The project is supposed to be completed by August 1, but the job may be finished before that time, it is said.

During the summer it will be necessary to sprinkle and wash the streets of the city. Especially in the downtown district will the dust be bothersome, and the old truck and sprinkler are practically useless.

A committee of the Young Men's Business Club recently conferred with railroad officials to secure their co-operation in oiling the railroad right-of-ways through the city.

L. KASNOW CELEBRATES 20TH YEAR IN BUSINESS

L. Kasnow, one of Fulton's most active citizens, is celebrating his 20th anniversary in business in Fulton. During the past two decades he has operated a store in the same location. He came here right after the World War. Having served overseas, he returned to America and after looking around for a place to go into business, chose Fulton.

Mr. Kasnow is a member of the American Legion, Young Men's Business Club, Elks Club, Lions Club, Masonic Lodge, Chamber of Commerce, and what-have-you. You see, if there is anything to join, he doesn't know how to say "no." He and his brother, Joe, are well known among both city and rural people of this locality, and their joviality is even wider known—they never meet a stranger, and delight in a good joke or prank.

Poultry Raising In This Section Is Becoming Big Cash Income Source

POULTRY RAISING is making steady progress in this section and is fast becoming one of the principal sources of income in many rural homes. A survey of the territory made recently by the Editor of The News, your farm and home paper, showed that interest is definitely keener in improved methods of poultry raising and careful selection of pure-bred stock. As this interest increases, will all have a tendency to improve the breeds and increase the profits from poultry raising.

This week attention is called to the work being done by Mrs. J. T. Crawford of Pryorsburg, year to April 1 this year, she sold $211 worth of eggs from 128 pullets raised. From September 1 last visited she had 619 baby chicks and 602 broilers. Both Mr. and Mrs. Crawford are enthusiastic poultry raisers, and they are constantly alert to newest methods of production.

NEWSPAPER PRIZES

Announcement of the Pulitzer awards for distinguished journalism and other literary activities during 1935 were made a few days ago by the trustees of Columbia University, on recommendation of a special advisory board composed of leading newspapermen.

The $500 gold medal for "the most distinguished and meritorious public service rendered by an American newspaper during the year" was won by the Daily News of Miami, Fla., for its campaign against irregularities in the city government. This led to a movement for recall of the city council. For an "exposure of municipal graft" the Republican-American of Waterbury, Conn., received honorable mention.

Thomas L. Stokes, a Scripps-Howard writer, was given $1,000 for the most distinguished example of a reporter's work, based on his articles on intimidation of voters in the Kentucky Democratic primary campaign for United States senator.

Louis P. Lochner of the Associated Press was awarded $500 for his dispatches from Berlin as a foreign correspondent, while R. G. Calvert of the Portland - Oregonian won the $500 prize for distinguished editorial writing. Charles Werner of the Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City, received $500 for the best cartoon of 1935.

These annual awards, established by the late Joseph Pulitzer of the New York World, are highly prized by journalists and newspapers. Other Pulitzer awards are made for letters, art and music.

WILL ROGERS STAMP

In recognition of the humanitarian work of the late Will Rogers in behalf of the people of Nicaragua after the great earthquake of 1931, that republic has issued a series of air mail memorial stamps in his honor.

The series consists of five stamps, from one to five centavos, each of a different design, but each bearing the inscription "Nicaragua to Will Rogers, Homage." A reproduction of the stamps appeared in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor.

On March 31, 1931, an earthquake which lasted only six seconds, followed by fire and numerous explosions, virtually destroyed Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, killed 1,000 persons, injured several thousand others and made 25,000 homeless.

Will Rogers immediately flew to Managua, personally donated $5,000 and cabled appeals for aid back to the United States, to supplement that furnished by our government and the Red Cross. Nicaragua's gratitude for his generous action is expressed in the new stamp issue.

This is only one instance of Will Rogers' philanthropy. He raised $40,000 at one performance for the Florida hurricane sufferers in 1926, and other large sums for flood and drought relief at various times. He was not only a great humorist, but a great humanitarian as well.

GEHRIG TAKES A REST

After taking part in every regular game played by the New York Yankees since May 30, 1935, Lou Gehrig voluntarily went on the bench temporarily a few days ago because of a serious batting slump.

JUST HUMANS

By GENE CARR

"There, Ya Dared Me T'push Ya Face In. Whatcha Gonna Do?"
"What Do Ya Want Me T'do?"

He had played in 2,130 consecutive games, a world record.

Gehrig has been one of the heaviest batters in the game during his long career, his percentage being .300 or more for 12 consecutive years. He batted .340 or more in eight seasons, his best average being .379 in 1930. Last year he dropped to .295, after batting .351 in 1932, and .354 in 1936.

Among the world records set by Gehrig are these: Most home runs with bases full, 23; most double plays by a first baseman, 157; most home runs in a single game, 4 (in 1932); most years with 100 or more runs, 13.

He was selected as the most valuable player in the American League in 1927 and 1936.

Although not suffering from injuries or illness, the "iron man" has not been able to get going this season. In the eight games in which he played before going on the bench, he made only four hits and batted in only one run. In the last game he came to bat four times with men on base and failed to get a hit. So he decided to take a rest.

Few believe Gehrig is through. He is only 35, and is still the highest salaried player in baseball. He thinks he will make a comeback when hot weather arrives, and his many admirers hope to see him do it.

50,000 AIRPLANES

Captain Eddie Rickenbaker, ranking American ace in the World War, suggests, in a recent article in Collier's, the construction of 50,000 airplanes as one of the solutions of this country's defense problem.

He does not suggest military planes, but good, fast "work horses of the air," convertible to some military use. The building of them would guarantee the maintenance of the industry's factories; the flying of them would mean training for thousands of pilots and mechanics, and a new era in transportation.

"In the long run," he continues, "such a realistic prospect of air defense, domestic and transoceanic, should be, of course, backed up by the conservation of those supplies vitally needed for manufacturing airplanes. We are on the right track in embargoing scrap metal, in building up supplies of rubber, tin, nickel and the other alloys of steel.

"We should certainly not monkey with the tariff, so as to let in foreign copper and other metals, even for reciprocal advantages which might have the tendency of shutting down small mines that would be of tremendous value in are concerned, but that the general situation is still unsatisfactory because the volume of business being done remains at a comparatively low level.

"Our greatest need now," Col. Ayres said, "is more production and especially more of the sort of production that goes into new plants, more modern equipment, expansions, additions, improvements and betterments.

"Such undertakings are financed by the sale of corporate securities, and such sales are made when executives have confidence in the prospects for profits, and when investors share that confidence."

International tensions abroad and political uncertainties at home are mentioned as major causes of hesitancy on the part of corporation executives to proceed with new financing, so greatly need to promote recovery.

ORIGIN OF NUMERALS

Primitive man did not deal in large figures, so he was able to represent numbers sufficiently for his purpose by his fingers, by notches cut on a stick, or by a series of short lines.

As larger numbers of things came to be counted, symbols to represent more than one object were gradually invented. But our present system of so-called Arabic numerals was not perfected until a few centuries ago.

Symbols corresponding to our figures 1, 4, and 6 have been found on inscriptions dating from the third century B. C. in India. The 2, 7 and 9 appeared about a century later, and the 3, 5 and 8 still later. The forms of the figures have undergone much change from time to time.

The system was adopted by the Arabs, who invented and added the zero, or cipher, and gave the figures a "place value"—units, tens, hundreds, and so on—about the tenth century A. D. The Arabs introduced the system into Europe two or three centuries later.

The decimal point was a still later development, it having been invented and introduced by a mathematician named Christopher Clavius in 1593.

The origin of the Roman numeral characters, I, V, X, etc., is uncertain, and various theories have been advanced concerning them.

And Then the B'ar had to Hibernate

By IRVIN S. COBB

POMPEY and Ike were draped over the fence behind the cabin swapping yarns.

"Has I ever told you, Ike," said Pompey, "about one time I got chased by a big grizzly b'ar?"

"No," said Ike, "how wuz 'at?"

"Well," said Pompey, taking a deep breath, "it was lak this: One day I wuz strollin' along up a mountain side and there wuz a deep hole between some rocks and I went an' I stuck a stick in 'at hole and whut come 'ar'in' and tearin' out but a big black b'ar. Wid that I started runnin' down that mountain side an' that big black b'ar he wasn't two feet behind me. Well, I kep' runnin' an' runnin' and the b'ar he kep' runnin', too. And pretty soon he got so close I could feel his hot breath on my laigs. And it was a terrible hot day and the sweat was a' purin' off me in rivers but I couldn't to wipe it off—I had to jes' keep a'runnin' an' a'runnin' wid the sweat b'ar almost a' techin' my heels. Well, I kep' goin' cross lots o' ant-fur-lection but I couldn't gain none on the b'ar—he was jes' ez nigh ez ever an' a little nigher. But jes' then I had a piece o' luck. I come to a river an' the river wuz all froze over. So I snatched a pair of skates out of my pocket, that I happened to have along an' I clapped 'em onto my feet an' I skated off across the river an' the b'ar he started across too, but the ice was too thin fur him an' the first thing he knowed he fell in kerplunko an' woz d'owned—an' I wuz saved. Wasn't that a narrer 'scape?"

Ike batted an eye.

"You 'spect me to believe that yarn?" he asked scornfully.

"Course I 'spect you to believe it!"

"Hur!" returned Ike. "That yarn is a big lie an' I knows it!"

"How come you say that?"

"Well," said Ike. "You sez fust off, 'twas a powerful hot day, ain't you?"

"Yes," admitted Pompey. "Twuz terrible hot weather when that bear took out after me."

"An then you sez," continued Ike, "that w'en you come to this river 'twuz all froze over an' you skated across. How come this yere river froze over in such terrible hot weather? Ain't that a doggone lie?"

Pompey looked staggered—but only for a moment. He recovered.

"Oh, say, Ike," he said gently, "I reckon I forgot to tell you that this yere b'ar he kep' a chasin' an' a chasin' me till he chase me from July way up into December!"

CAPITOL COMMENTS

The campaign swing is on and the politicians are playing their tunes for it is late May and the finish is a short 10 weeks off. The candidates were busy last week and the happenings pretend much.

W. E. Porter "Sweepstakes instead of taxes" candidate traveled to New York in an effort to help the labor mediators find a solution to the mining strike that was crippling Kentucky.

Governor A. B. Chandler took courageous action in ordering troops to Harlan to give protection to those who wanted to return to work but were prevented by labor agitators.

John Y. Brown and Judge Cooper spoke to the League of Women voters and candidates for various offices were bargaining the Secretary of State's office with filing declarations.

The County debt has developed into a serious situation and we offer here a happy solution.

More than 90 percent of the counties in the State of Kentucky have debts that are pressing them. Twenty-nine of those counties have defaulted and more will have to when their bonds fall due.

In Florida a 3 per cent tax is assessed by the State on pari mutual betting. This tax is divided among the counties and each county in the State of Florida received more than $8,000,000 last year. This tax should be assessed in Kentucky and in a few years most of the counties in the State would be out of debt.

Candidates should be questioned on their stand in this matter and the voters act accordingly.

It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bile Beans for Indigestion to make the system stomach food business. Release distress. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, May 21, 1939.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "For the word is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." (Hebr. 4:12.)

LOUISVILLE BUSINESS MEN COMING HERE

FOR generations, business men of Louisville and business men of Western Kentucky and West Tennessee have been the closest of friends.

They have worked together to serve not only the interests of their own sections, but also the economic progress of the State and the entire South.

They have enjoyed unusually friendly mutual trade relations.

Fostering territorial development and reciprocal trade the Louisville Board of Trade periodically makes Good Will Tours into neighboring areas.

Its purpose is to discuss mutual problems, to appraise growth and progress achieved and to see local shrines and points of interest.

It feels that no sections hold out greater interest for Louisville business men than Western Kentucky and West Tennessee and that few areas possess a potentially brighter economic future.

Therefore the Louisville Board of Trade is pleased to announce that it has selected Western Kentucky for its Spring Good Will Tour of 1939 and that it will spend one evening in West Tennessee. Its special train arrives in—

RAY GRAHAM TO BUILD "FROZEN FOOD" BUILDING

Ray Graham, who has found that the citizens of this vicinity are deeply interested in the installation of Frozen Food Lockers here, has purchased the Nolen lot opposite the Fulton theatre in Main-st., and expects to start construction work on a building within the next few days.

Already many contracts have been signed by those wishing to take advantage of the frozen food locker system, which is said to save householders many times the cost of the service over a period of a year. Mr. Graham is having numerous inquiries daily, and applications for lockers are being made.

COUNTY AGENT

Rye Grass as a Cover Crop

Because no payment will be made by the AAA for phosphate used in connection with wheat, rye, barley-oats seeded in the fall of 1939 and because many farmers will have to apply phosphate in the fall, in order to earn their soil building allowance, County Agents are urging the use of Italian Rye grass instead of the small grain crops. The application of AAA phosphate to Italian rye grass is an approved practice. Rye grass seems to fill the requirements. The seed cost is low, it is dependable. It is an excellent combination crop to either crimson clover or vetch and provides a quantity of high quality pasture. Some farmers are combining the seed as a cash crop. I have seen Italian rye grass growing in alfalfa, in crimson clover and wheat alone. It was interesting to see a corn field in which Italian rye grass was sown last September and to note the perfect stand, as it had been grazed all winter by sheep. Italian rye grass came through the dry fall of 1939 with a better stand than any other grass seeding.

times called the striped bug or melon bug, is found throughout the State of Kentucky. It is, as the name implies, a striped hard-shelled insect. Its general color is yellow with three black stripes down its back. It is about one quarter of an inch in length. The winter is passed in the adult stage and the beetle is among the first insects in spring to start feeding on green plants in the field. As soon as their favorite food plants, such as grass, beans and melons and cucumber appear above the ground they make their attack on them. They meet the young plant sometimes when they first appear through the soil. The insects feed upon the plant only at night and when the sun appears they go underneath the surface of the soil well underground for the day. During the day you may inspect the plants and see that they are badly eaten but fail to find any insect, but late in the afternoon or early in the morning they are usually found. To control the pests use a well-mixed dust made of one part of calcium arsenate to eight parts of lime and three parts of sulphur. The dust can be applied by any means that will scatter the dust, either by a duster or by tying it in a cloth and shaking the cloth bag over the plant. Since the beetle often attacks before it comes through the ground the first application should be made on top of the ground before the plant can be seen. Additional applications should be made at three or four days intervals until the plants are passed the tender stage. Tobacco dust or snuff is a good repellent.

Plant Lice

Due to the cool damp weather condition that we are having, which causes slow growth in plants, considerable damage is being done to garden vegetables and flower leaves and tender stems. They can easily be seen and their presence is indicated by stunted plants or curled leaves. These insects are usually controlled by the use of "Black Leaf 40" (Nicotine Sulphate) added according to directions on the bottle, to clear water to which soap has been added. This soap causes the water to spread over the leaf and also over the insect. Arsenate of lead or any other stomach poison will not affect this insect. It must be controlled by corroding its body or paralyzing it with gas.

KENTUCKY GIRLS STUDY FARMING

Crops and soils, poultry, animal husbandry and entomology are among subjects three young women are studying at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Instead of taking home economics or some other presumably "feminine" line of study, these girls are majoring in agriculture.

Miss Billie Jackson, Lexington, is in her second year of agriculture, and expects to raise horses on her own farm when she is graduated. Elizabeth McDowell, Cynthiana, is also a sophomore, interested in general farming. Marjorie Jones, Winchester, is a freshman and expects to help Dad on the farm along about 1943.

So far there are no men studying home economics at the University of Kentucky, though at a recent baby chick show and exhibit of foods made with egg products, two men entered first-class pies.

FARMERS SET UP GOALS

A committee of Anderson county farmers studying the soils and crops needs of the county set goals to include winter cover crops for all cultivated land, the use of more limestone and phosphate, the growing of more alfalfa, hybrid corn, Italian rye grass and other hay and grass crops, the establishment of a long-time erosion control program, and the earning this year of 95 percent of the soil-building payments in the agricultural conservation program.

Season Tobacco Market News Report

Average prices were lower this season than last season for most grades of fire-cured tobacco sold on the Western District markets, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Lugs and low quality leaf grades showed the largest percentage of decrease. A few grades were higher, with the increases occurring principally in the fine to fair quality dark heavy leaf and good quality dark thin leaf. Brown-colored leaf grades were in fairly good demand throughout the season, although these grades were slightly lower than last season. Auction floor gross sales averaged $6.20 per hundred (including Association receipts) as compared with $7.85 last season, a decrease of 21 per cent.

The crop this season from a quality standpoint was one of the poorest on record. About half of the crop consisted of low quality grades and nondescript. This was due principally to wildfire, the result of a wet growing season. The sales contained a smaller percentage of heavy leaf and a larger percentage of thin leaf as compared with last year. Only 17% of heavy leaf was sold, whereas last year 39% was sold; thin leaf composed 49% this year and 25% last year.

Gross auction floor sales and Association receipts amounted to 17,397,976 pounds as compared with 19,849,844 pounds sold last season. Deliveries to the Western Dark Fired Tobacco Growers Association amounted to 14% of the sales. The greater portion of the deliveries consisted of the lower quality grades and in addition to auction sales, several million pounds were sold privately. However, it is estimated that these sales were relatively smaller in volume than for past years.

Due to the lack of favorable handling weather the markets were delayed in opening this season. Murray and Paducah opened on January 16 and Mayfield on January 17. The first sale at Paris was held on January 28. Mayfield, Murray, and Paducah closed for the season on May 5 and Paris on May 6.

CARLISLE COUNTY WOOL GROWERS MARKETING POOL TO RECEIVE WOOL, MAY 26

The Carlisle county wool marketing pool will receive wool at Rowland's Garage, in Bardwell on Friday, May 26, for the sale on Saturday, May 27. This gives farmers only one day to deliver their wool. Any farmer having wool that he would like to pool for sale on the 27 should carry it to Bardwell on Friday, May 26.

Songs and Skiers Mix in Novel Alpine Spectacle Of "Broadway Serenade"

Taking a "ski slide," even an especially built one, requires no small amount of skill. Taking the slide and singing a number at the same time is something else again, but Jeanette MacDonald accomplishes this feat during the "Flyin' High" number of her new starring picture, "Broadway Serenade," coming to the Fulton Theatre for an engagement of 3 days, starting Sunday.

One of the most elaborate numbers in the production, the scene depicts an imaginary ski slide. Tiny wooden figures in typical skiing positions flash down the mountain-side in the background. A ski-lift, done with an eye toward the picturesque in its design and with a roof piled high with glittering snow traverses slowly across the stage.

The number is introduced by a large chorus of yodelers. The melody is finally taken up by the voice of Jeanette MacDonald who whisks into the scene via the slide mentioned previously.

After the singing star's entrance a group of electric motors, hidden behind the scenes, roll the slide away. In its place appears a picturesque Alpine village with the skiers still visible in the background. It is against this setting that the star displays her dancing as well as her singing ability in a spirited soft-shoe number. Variety is given to the production as a whole by a corps of jugglers who do amazing stunts with bright colored bottles.

"Flyin' High" is just one of the numerous stage offerings presented during the course of the film which finds Miss MacDonald in the role of a singer, suddenly elevated to musical sequences are also included.

"Broadway Serenade" boasts an outstanding cast in support of its star. Lew Ayres portrays the male lead while others include Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter, Al Shean, Virginia Grey, Rita Johnson, William Gargan and Franklin Pangborn. The film was produced by Robert Z. Leonard.

One of the most important "E's" in the promotion of a good community safety program is "enforcement."

Most of the driving believes in education and engineering as important steps in the promotion of a good community program and feels that enforcement is necessary, but that we ought to "go easy." Why go easy? If we have laws on our statute books which call for certain speed limits, and if any city council or village board establishes rules and regulations as law, why not enforce them? If we have a street with a speed limit of 25 miles an hour, then let's have the courage to enforce it at 25 and not 30 or 35. If we want to travel 35, then let's step up the speed limit to 35, if it is safe enough to do so.

Enforcement requires backbone on the part of the enforcement officers and even more backbone on the part of the courts.

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"DIES IRAE"
(Day of Wrath)

"That day of wrath, that dreadful day

When heaven and earth shall pass away,

Both David and the Sibyl say.

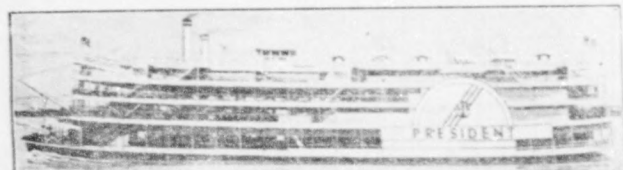

What terror then shall us befall,

When lo, the Judge's steps appall,

About to sift the deeds of all."

It is generally believed that this hymn was composed by Thomas of Celano, a Franciscan of the 13th century. There are 254 English translations of this incomparable poem. Hymnologists of every creed testify to its unapproachable glory. It is freely acknowledged that no adequate translation has yet appeared.

A TENT PHOTOGRAPHER

Even Fidelity had some connections with the world in general. The pack peddler and clock tinkers and circuit riders found us out and brought us news of what was going on; the weekly newspapers did their share to keep us citizens of the world. Three times a week the mail carrier brought his small pack of papers and letters and took away a few letters to people who had relatives or friends in Fidelity. The candidates also came, telling how fine we were and how our little neighborhood contained a large part of the salt of the earth. But few of these emissaries from the Outside World equaled in importance the traveling photographer who brought his tent and set it up in a broom sedge field near the little village. Fidelity was not rich and probably never will be. We had no ancestral portraits, however great our forebears may have been. Few homes had many photographs. When the photographer came, nearly all people believed that they needed pictures of themselves and their loved ones. To the tent in the field flocked people of all sorts and kinds. Father gathered up his flock and had a family group made and then some individual tints of each of the children. Other fathers did the same, until the family albums fairly bulged with new pictures. Some of the pictures were full length, some were the ordinary busts, but all were of the painful kind that only a time exposure could make.

The photographer was a good advertiser for his time. Satisfied customers were his best form of keeping the public coming to his tent. We children were allowed to go into the developing rooms, where we saw our own pictures going through the process of photography. I can still remember how black we looked, especially my own picture, for I was very fair of face and cotton top. We talked in subdued whispers about the miracle going on before us, probably afraid that the photographer was a kind of wizard or something.

At other seasons of the year the picture man had his studio in the county seat, where he finally stayed all the time and built up a large business. When I was all of fourteen, I went into his shop alone and sat for my picture. I can see on that same picture today a small portion of the tripod with which he held my head still for the time exposure, a thing for which I am properly thankful, as it helps to establish my reputation for truthfulness. Many people have questioned my saying that our heads were supported by a contraption somewhat like the head rest in a dentist's chair.

Whenever you get your next picture taken, in a modern studio, don't forget that others of us have had greater thrills than you can ever feel again, thrills made possible by the photographer's tent in a broom sedge field near old Fidelity.

UNCLE JIM SAYS

"Go to grass" or grow to grass; it doesn't make much difference. "Greenbacks from green pastures" is a good slogan for livestock producers.

First class pasture usually produces meat and milk more cheaply than any other feed.

Cream keeps better during hot weather if it is separated so as to contain not less than 40 percent fat.

Overproduction is one of the largest causes of soil destruction. It destroys soil through unused harvests, and through needles exposure to erosion. The AAA emphasizes means for saving it.

A total of 122,629 farms in Tennessee reported improvements in practices in 1933, as a result of Agricultural Extension Work. In the same period changes were made in 61,064 farm homes as a result of home demonstration work.

Approximately 120,000 Tennessee farmers cooperating in the AAA Agricultural Conservation program, administered by the Extension Service, have received around $50,000,000 in benefit and crop adjustment payments since 1933.

The UNIVERSITY of LOUISVILLE

PERSONNEL WORK AS A VOCATION

By Dr. Hilda Threlkeld
Dean of Women

There is evidence today that there is increasing opportunity for employment in fields that minister to human welfare. One of these is personnel work. Personnel workers are trained in the art of working with human beings, particularly in industry and education. Their aim is to know the individual, his abilities and his interest, and to help him make the best possible adjustment to work and to life.

Personnel workers are engaged to bridge the gap between employers and employees. Their departments are responsible for investigating applicants for jobs, for hiring and for firing. Good personnel workers see that safe and healthy working conditions are maintained. They conduct recreational projects, and they carry on educational programs designed to make the worker more fit for the job.

In industry, personnel workers need to know wage rates, employment systems, factory and store organization, working conditions, health and safety requirements, and labor legislation. They should have taken thorough college courses in psychology, economics, sociology, politics, statistics, and hygiene.

Federal and private employment agencies are steadily adding trained personnel workers to their staffs. There is also a demand for personnel workers by social service agencies.

In education, they are employed by many junior and senior high schools, trade schools, and colleges. Such counselors endeavor to know each student as a person, and to rescue him from being lost in classes of hundreds. They help students to choose their courses and to make vocational plans in line with the student's ability and interest. They furnish him with information about many vocations and train him in the proper method of choosing a vocation for himself. They also aid the student with his social, emotional, and personal problems whenever possible.

Education for this work requires training in teaching, in addition to advanced courses in psychology, testing, economics, labor problems, employment conditions, sociology, and the actual techniques of counseling.

Salaries may range from approximately $1,200 to $5,000 a year and even more. Opportunities for placement are steadily growing, and the work affords satisfaction in helping to make life happier and more successful for other human beings.

FIDELIS CLASS MEETING

The Fidelis Class of the First Baptist Sunday School held their regular monthly meeting Monday night at the home of Miss Myra Secaree on Pearl-st. Mrs. Norman Frey and Mrs. Ardelle Sams were co-hostesses. Fifteen members and one visitor, Mrs. Boyce Dumas of Cottage Grove, Tenn., were present.

Mrs. James Warren presided over the meeting in the absence of the chairman, Miss Agatha Gayle. The monthly report was given by the secretary, Mrs. Charles Walker.

During the social hour contests and games were in charge of Miss Vera Wilkerson. Winners of the contests were Mrs. Dumas, Mrs. Frey and Miss Secaree.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

GENERAL MEETING OF WOMAN'S CLUB

The Junior Music Club was host to the monthly open meeting of the Woman's Club, which was held Friday afternoon, May 12, in the club rooms. The guests were greeted by the sponsor of the Junior Music Club, Miss Mary Swan Bushart.

Delightful refreshments were served by members of this club, assisted by Mrs. R. S. Williams, from a beautiful lace-draped table, centered by a huge cut-glass punch bowl, which was flanked by white tapers in crystal holders. Miss Anna Frances Graham presided at the register. Misses Donna Jean DeMyer and Betty Sue Houston served as pages.

Mrs. J. E. Fall, Jr., president, welcomed several new members and presided over the business session. Reports were made by the treasurer and librarian.

An announcement of the annual flower show, sponsored by the Garden Department, was made. This show, which is always of interest to flower lovers of surrounding towns as well as local people, will be held Friday, May 19. It is anticipated that this will be the most beautiful exhibition the department has ever sponsored.

Mrs. Fall gave a full and interesting report on the convention held in Paducah last month.

Mrs. J. E. Fall, Sr., was then presented and she introduced Mrs. J. E. Warren of Mayfield. Mrs. Warren is State Director of the National Consumer's Tax Commission and in her usual charming and gracious manner spoke briefly on "Hidden Taxes." Club members always feel themselves indeed fortunate to have Mrs. Warren with them.

The meeting was then turned over to Miss Mary Swann Bushart, who announced a program which was skillfully rendered by members of the Junior Music Club.

BUNCO CLUB

Mrs. J. G. Mullins was hostess to the Bunco club last Thursday afternoon at her home on Fourth-st. Twelve members were present.

After the bunco games Mrs. A. McGee was given a bath mat as first prize. Mrs. Mullens won a bath towel for "bunco" prize and Mrs. Mary Sue Norris received a linen handkerchief as "booby."

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.
