next session plans for strengthening the defense of this country. Development of aircraft is proposed, including training of civil fliers at government expense. No doubt, recent war scares, will help shape public opinion in support of this movement.

Fires have been numerous in Fulton this week, but fortunately without serious damage. Grass fires are dangerous at this time of the year, and every precaution should be taken to avoid them.

Fulton boys go off to College, and continue to attract attention by their attainments. We are in receipt of information from Abilene Christian College, Abilene, Texas, where Joe Beadles and Dane Lovelace of this city, have been selected as letter-men of the Wildcat squad. Joe plays in the backfield, and Dane performs at guard position. Both boys saw service with the Bulldogs, Fulton High School football team.

We have watched repeated efforts of outsiders to drift into Fulton and hook local business firms in one way or another. Different kinds of promotional ideas just are of no earthly benefit to anyone other than the person with the half-baked idea to get something for nothing. Short changes hit Fulton this week, but failed to work their game very successfully, but Union City was not so fortunate. Fulton citizens are becoming "wise" to strangers who walk into their stores with some silver-lined tale. The quicker they learn to say no, the more time and money they will be able to save.

Come on, folks! Let's hear from you. Everyone has something they would like to see done that will be of benefit to our community. The light of publicity will inculcate right thinking, which will bring helpful results.

Were all men happy, revellings would cease.

Joys shared with others are more enjoyed.

Believe not every tale you hear.

HOME AGENT NOTES

By J. B. WILLIAMS

Farmers Favor One Variety Cotton

At a meeting at Sasfras Ridge sixty farmers heard the articles of Association read and discussed. Every hand owner that was present stated that they thought the program was workable and would improve the production of cotton in this section. When forms were presented to the growers to sign every farmer who was operating a farm signed the membership agreement that they would grow only one variety of cotton and be governed by the association.

Farmers that are interested in becoming a member should talk to someone who has heard the program explained, or come to the Office and discuss the objects of the program. Only land owners, or men who are operating an entire farm, would be interested in signing to grow only one variety of cotton for the coming three years.

Farmers who have signed are: Wayne Yates, W. A. Nipp, J. N. Page, Mrs. Pearl Armstrong, Claud Middleton, W. C. Vaughn, Russell Thomas, J. O. Johnson, Jeff Darnall, Tyler Terrett, J. E. Smith, C. M. Hornsby, O. L. Sutton, Herbert Michel, Roscoe Stone, Henry Sanger, W. A. Johnston and Miss Helen Tyler.

Cotton Referendum December 16
At a meeting of the County Conservation Committee on Tuesday, it was decided that five Community voting places would be established for farmers to vote on the cotton marketing quotas for 1939.

Everyone who has produced cotton in 1938 is eligible to vote in this referendum. Voting places have been established at the Woman's Club, at Fulton for the cotton growers in District II. Those farmers living in District II will vote at Cayce school building, District III Hills and District III Bottoms will vote at the office at Hickman. Farmers in District IV will vote at Sasfras Ridge school house. The polls will open at 9 A. M. and close at 5 P. M. and each farmer who has produced cotton is encouraged to go and vote, the voting will be by secret ballot. If two thirds of the cotton growers indicate, by their vote, that they want marketing quotas on cotton for 1939, quotas will be in effect. This is the chance that is given the cotton farmer to indicate whether he wants controlled marketing next year. If more than one third of the farmers vote against marketing quotas, everyone can sell all of the cotton he grows without any penalty and thus make marketing as it was in 1936 and 1937. No loans will be available until production is controlled. Therefore, it is important that cotton farmers make every possible effort to vote Saturday, December 16th.

Applications for 1938 Conservation Program will be at the voting places for producers to sign who are eligible for payment for controlling production of corn, wheat, tobacco, cotton and soil building practices. This will enable farmers to vote on cotton and sign their applications at the same time.

FLOWERS IN CANS

Flowers grow well for regular florists, who have all the knowledge and skill of their profession; they sometimes grow equally well in the remotest sections of our country, where no book knowledge is available to aid the growers. Particularly have I enjoyed throughout my life the flowers in cans and buckets that grace so many humble homes. Flower pots often are quite cheap, but even the pittance to be paid for them is more than some homes have. Not daunted by poverty, however, the women and children, rarely the men, save the broken pots and pans and have containers for flowers anyway. Neighbors divide their stock of flowers, and thus in a single humble home there may be a large assortment of begonias, lantanas, geraniums, and other favorites. Garden flowers of similar tastes are everywhere, growing as luxuriantly as they could or would in a greenhouse or an arboretum.

Across the years come memories of the flowers in cans. How skillfully many people can raise plants from cuttings! How eagerly they save from one year to another their stock of seeds or plants! Many a small house is not too small to keep alive through the winter a few stocks that will be treasures of beauty the next year. Even humble homes sometimes have a flower pit, where with a little trouble potted plants can be kept from fall till spring. I have helped dig flower pits and have kept my own flowers thus for years at a time. Pits do not need to be elaborate, either, for a door made of brown domestic saturated in linsed oil will serve for a glass window quite well, as I know from experience. Some planks for a roof and an old quilt or blanket for severe weather are about all that is necessary to furnish such a pit. If the door is made to slant toward the south, winter sunshine can do its part to help in the process of saving a bit of flower beauty and wealth from year to year.

Somewhat I seldom see now the flower stands that used to be common, a sort of stairstep affair, where the cans and pots were arranged according to height. Some marvelous effects were secured thus, with the smallest investment.

In any evaluation of our artistic, aesthetic life this impulse to create beauty for the humble home should not be neglected. So much is made of the artistic life of other lands and times that I wish some one would "stand up in meetin'" and say a few good words for the artistry of much of our own humdrum life, an artistry that has had to live under the buffets of mistaken zealots, many of whom regard beauty in any form as dangerous. I have heard fearful things said about people who sought to satisfy their souls' longing for beauty. One of the greatest artists I ever knew was punished as a child for drawing pictures. Worse still, he was played for publicly for thus giving his talent to the devil. In spite of these handicaps he is today a great man in his profession and is honored by the very people who once stood in his way. In much the same way the creators of beauty, even by planting flowers in tin cans, are slowly being recognized for what they are worth to a world that needs beauty and harmony and satisfying aesthetic life.

Cotton Growers To Decide On Use of Quotas in 1938

In the National Referendum on cotton marketing quotas for 1938, scheduled for December 10, cotton producers of Tennessee will have a chance to decide for themselves whether or not they want to continue to use of quotas as a means of keeping the cotton surplus from getting bigger, according to F. W. Colby, State AAA administrative officer.

The purpose of quotas is to help the producer get the supply of cotton back to a more reasonable level and then to keep excessive supplies that ruin prices from piling up in the future, Mr. Colby states. Quotas also protect the farmers who plant within their cotton acreage allotments from having their efforts defeated by those who overplant. When quotas are in effect, producers stand to lose the advantages of conservation payments and the full benefits of cotton loans if they overplant; but when quotas are not voted into effect, the producer who does not want to cooperate, can be overplanting, offset the efforts which their neighbors are making to keep surplus supplies from piling up and the price of cotton from going down.

In this connection, Mr. Colby points out that with quotas in effect this year the National cotton allotment was not overplanted. The National allotment was about 27,500,000 acres and producers actually grew about 26,450,000 acres. This indicates, he said, that quotas were one factor in keeping the adjustment efforts of cooperating farmers from being defeated or made less effective by those who otherwise might have stayed out of the program.

MOULDED LINGERIE

Contour slips are the latest development in lingerie to emphasize the nipped-in waist and high bust silhouette of the season. The skirts of the slips have a nice swing that keeps them from riding up when you walk. The skirts are attached to a corselette waist band and the top is a bra that moulds and heightens the lines of the bust.

Litter Of Purebreds Weighs 2,160 Pounds

Frequently, hog producers who keep purebreds develop the false notion that the keepers of them should automatically advance from market-hog producer to seller of purebreds exclusively. On the other hand, many producers, like Douglas Graham, Hopkins county, Kentucky, keep purebreds because they develop into hogs economically. That this is sound thinking is borne out by the cost record on a purebred 11-pig litter, owned by Graham, and entered in the Kentucky ton-litter contest in 1938. This litter when 165 days old weighed 2,160 pounds, or 196 plus pounds per pig.

That the pigs were well finished is attested to by the fact that they sold for $9.65 per hundred-weight, which, so far, is top price of the year for hogs.

Aside from the fast-gaining ability of the pigs, and their response to good feeding and care, the early farrowing date, January 28, was a contributing factor. A later farrowed litter would not have been ready for market when the price was at peak.

The feed mixture consisted of corn, a small amount each of wheat middlings and ground wheat, supplemented by skim milk and tankage. The pigs were grazed on a pasture of red clover, lespedeza and redtop.

The litter sold for $208.44. The feed, pasturage, and labor were charged at $112.08. The cash return above feed, pasturage and labor was $96.36, or $8.75 per pig.

A CIGAR A DAY

Home owners, if your roof leaks, don't shed tears. You can have a new one for four cents a day—less than the price of a cigar.

For the average house roof, containing 1500 square feet can be covered with fire-resistant asphalt shingles for about $150. Such a roof is guaranteed against manufacturing defects for ten years, but many asphalt shingled roofs are fifteen and more years old. Assuming a life of ten years, however, the roof will cost only $15 per year or four cents a day.

Forty-five members were present in the monthly meeting of the PTA Wednesday, November 23. The sixth grade won the membership and attendance drive in the PTA contest with a total of 23 members.

South Fulton plays Palmersville on the Palmersville floor Friday night, December 2.

The students returned to school Monday morning after the Thanksgiving holidays for another month's work before the Christmas vacation which will begin December 22.

Several of the faculty members were out of town during the holidays: Miss Christine Johnston visited at her home in Murray; Mrs. Malcolm Smith visited in Mayfield; Miss Allie D. An All-Electric All-Wave Set Adds Value to Radio on Farm

Radio plays an important part in the business of modern farming.

By IRA MILLER

Rural Electrification Bureau

In a recent article, we mentioned the fact that, when the high line comes, a radio is second only to good and ample light in the electrical wants of the average farmer. True, a large percentage of the farms of this country have had radios for many years—but by far the greater number have been battery-operated sets of one kind or another. It is not our intention to belittle such receivers in the least, for they have given and continue to give excellent service in areas remote from power lines.

However, no one will deny that the frequent replacement of batteries is a decided inconvenience as well as an appreciable expense. Nor does the comparatively limited volume and range of the battery-operated set enable one to obtain the maximum pleasure and benefit from radio.

It is surprising to find many farmers with high-line service still using obsolete battery sets, especially when a modern all-electric all-wave receiver now can be purchased at remarkably low cost. In a very real sense, they are practicing false economy for, in addition to providing for better reception, a modern set is much cheaper to operate—requiring from 12 to 12, with an average of 8 kw.-hr. per month. At a five-cent rate, this amounts to from 64 to 20 cents per day with an average of 13 cents.

A good radio on the farm is far more than just an instrument of pleasure and entertainment, important though these be on long winter evenings. In numerous ways, it is a distinct farm tool as well. For through frequent daily weather, crop and market reports, the farmer is enabled to improve his bargaining power by changing his marketing and harvesting plans to meet shifting conditions. By listening to foreign as well as domestic news broadcasts, it often is possible for him to forecast price trends long before the effects of national and international developments are actually reflected in the principal marketing centers.

There is no single gift that will bring greater joy, comfort and profit to each and every member of the farm family than that of a modern all-electric all-wave radio—be it for Christmas, a birthday, a wedding anniversary or, simply, to make everyone happy.

FULTON HIGH

"Hold Everything" is the title of the play to be presented by the High School players at the Science Hall on next Friday, Dec. 2. Although the title refers to the story and action of the play, "Hold Everything" does really hold everything that goes to make good entertainment. Suspense—action—story—interesting characters—side-splitting comedy—situations and dialogue—romance—what more could one ask? There is no fun in running a tourist home when business is bad, but when business picks up and you find your quiet rest home filled with crooks—bankers—runaway sweethearts aspiring movie actors and whatnot—the time for rest is at an end. Not only does this interesting set of characters meet in a quiet tourist home, but suddenly they find themselves vitally concerned in each other's lives. How they become involved in this bright, snappy story will prove more than entertaining—and how they extricate themselves from the tangled skein into which they are woven will furnish one of the most hilarious evenings you have ever spent in a theatre. Those included in the cast are: Myrtle Binkley, Lucille Clapp, Betty Goldsmith, Jane Alley, Almus Underwood, Treva Whayne, Lucille Edwards, Mary Lee Roberts, Mary Ethel Allen, Wiley Cowell, Felix Gossam, Jimmy Lewis, and Glen McAlister.

The football banquet to be given on December 18 will formally bring the football season to a close. This is the annual affair given by the Rotary Club in honor of those football players who have participated in at least fourteen quarters of actual play.

The Fulton Bulldogs, after a not so successful season along the scoring end, but one played against very difficult opposition have received a very desirable honor from Sam Livingston, sportswriter of the Paducah Sun Democrat. He has named the Bulldogs as the most courageous team of the West Kentucky Conference, as the result of their courageous showing against the Reitz High team of Evansville, Ind., when the Bulldogs held them several times on their ten yard line.

Basketball practice was begun Monday afternoon, November 28.

FARMING FORESIGHT

By the exercise of foresight during the quiet winter months, alert farmers may find numerous ways to improve the condition of their farms. For example, one important step in soil building is through treating manure with finely ground rock phosphate, which supplies the plant food phosphorus in which manure is ordinarily deficient, and at the same time absorbs an odorous valuable liquid element otherwise lost by evaporation.

For best results, after cleaning stall and gutters or poultry dropping boards, sprinkle about three pounds per day of rock phosphate for each 1,000 pounds of live weight stock. Or, on manure already accumulated, add 100 or 200 pounds of rock phosphate to each load as it is hauled to the field. The first method is best, however, as it allows time for thorough mixing before the fertilizer is spread on the soil.

When applying in the stalls, be certain to use finely ground rock phosphate, and not acid of superphosphate, as acid is injurious to the hoofs and hair of cattle, while rock phosphate does not affect the tenderest skin.

Phosphated manure will increase crops and pastures much beyond the results gained from manure alone—sometimes more than double—and continue to show great improvement in quantity and quality of yield for years to come.

A leading authority advises: "Get a few sacks of high grade, finely ground rock phosphate and try it out for yourself this winter—experience shows it pays."
