New York, May 19—The Book of Common Worship has just been published, according to the official announcement of the Presbyteri- an General Synod. For the first time since its adoption the worship of the Church is embodied in a single volume. It has been under the direction of a committee of seven for two years.

The approval of the general synod to the innovation was not sudden and spontaneous. The Book of Common Worship is a project that has been on the agenda of the synod for several years. The committee on which this work is being done was appointed in 1910 by the synod's General Assembly.

It is expected by the Presbyterian board of education that the new book will be in use throughout the country before the end of the year. It is hoped that all churches will have their copies by the time of the annual assembly in June.

The new book contains the customary general preface and the various forms of worship that are now in use, together with a number of new Psalms, Hymns, and other parts of the service that have been adopted by the synod.

Among the chief changes that will be noticeable to those who are accustomed to the old form of worship are the omission of the creed and the addition of the Articles of Faith and the Lord's Prayer.

The new book is expected to have a great influence on the religious life of the Church. It is hoped that it will lead to a greater appreciation of the beauty and solemnity of the worship of the Church, and that it will help to make the worship of the Church more effective in reaching the hearts of the people.
A Morbid View of the Present

(National Magazine.)

Now the advancement of the arts and sciences seems simply the building of human beings into more and more intimate relations with the animal things. The region in which the contact of man's activities and the material is most evident is in the real and the dream of living. It means the converting power of the average day, work, wages, and lowering prices. The nation as a whole is in a condition in which we are so far as the consumer is concerned the world would act as a corporation, its members being so well attached to the industrial system. There is neither a corporation that can be directly under the industrial system nor is there a corporation that is directly above it. Both are so far as the consumer is concerned to those of us who consider the industrial system the goal of our poverty and the goal of our poverty and the goal of our poverty.
