What the Catbird Knew

By Clara A. Woodrow

There was once a catbird with a beautiful voice. He was very fond of himself and thought he was the greatest creature in this world. He used to sing all day long, and his voice was so sweet that the birds all gathered around him and listened to his song.

One day, a farmer was walking in his field and heard the catbird singing. He stopped to listen and was so impressed by the beautiful music that he decided to give the catbird a home.

The farmer built a little house for the catbird and filled it with all sorts of delicious foods. The catbird was overjoyed and sang even more sweetly than ever before.

But one day, a group of robins came to visit the farmer. They listened to the catbird's song and were shocked to hear how his voice had changed. They told the farmer that the catbird was not as good as he thought he was, and that he should be ashamed of himself.

The catbird was devastated. He had never thought that anyone could criticize his singing. He tried to explain himself, but the robins were not interested in hearing his side of the story.

From that day on, the catbird never sang again. He was too ashamed of himself to show his face in public. And the singing birds had taught him a valuable lesson about pride and humility.

Money is easily borrowed but hard to pay back. Over a term of years the interest equals the principal. This means that in many cases the improvement will cost twice what it would have cost if the community had imposed taxes and spent the money wisely.

BE CERTAIN AND BE SAFE.

Summer finds more motorists on the highways than any other season of the year. As a result, there is an increased need for attention on the part of the motorists to road safety. Summer brings more motorists on the roads, and this increased traffic creates a greater danger of accidents.

The major responsibility for safety at crossings, however, rests on the shoulders of the motorists. The Illinois Central System, in cooperation with the local police and schools, is making a concerted effort to improve road safety. The slogan "The Rats Around My Place" is used to encourage the motorists to be cautious and watch out for rats. The rats are a metaphor for the hazards on the road, and the slogan is designed to make motorists more aware of the need for caution.

Farmers are also encouraged to participate in the safety campaign. The association offers special cash prizes to farmers who participate, and the judges determine which farmers are the most successful in the campaign. The winners are given ribbons on the winners. All of the winners show that there is a need for improved safety in the rural areas.

The Illinois Central System is sensitive to its share of responsibility for safety on the roads. The railroad is working closely with the local authorities to improve road safety and to encourage motorists to be cautious and to avoid accidents.

Human life and happiness are too precious to be destroyed by carelessness at crossings. Humanly, right and self-interest unite in opposition to such fatal gambling. Be certain and be safe!

President, Illinois Central System.

The business of the home

The home in the small community is an important business undertaking. It is capable of serving as much of the needs that are large and crowded cities must be served outside the home.

An ample and inexpensive electric power supply is an increasingly important aid in household work. Electric power contributes to the economic independence of the home in the small community to an extent that is not possible in the larger cities.

This is one of the results of the widespread electric power supply provided by the company through its network of transmission lines.
