THE LISTENING POST

● I was talking to a machinery salesman not long ago about trading in an old platen press and he was looking at the antique which has been in use for many years. The machine, according to my best information, is about fifty years old, and naturally needs replacing. The salesman looked at the machine with a strange lack of enthusiasm and finally noticed that it had a treadle. Perhaps the lay reader may not know what I mean by treadle. I mean the press has a foot pedal which can be attached to a crankshaft and thus make it possible to operate the press by foot power. He smiled at sight of the treadle and said that if we made a trade I could take the treadle off and either keep it as a souvenir or sell it for junk. "It will save that much freight," he remarked, "and we never use treadles any more on either rebuilt or new machines."

● That remark caused me to realize that in my own life time I had seen small town printers emerge from the hand operated days to the machine age. When I first started in the printing business I knew but dimly of shops which had power, and in looking at advertisements of new machines I was always thrilled at the phrase which was used many times in describing equipment. "Steam fixtures extra," the phrase read and I used to wonder how a steam engine to furnish power. The use of electricity, so far as I know, was unknown then--about 1900--but a few shops which I had heard of had what was called a gas engine.

● The first shops in which I worked were all hand and foot operated. I remember a shop in Lexington, Tenn., which was really the first shop I held a job in, had what was called an Army press. I never knew the exact origin of the name, but somebody told me once that it was so named because these presses had been hauled into remote places on the backs of Army mules. Be that as it may, the press was a tiny contraption, weighing, I imagine, only five or six hundred pounds, and printing a newspaper on it was slow and tiresome matter, and I used to dread press day with its run of three or four hundred papers. At that, however, the press was a lot easier than the Washington hand press to operate, and I served time with both of them.

● There was one platen press in the office, of just the kind I am talking about. It was what is known in the trade as a 10x15 Chandler and Price and it had a treadle just as I have mentioned. But in this case the treadle did not rest on the floor, forgotten and unused, as it does in this office now. Not by a jugfull. It was attached to the crankshaft at all times, and when jobs were to be printed it afforded the only means of transmitting power to its gears. The job would be placed on the press and made ready and when the work of printing started the printer would put his foot on the treadle and begin pumping up and down. For a few minutes a fellow would think it easy, but after fifteen or twenty minutes the things began to get a man down.

● For a right handed man it was usually the custom to kick with the right foot, but after so long a time, it would become necessary to use the other foot and so, after much practice, a man might be able to kick with either foot. No matter, it was wearying and tiresome to both of them, and by the time a man kicked off a couple of thousand circulars or letterheads or envelopes, he knew

Coach Cutchin Is Speaker At Cage Banquet

Joe Treas McCollum Wins Honor From Fellow Players--Spence Is Captain

Carlisle Cutchin, for many years coach at Murray State College, and a man who has coached many championship teams, was the principal speaker last night at the annual basketball banquet given the local basketball teams by the Lions Club. At this meeting the club entertained the championship South Fulton team as well as the Fulton High Bulldogs, along with coaches, managers and members of the faculty. Dinner was served in the high school cafeteria, and Supt. J. O. Lewis acted as toastmaster after President Sanford of the Lions Club had made a brief address of welcome.

Coach Cutchin, in his thoughtful talk, gave an interesting review of the beginning and the swift growth of basketball. "Basketball is a game which brings out the best a boy has," he said. "It teaches agility, it makes a boy skilled in the use of the hands, it teaches cooperation, it teaches competition, it teaches the principles of sportsmanship. There is nothing surprising in the fact that in the fifty years of life which the sport has had it has taken the lead in number of paid admissions."

The veteran Murray coach, who is retiring from his basketball coaching this year, gave some of his philosophy of sports, and without doubt his words made a deep impression on the boys and adults who heard him. He urged the boys to give all that they had in competition, to play the game in a clean manner and not to consider winning the ultimate test. "If you do your best and still lose you will have a deep inner satisfaction of a job well done," he said. Coach Cutchin was accompanied by John Miller, freshman coach at Murray, and the latter also spoke briefly.

Supt. Cravens and Supt. Lewis, heads of the two local schools both spoke of the fine rivalry that exists between their respective schools, as did Coach Haynes and Coach Giles. Principal Holland was another of the speakers, and he related some of his experiences in attending a "few" basketball games during the past season.

Coach Giles then paid a tribute to his team of the past year, saying that he believed they had done a good job. He gave out letters to the following players: Joe Treas McCollum, only senior on the team, who has lettered before in all sports, Hugh Mac McClellan, who has also lettered in the other sports and who has one more year,

Senate Allows House To Have 10-Day Vacation

Washington. --The Senate Wednesday agreed to let the House take a ten-day vacation starting Thursday.

Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.), obtained Senate approval of the plan after explaining that the Constitution required that either the Senate or House must get approval of the other for any adjournment while the other remained in session.

Joe McAlister, Jack Moore, Layne Spence, who has one more year, Eugene Hannah and Charles Browder, the two capable reserves. Members of the team then balloted on a captain and Layne Spence was chosen. Prior to the dinner squad members had balloted on the player who was most valuable to the team during the past season, and Joe Treas McCollum was named. He, along with Junior House of the South Fulton squad, was presented a gold basketball by the Lions Club. House is co-captain of the Red Devils, McKinney being the other.

Britain And U. S. Prepare To Meet Axis Threat In Pacific Area

The United States and Great Britain indicated quietly and without fanfare Wednesday that they are preparing for any surprises which the axis may attempt to spring in the Far East.

An Anglo-American reply to the well-publicized tour of Japan's Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka to Rome and Berlin was given in a brief dispatch from Cavite, United States naval base in the Philippines. The dispatch reported the arrival at Cavite of Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, air marshal and commander-in-chief of Britain's forces in the Far East.

Brooke-Popham, accompanied by a staff of high British officers, went into conference with Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander-in-chief of United States naval forces in the Far East.

There was little amplification of the report but it seemed apparent that Brooke-Popham and Hart were not discussing the weather or the high cost of living in the Orient. Brooke-Popham's headquarters are at Singapore, British naval base which is the cornerstone of defense for the whole Southeast Pacific triangle of Malaya, the Dutch East Indies and the Philippines, and Australia.

Singapore is the nut which the Japanese must crack if ever their ambition of a hegemony of the South Pacific is to be achieved. It has been heavily reinforced in recent weeks by arrival of strong empire land forces and large quantities of Royal Air Force squadrons, some of them outfitted with American planes.

But Singapore is a naval base without a navy. Britain is unable to spare more than a light covering sea force because of the intensity of naval warfare in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

U. S. Fleet Present
The United States battle fleet, however, is concentrated in the Pacific. The main fleet is based on Hawaii but there has been a gradual bolstering of the Atlantic fleet, commanded by Hart. Additional cruisers, destroyers, naval patrol squadrons and protective army air corps fighter squadrons have been shifted out to Manila.

Food Profiteering May Bring U. S. Control Of Prices In Many Lines

Washington. --The Administration may act soon to "crack down" on food speculators suspected of seeking "undue" profits either from domestic needs or from those marked for lease-lend aid.

The question of food profiteering was understood to have figured prominently in official conferences now in progress looking to formulation of a board program to assure adequate supplies both for domestic and foreign aid requirements.

Price Controls Hinted
Indications were that the details of the general program would be outlined soon in a formal Government announcement.

Administration sources, meanwhile, reported that evidence uncovered in the food study to date might cause the Government to impose price controls unless the food industry itself took action to eliminate "undue" speculation and advances.

The Administration was reported perturbed over recent speculative activity in foodstuffs which Great Britain was expected to seek as lease-lend assistance.

The fundamentals of the food supply general program were discussed Tuesday at a White House conference attended by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Leon Henderson, member of the National Advisory Defense Commission.

A further exploration of the problem--both from the viewpoint of home as well as foreign needs--is arranged for Thursday at a closed meeting of the Agriculture Advisory Council. This council, organized at the outbreak of the war, includes representatives of the general public, labor, and of organized producers, processors and distributors of food products.

Food policies being formulated are expected to be concerned with the meat situation. The Agriculture Department has reported that total slaughter supplies of livestock, particularly hogs, were expected to be smaller during the next six months than a year ago. It said this reduction would be accompanied by price advances.

Supply Surveys Being Made
Surveys of food supplies and potential needs are now being made. Officials said they may show need for expansion in production of several types of food this summer. Included might be dairy products, some truck crops, potatoes, poultry products and possibly some specialty crops.

Agriculture Department officials said that despite British needs for many foods of which this country has no excessive supplies, the Administration had no intention of abandoning programs for distributing such products among needy families. Increased production, rather than decreased consumption at home, will be emphasized, they said.

Bulldogs Lose Practice Game

Coach Giles looked over his football prospects for 1941 yesterday afternoon in a practice game with Greenfield which the Bulldogs lost 12-6 at Greenfield. In the lineup yesterday were five members of last year's starting eleven, Tosh, Nelms, Davis, McKenzie and Willingham. Two other regulars from last year will be back in harness in the fall, "Hot" McClellan and Bobby Merryman, both backfield men, are not out for spring practice.

Layne Spence is being tried out at end position to fill the vacancy left by Buckingham's graduation. Snow and Willey, who played a great deal last year, will probably hold down the guard posts next fall. Coach Giles used three new men in the backfield yesterday, Sharpe, McAlister and Whitesell. All three of them should make good players with more experience. Big Sug Willingham showed his usual driving power yesterday when time and after time he plowed through the line for good gains. He made Fulton's line score yesterday.

Former Poles Insist On Paying U. S. Income Tax

Fairmont, Minn. --Tony Cieslewicz, a poor boy in Poland fifty years ago, and his wife, Anna, didn't make much money last year, "maybe $1,000, maybe not that much," but they insist on paying income taxes.

They called on County Treasurer Quimby A. Cory last week to see about it.

"Please, Cory," said Tony, "can't you fix it so we could pay just a little tax? You see we think this is a great country and that we ought to pay something."

"If they need more, maybe Anna and I can pay some more," Tony said as he made their contribution.

U. S. Is Busy With Contracts For First Billion Dollars Of Fund

Washington. --The United States had the first billion in cash on the barrelhead today for the great flood of supplies needed to carry out the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend program.

Under rush orders from President Roosevelt, four Government departments undertook the task of placing numerous contracts for new military materials of many descriptions, for agricultural commodities and not miscellaneous supplies.

Roosevelt disclosed at his press conference yesterday that he had authorized expenditure of $1,080,000,000--more than a seventh of the total lease-lend appropriation--and had turned the procurement job over to the Army, Navy,

Local Lodge Is Cooperating In Essay Contest

Liberal Prizes Are Offered For Prize Winning Essays

Fulton Lodge No. 1142 of the Order of Elks is taking an active part in a national essay contest which is sponsored by the national organization of Elks. High school students under 19 years of age are invited to write an essay of from 300 to 500 words on the subject "What Uncle Sam Means to Me," and substantial prizes are being offered by the national organization and the local lodge. The capital national prize for the first winning essay is $1,000, second prize is $500, third prize is $250. The local lodge is offering prizes of $10.00, $5.00 and $2.50 for the three prize winning essays submitted from the two high schools of Fulton. A number of entries have been submitted from the two schools and these will be judged at an early date and the local prizes awarded. After that the winning essay goes into state headquarters, where a preliminary judging will be made and finally the selected essays will be sent to national headquarters, where former Governor Cross of Connecticut will be the final judge to select the national champion.

Both high schools are being considered here and entries will be made from both. A number of essays have been turned in and judges will soon complete the task of picking the three prize winning essays.

This contest is being conducted by the Elks as a matter of aiding in national defense. It is recognized that high school boys and girls are the men and leaders of tomorrow, and the Elks organization believes that by creating interest and stirring up original thought among these youngsters some telling work may be done in creating a feeling of patriotism and love of country that will reflect itself in years to come.

There has been a great deal of interest among the high school students in this contest and teachers have taken an active part in helping make it a success. Some of the essays, it is said by those who have read them, are remarkably good, and there is a reasonable hope that some of the local entries might receive national recognition. The prizes offered by the local lodge are quite liberal, and there is no doubt that the contest will be a worth-while affair.

YOUNG ROOSEVELT REPORTS FOR DUTY

Boston -- It was "Ensign Roosevelt, reporting for duty, sir," at the Boston Navy Yard today as Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, went into active service aboard the destroyer Mayrant. He holds a naval reserve commission as a result of his service in the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps while at Harvard University.

The announcement, coming less than a week after the President signed the huge foreign aid measure, bespoke Roosevelt's determination to press for "action and more action," as his new slogan urges.

The supplies provided for by this first big slice of Lease-Lend funds would go to other countries besides Britain, the President revealed, but he was mum on details.

The $1,080,000,000 in new orders will supplement shipments already made or to be made from the existing supplies of the Army and Navy. The Lease-Lend law empowers the disposition of present stocks in the amount of $1,200,000,000.

Editorial

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS

Day by day, in all sections of the country, the sons of fathers and mothers are drafted into the United States Army. Many of them do not want to enter the Army. In many cases such action works hardships on many parents. A son may be heavily counted upon in the conduct of a business, or he may be badly needed for many reasons at home. This makes no difference whatever. The law is that certain boys must serve in the Army, and the law is being taken in good grace by the boys and by their parents. It is a national defense law, and a vast majority of American fathers and mothers are willing to make sacrifices to insure the perpetuation of the American Republic and the American way of life.

In thousands of business enterprises of the United States these days the hours of work and the rate of pay are fixed by a national law. This law, without doubt, is of great inconvenience to many people. It is being evaded to a certain extent, but inspectors say that in the main, all are cheerfully carrying out the mandates of the wage and hour law. In many cases employers are making payment of back wages to workers and doing it more or less cheerfully. But not many of them like it—be assured of that. But it happens to be the law and most Americans are law-obeying people.

The study in contrasts comes in looking at the strike map of the United States. Here, there and everywhere, strikes are compelling stoppage of work on important defense work. The latest and largest strike is now at the huge plants of the Ford Motor Company, where the C. I. O., American's most radical labor organization, has succeeded in stopping one hundred thousand men from work. The plant which is affected is working on many important war contracts and its products are sorely needed here and in England. In this plant, as in many others, the strike is not by a majority of workers. It is called by professional labor agitators and those men who wished to continue working were forced to join the minority which wished to strike. There has been a certain amount of disorder, which seems likely to grow with the passing of days. C. I. O. leaders boast that they have tied up the plant entirely, and probably it is no idle boast.

All this makes a person wonder why it is that certain laws can be passed and enforced, such as forcing boys into the Army and forcing plants to work only for certain hours and at certain specified wages, and no law seems to be possible which will obviate strikes. With the causes of the strike we need not be concerned. Perhaps these may be some cause for dissatisfaction, but these things could be worked out by arbitration while work was being carried on. It seems to this writer that a strike of workers on defense contracts now is fully as serious as a strike against joining the Army or a strike against paying defense taxes. These latter things would result in swift action by federal agencies, and it appears that swift federal action is the only defense against these crippling strikes.

If this country is to carry out its pledge to Great Britain for full and

SHIPS AND SABOTAGE

(From The Kansas City Times)

The hurried seizure of all Italian, German and immobilized Danish shipping in American territorial waters appears amply justified by information submitted to the Treasury on behalf of the Navy's Intelligence Service. That information points to systematic sabotage already begun in many of the vessels concerned, of a nature that would bring them directly under the terms of a forfeiture statute.

How serious the consequences of this action may be will depend entirely upon the view taken by the Axis Governments. (The Danish authorities, of course, are no longer free to speak for themselves). They can accept it under protest or make a major issue of it, leading even to a rupture of diplomatic relations, and undoubtedly they will do whichever suits their immediate purpose. The seizure in itself, nevertheless, can scarcely be considered an overt act.

These ships had taken refuge in American ports, being unable to get home through the British blockade. They were, therefore, subject to a law which makes deliberate interference with vessels under such circumstances a crime. It is self-evident that no nation can afford to have its harbors clogged with unseaworthy craft, and must protect itself against that eventuality. As a matter of fact, the law provides that title to property thus sabotaged may be forfeited. But there is as yet no indication that the American Government expects to do more than intern the ships which have been taken over.

If any party in this transaction has cause for complaint, indeed, it would seem to be ourselves. We are not at war with any of the countries involved and we have been furnishing protection for their ships. Yet here is evidence that certainly the Italian Government, if not the German, has instructed its citizens to abuse our hospitality and commit illegal acts.

The Federal authorities apparently have moved well within their rights. It is hard to see how they could have done anything else, in view of the provocation. The next move is up to Italy—and Germany.

complete aid, if we are to rearm our own nation and make it strong enough to meet any threat from abroad—in short, if this Republic is to continue—we must find some way to stop these strikes. There is no desire to take away any of labor's rights, but the rights of labor and the rights of every American citizen must give way to national emergencies in times like these. It is better to give up some rights for the time being than to lose all rights for all time.

Yes, swift action is needed, action that will adequately meet the situation.

JOHN DEERE

Simplicity
saves time and money
for me—

It's a three-way saving you make with a John Deere Two-Cylinder Tractor. Because there are only two cylinders, you burn the low-cost fuels successfully during the entire life of the tractor.

Again because of two-cylinder design, a John Deere Tractor is totally free of hundreds of parts necessary in other tractors. Remaining parts are heavier, sturdier—they last longer.

Still again because of the simplicity of two-cylinder design, maintenance is easier, simpler, less expensive.

Check all the advantages of owning a John Deere Tractor. It'll pay you in economy, in ease of handling, in greater profits.

Berea, Ky. — Reed Cromer, 20, Berea College student from London, Ky., fell from the top of a four-story dormitory stair well and landed with a heavy thud on the marble floor more than fifty feet below.

When he got up and started to walk away fellow students, fearing he had been injured seriously and was too dazed to realize it, rushed him to the college hospital.

Physicians X-rayed and examined him carefully, then reported his only injury was a minor bruise on the left hip. Between classes today Cromer said his jaw was a "little sore" but otherwise he felt fine.
