The Bulldogs were defeated 20-12 by the Mayfield Cardinals in the last game of the present season, played here last Friday afternoon. In the third quarter White threw a long pass to Burton who scored a touchdown. In the final quarter White again passed to Burton and another touchdown was scored by Burton after a 69 yard run.

Rev. Woodrow Fuller Speaks On Flying

"Higher Altitudes" was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. Woodrow Fuller in the vesper services Sunday at the First Baptist church. Charles Miller, flying instructor here, and fifteen of his students were special guests.

Using Bible quotations, Rev. Fuller compared the study of flying with many problems of life. The first problem of flying is to overcome the fear of flying, to have confidence in the instructor and the plane. A student must have expert instruction; must have a destination, fly a straight course and obey all flying rules. He also pointed out that the more one flies the more proficient he becomes.

Rev. Fuller spoke of his own experience in flying, telling of the pleasure, recreation and of the friendships he had gained from this experience.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

When the third quarter earnings reports of major industrial corporations first began appearing it looked as if the improvement in business had measured up to the rather optimistic estimates made in the spring by most economists. Now that all the reports are out, it is evident that the improvement even exceeded the hopes of the most sanguine.

The National City Bank of New York has made a survey of the earnings of 320 important industrial concerns engaged in every field of activity. These companies had third quarter net profits of $201,000,000—almost double the $104,000,000 made in the same period last year. And their income for the first nine months, totaling $589,000,000, was more than 98 per cent better than the $296,000,000 earned as net in the first three quarters of 1938. Only two industrial groups (coal mining and auto makers other than General Motors) showed deficits for the first nine months this year, where nine groups reported losses last year. In some cases, improvement was almost startling. Where, for instance, the auto equipment people had a deficit of $3,500,000 for the first nine months of last year, they made a net of $13,258,000 this year. And U. S. Steel turned a $12,150,000 deficit into a $12,391,000 profit.

There was naturally wide variations in the degree of improvement experienced by the various industries reporting. The capital goods industries were generally among the leaders. Auto, aircraft, paper, textiles and chemicals were also well to the top. Gains made by food concerns were smaller, and oil company profits were actually less than in the 1938 period. The utilities, including the railroads, power and communication companies, improved, but more modestly by comparison with manufacturing industry at large.

Taking the 320 companies as a whole, net profits were at the annual rate of return of 7.5 per cent of net worth. Nineteen-thirty-eight return was at the rate of 3.7 per cent.

And this isn't all there is to the encouraging story today's business figures are telling. The third quarter improvement was practically unaffected by war buying—few concerns were able to fulfill war orders before the end of September, when the quarter closed. So the universally held outlook is that the final quarter will materially exceed the third, in production, profits, employment gains and everything else. In October, for instance, the Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production hit 120—and in booming 1929 its average was only 123. This doesn't mean that profits are comparably that close to the '29 peak—they are far from it, due largely to lower prices and higher wages and taxes. But they are going up rapidly, and the experts seem to think they won't be checked unless widespread, unlooked for labor disputes should occur.

Neutral military authorities are extremely skeptical of the persistent rumors to the effect that the big German push against the Allies will be through Belgium, Holland or Switzerland. Their doubts are based on tactical, not moral reasons. A large part of Holland, for instance, can be flooded (a step which has already been taken on a limited scale) to a depth of about five or six feet, which would make the going impossible for either mechanized equipment or sizable boats. The Swiss have their natural defense of great mountains which have been fortified on a big scale—and the Swiss alpine troops are supposed to be unequalled. And all three countries are in far better shape to resist invasion now than they were in 1914. A German attack against them, say the experts, would inevitably result in terrific losses—and make the exhausted army that finally came through, an easy prey for fresh, waiting French and English.

Far more likely, the experts continue, is the supposition that Hitler plans to make his big push, if and when he does, above the clouds and beneath the waves. So far, the gigantic German air force has hardly showed a wing. Those in the know say that German naval establishments are able to turn out two or three U-boats monthly. If the Germans have any military supremacy over the Allies, it is in these two fields—and it is certainly reasonable to expect that the submarine and the bombing plane, rather than artillery and infantry, will carry German hopes. Recent reports from abroad lend credence to this theory. They say most of the U-boats have been called home, and the planes grounded. Deduction is that ships and planes are being refitted and reconditioned for a possible big drive against Allied shipping and Allied ports, cities and manufacturing centers.

In the meantime, Allied war buying has started here, with planes most in demand, as everyone expected. The plane makers are working 24 hours a day, are planning ambitious expansion projects. And they are getting highly profitable prices for what they turn out. The American planes for the most part seem to compare well with what Europe can produce—with the exception of certain "secret" ships manufactured in small quantity by both sides of which fabulous performance tales are told.

FARM INCOME

It appears to me that the farmer is on the road to recovery. There seems little doubt that cash farm income will run between eight and eight and a half billion dollars in 1939. Farm income for this year probably will be larger by approximately 160 million dollars than it was in 1938.

Farm outlook was not so rosy during the first six months of 1939, but since mid-August, price increases have been all in favor of the farmer. According to the Bureau of Labor statistics farm prices have been advanced about twelve per cent while wholesale prices in general have increased six per cent. This simply means the farmer can buy more with his dollars than he could a year ago.

Another important factor making for higher farm prices and income is the current industrial recovery. Factory employment and payrolls are up seven per cent and fifteen per cent respectively, and when the industrial worker has money he spends it freely.

Some states, Kentucky for example, have not shared in this recovery and during the first nine months of 1939 they received about seventeen per cent less than in the corresponding period of 1938. The last three months should show very decided improvement in these states, and, although they may not catch up with farmers in more favored sections, they will see a very definite upturn in income.

With Europe buying more in 1940 than for some time and with our industrial recovery in full swing, farm income in 1940 should go well over nine billion dollars, highest since 1929. Farm costs are bound to rise but at a slower pace than income, and the farmer will have more money to spend in 1940 than for some time past.

SCREEN QUEEN BETTE PLAYS BESS, QUEEN OF TUDOR ENGLAND

Elizabeth may have been Queen of England but Bette Davis, who portrays her in Warner Bros. "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," which opens at the Fulton Theatre next Sunday, is acknowledged queen of dramatic actresses. In all her glory good Queen Bess never got more attention than did Dramatic Queen Bette when she made first tests for her role.

Observers counted twenty-two persons, all of them there in an official or semi-official capacity, surrounding her when Miss Davis stepped from her small set dressing room clad in gorgeous regal robes and wig.

Led by Michael Curtiz, who directed the picture, and his staff of four, including Unit Manager Frank Mattison and his three assistant directors, Sherry Shourds, Emmett Emerson and Oren Haglund, the group of attendants was composed, among others, of Makeup Artist Perc Westmore, two assistants, Hairdresser Joan St. Oegger and one assistant, Orry-Kelly, who designed Miss Davis magnificent costumes and Cameraman Sol Polito.

Most everybody had some advice to offer when a question arose concerning Miss Davis' wig, but the actress herself won out for a different type when she remarked that a previous test had made her look "like Harpo."

As Queen Elizabeth, which she herself feels offers the greatest dramatic opportunity of her career, Miss Davis has twelve different Elizabethan costumes. Fashioned of the finest fabrics, the regal robes weigh an average of 60 pounds apiece.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism Denounced," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, Nov. 26, 1939.

The Golden Text is "When they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter; should not a people seek unto their God?" (Isa. 8:19)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "But he, knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth." (Luke 11:17)

"Funny — this rose doesn't smell good any more"

Flowers that bloom in the spring are apt to lose their delightful odor by fall—and many expensive drugs lose their potency. It costs more to use only fresh pharmaceuticals in filling prescriptions—but the prescriptions are a lot better. That's why we constantly check drugs for potency.

IN THE DAYS OF THE SAWMILL

Kentucky was once a great lumber state; wanton destruction of our forests has about brought to an end any likelihood of our seeing a return of earlier conditions, but the preservation of our timber in state and national reserves and parks will insure to our descendants a supply of timber that will partially serve their needs. Since I lived in the Jackson Purchase, the last West of Kentucky, I know as a boy much of the tradition of lumbering and its allied industries. Here and there in the state the same conditions still exist in a small way.

The sawmill literally cut a swath across our time. In almost every community there formerly existed one or more mills, located, usually, in the actual woods to be ruined. To them were hauled the most promising logs; the others were brought together in heaps at log-rollings and reduced to ashes. Coarse, rough lumber was sawed out, to be used in building houses and barns and fences. Yellow poplar, our most distinctive timber, suffered soonest, as lumber of this type was easily worked and relatively light. The various oaks suffered next, with the numerous kinds trailing. The mill was a great rendezvous for the neighborhood, as it was one of the few mechanical things we knew. Great piles of sawdust and rotting scantlings often were the only remnants left of gigantic forests.

Closely allied with the sawmill industry was that of cross-tie making. This was known as tie-hacking, and the men who made the ties were called tie-hacks. Usually the tie-hacks were a roving lot, who moved on as they demolished the timber resources. Many of the sawmill people likewise followed the opening up of new fields. Cross-ties were hewn, often with a skill that seems unbelievable. The broad-axe, so useful in building the houses and barns before the sawmill came, became the symbol of a more destructive use of timber. Cross ties were hauled to the nearest railroad or to the rivers, where special boats came for them. Within a few weeks of the time when I am writing I saw a tie boat going up one of the central Kentucky rivers for a cargo of ties, in an area still not completely ravaged by lumbering.

But aside from the wastefulness of the mill there were things that all of us remember with pleasure. The very skill of the men who had hauled huge logs through the muddy bottoms or had dragged them on a lizard, a V-shaped slide that held up one end of the log, was a thing of note in any neighborhood. More attractive still was the skill of the raftman, who had piloted his collection of valuable logs down some treacherous creek or river in mid-winter and had lived through it all, little the worse for wear. Then it was great sport to visit the mill and see the huge logs dismembered, to see the great pile of sawdust, to smell the newly sawed wood. Local youths longed to be able to run the saw carriage, to try their skill at sawing planks of a certain thickness. In fact, the man who could do this work was almost as much envied as the man who cut bundles at the wheat-threshing.

All the earlier mills were run by water power. Usually there would be, at the really established mills, rather than at those in the woods, other things, like a grist mill or even a cotton gin. So when we went with a log wagon, drawn by oxen, to the old mill, we were likely to see most of the machinery of a whole neighborhood.

CAPITOL COMMENTS

We have much to be thankful for and we are indeed grateful.

We are thankful that we live in a true democracy and have a choice in naming our leaders—and recalling them if necessary.

We are thankful for freedom of speech, for religious freedom that lets us worship as our conscience dictates, unafraid and not intimidated.

We are thankful for the luxuries and comforts of our civilization and our standard of living that is the highest in the world.

We are thankful we are sons and daughters of a mighty State with a heritage to live up to and a tradition to follow, for it's good to live in Kentucky. And we are also thankful that it is almost debt free and that we have elected an honest and fearless leader with the interest of the State and its people at heart.

Let us be thankful.

The Kentucky Judicial Council, composed of Kentucky's Circuit Judges and the members of the Court of Appeals, met last week here in Frankfort and decided on a number of bills to recommend and urge for passage in the coming legislature. The most important one was a plan to move the Primary election up to May or June instead of holding it in August. This would allow the Judges sufficient time to decide on election contests and hold recounts.

Something drastic should be done about the financial juggling that delays payment of Old Age Pensions.

The people of this State who receive pensions need them for the necessities of life, their very existence depends on that money, and it is a damnable outrage that they are political pawns at the mercy of a financial statement on a balance sheet. We believe the Governor will take some action on this and see they are paid on time.

There is a chance that tobacco strippers may not come under the wage and hour law. If this is true it may help to increase the price of tobacco and is a life saver to Kentuckians in the tobacco business.

Tobacco strippers as a rule are a happy shiftless lot who take things easy and they are paid by the amount they strip and not by the hour. This is a fair system—many of them would lose their jobs if employers were forced to pay them by the hour.

The Young Democratic Clubs of Kentucky met in Louisville last week. Crowder of Mayfield was elected president; Bill Hatcher of Bowling Green with drawing in his favor and being reelected a vice president. National Committeeman elected was John Dugan, Committeewoman, Mrs. Morancy and Secretary, Mrs. Garland.

SAFETYGRAMS

You cannot see it—you cannot taste it—you cannot smell it—you cannot feel it.

Yes, this is carbon monoxide gas. You have all heard about it, and much has been written and said about it; but every year thousands of lives are lost because of carelessness on the part of the victims protecting themselves against it.

Do these things:

Always leave your garage doors open when the motor of your car is running.

Always have a car window open while driving.

This gas is so deadly that the amount produced in three minutes by an ordinary car motor running in a closed single car garage will prove fatal to the occupants.

THE FORUM

By J. PAUL BUSHART, Editor

A column conducted for news, views and comments, in which readers of The News are invited to participate. Mail contributions care of THE FORUM, this newspaper.

It is out at the Auto Sales Company this week, and they were as happy over the arrival of a new Ford tractor as a mother is a newborn baby. Even I was induced to climb aboard its comfortable seat and drive around the block. I was amazed at the ease with which it operates, and how comfortable it rides. The Ford tractor has a transmission and shifts like a car—three speeds forward, and reverse. There is low for the power pull in the field, an intermediate gear, and then high for highway travel at 15 miles an hour if desired. I'm no judge of tractors when it comes to performance, but I imagine Mr. Ford should know what it takes, for he has been building automobiles and tractors for a long time. Anyway, this tractor is modern in every respect, streamlined and eye-appealing. It is right in line with the modern trend of the day, to supply the world with machinery that will lighten our daily labors and take the drudgery out of work.

Mickey Martin and his hell-riders, who were scheduled to give a show at the Fulton fair grounds last Sunday, but were rained out, will perform their daredevil exhibitions Sunday. I thought some of our citizens were reckless enough with their cars, but they are really careful in contrast with the chances Mickey and his crew take. I would believe a man could jump off a car going 60 miles an hour and live if I hadn't seen it done, or jump a car over another car. They certainly like to take their lives in their hand.

K. P. Dalton, Fulton's able chief of police, who is somewhat of a politician, has been slated to head the Fulton baseball association another year. K. P. is a bundle of energy and an untiring worker, and it will take just that type of man, and the support of his co-workers and citizens to keep organized baseball on the up and up in Fulton.

Fulton's police department could stand a little uplifting. We mean by that, that local officers would appear to an advantage and be more official-like if they were diked out in uniforms. Many of our neighboring cities have uniformed officers, and it is the opinion of many local citizens that our police should wear official dress. We'd like to hear from you if you approve or disapprove of the idea. It might be worked out you know.

Those who like to eat will find this November to their liking. Two Thanksgivings should be right up their alley. Several people around town have told me that they intended to enjoy two dinners—one on Nov. 23 and one on November 30. About half of the states are observing the former date, while the rest will follow the usual custom of observing Thanksgiving on the last Thursday in November. Probably by next year, November 23rd will be observed everywhere.

SOUTH FULTON SCHOOL

South Fulton Defeated By Hulbert West-Memphis

Hulbert West - Memphis, Ark., gained the title of Champions last Tuesday night when they led the way to a 53 to 6 victory over So. Fulton Red Devils, before a crowd of 2300 fans at the Fairgrounds stadium.

With the wild scoring over a slippery turf, Hulbert continued scoring over a three year period while South Fulton in its first year, was giving all they had in battling with Hulbert West.

The vicious open field blocking of Milton Phillips and Freddie Bollinger made it possible for the West Memphis boys to snake-hip their way for touchdowns.

Fred Cordell, who could well grace the backfield of any 11-man team, opened the one-sided affair shortly after the opening whistle slashing through the center and sidestepping 53 yards to pay dirt. He went around end for the extra, and came back three minutes later to add another touchdown 12 yards through right tackle.

The exceptional punting of Tommy Edwards which was assisted by hard tackling on the part of Royce Dyer and Harold Wells, made it possible for the Red Devils to hold Hulbert West to a dogfall in the second period.

Troy Cordell scored three successive touchdowns. The third quarter six pointer was made on a 17 yard tackle. He ripped off two markers in the last period 18 yards through left tackle and returned one of Edwards punts 72 yards and Bollinger ran to block Troy's path of Harold Wells, Fulton safety who nearly made a tackle on 20. There were surprisingly few passes, in contrast to the usual six-man game.

FEEDING THE PEOPLE

The greatest problem facing retail merchandising today—a problem shared by producer and consumer—is how to hold prices to reasonable levels in the face of artificial inflationary influences.

Events of the last few months show how thoroughly merchandisers realize the size of that problem. Organized independent stores and chain stores have pledged themselves to redouble their efforts to keep prices fair. They have pledged themselves to fight exploitation and profiteering. Intelligent producers, no less than hard-pressed consumers, are with them in this—farmer and manufacturer know full well that excessive prices mean reduced sales, and a diminished income.

But merchandising cannot do the job alone. And certainly it cannot do it when hampered by laws, taxes and regulations whose effect is to penalize efficiency, and to subsidize waste. It cannot do it when honest competition, the best and fairest arbiter of prices the world has ever known, is ostracized. It cannot do it when artificial restriction is placed upon artificial restriction in order to deliberately reduce its operating efficiency, and increase its operating costs.

Retail merchandising, large and small, is ready to do a vital job in the people's interest. It remains to be seen whether government will

NOTICE

Whereas, on the 7th day of August, 1939, an agreement was entered into by the holders of more than a majority of the shareholders of the Winstead-Jones & Co., Inc., which agreement was to the effect that such corporation be dissolved and its corporation affairs be wound up. Now I, the undersigned president of the said corporation, do hereby notify all persons concerned that Winstead-Jones & Co., Inc. is hereby dissolved as a corporation and that to all interest and purposes such corporation is hereby dissolved as provided by Section 561 of the 1932 Edition of the Kentucky Statutes. This November 2, 1939.

W. W. Jones, president and chief officer of Winstead-Jones & Co., Inc., in Fulton, Fulton County, Ky. 4t-Adv.

way the decision goes, it will serve to help clear an important question of public policy. And it is an ironical fact that the suit was the result of an action by the railroads which was taken purely to obey existing law as they understand it, and to serve the public with maximum efficiency.

Rabbit and Quail Law Opens Today

Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, calls to the attention of all hunters the fact that the season on Rabbits and Bob White Quail opens on November 24.

The hunter's attention is also called to the proclamation issued by Governor Chandler more than a month ago setting aside November 30 as Thanksgiving Day. As the result of this proclamation the hunter will be able to enjoy that particular holiday in the fields in the pursuit of the rabbit or quail. President Roosevelt proclaimed November 23 as Thanksgiving day, but due to the confusion raised by this change, Governor Chandler proclaimed the last Thursday in the month as the day on which to give thanks.

The Division of Game and Fish has received numerous requests within the past several weeks asking that the hunting season be moved up one day in order to have the opening on November 23, but this could only be done by an act of the Kentucky Legislature and as Thanksgiving Day will fall just one week later, on November 30, that will not be necessary.

From reports received from every county in the state this is going to be the best hunting season Kentucky hunters have enjoyed since the day Daniel Boone first gazed upon the land known to the Indians as the "Happy Hunting Ground."

Kentucky Merchants Elect New State President

Mr. Swaney runs the most popular dance band in the state and jitterbugs rate him tops. He plays a lot of one night stands, says our advertising should say: "When you're jumping around from town to town like a hep-cat in a jam session, you notice a big difference in service stations. When you find one that really takes care of your car, you're right in the groove. Illinois Oil Co. is big-time in service and products. Torpedo gasoline and Welch oil make a car run sweeter than a good band ridin' out on a smooth chorus."

Super-efficient vacuum cleaners weren't yet on the market—and when they came, Gran'ma regarded them as rank extravagance.

Overhead Rail Crossing

TO BE ABOLISHED

Nobody would think of abolishing overhead railroad crossings, because they add so much to the safety of motorists.

And yet, many people persist in taking chances by drinking raw milk when the certain protection of pure, pasteurized milk is available. When you can buy PURE milk, scientifically freed from danger of disease germs, it's foolish to buy any other kind.

The merchants unanimously passed a resolution urging State Officials to enforce the provisions of the Kentucky Unfair Practices Act, which passed the legislature in 1936. This law prohibits the sale of merchandise below cost; and if enforced, would put an end to predatory price cutting, a problem that is causing grave concern all over the country. Passage of this resolution followed an address by Shirley E. Haas, Secretary of the Kentucky Food Distributors Association, and Treasurer of the Kentucky Merchants Association.

Haas stated that the farmers and wage earners of the country were the first persons to pay for this uneconomic method of doing business; and if American business is to be preserved, the American farmer and the American wage earner must be preserved as well.

"Business must be regulated," Haas said, "in order that the honest man may run an honest business. Consumers do not benefit from price cutting, for merchants must juggle prices on other articles of merchandise to make up losses sustained on commodities sold below cost."

The Kentucky Merchants Association came into being in 1932 and for two years waged a successful battle against the imposition of a retail sales tax. Since that time its activities have broadened and increased so that it serves as a clearing house of information for members of the Association, whose numbers run into the thousands.

UNCLE JIM SAYS

Under the AAA farmers decide crop adjustments the American way, by secret ballot.

Cotton and tobacco growers are deciding acreage for 1940 this month and next, every grower has a right to vote.

1940 looks like a fairly good year for livestock producers with the exception of hogs.

Thousands of Tennessee farmers are finding that the use of phosphate gives them more and better pasturage, more hay and corn.

Acreage adjustments help to avoid the growing of unneeded crops that remove soil fertility and depress prices.

Wise farmers will study the 1940 outlook carefully, consult their county agents and keep their production of crops and livestock on a sound basis.

A stronger demand and some better prices are expected for most farm products in 1940, but there is nothing to indicate boom prices of the last war, say experts.

Business men should keep in mind that five out of eight customers in rural towns are farmers and that many other customers depend on farmer-spending for a living.

A good bulletin to have around at hog killing time is Extension Publication No. 173, "Curing Pork on the Farm." You can get a copy from your county agent or by writing the U.T. Agricultural Extension Service.

Much has been said about safe driving. Many lessons have been read, and also many lessons have been learned through bitter experience, disappointment, accident, and death.

The lesson of safety when once learned thoroughly should stick with us like our shadow. It should become a part of us like our arms or our legs.

Let's adapt these safety methods we read and hear about. It doesn't cost anything. The main job is to make up our minds once and for all that we will drive safely, and then stick to the resolution.

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!
