There are large-hearted men and women in our city who are anxiously considering the condition of the poor, and what means can be found for their relief. How the unemployed and deserving needy families can be given aid. There is no arrangement that can wholly do away with poverty. It is not God's purpose that poverty should cease. It is one of His means for the development of character.

"The poor," He says, "shall never cease out of the land; therefore, I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to the poor and to the needy, in thy land." Deut. 15:11.

None need fear that their liberality would bring them to want. Obedience to God would surely result in prosperity. "For this thing," God said, "the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thy hand unto. Thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee." Deut. 15:10, 6.

Little Clothing Store Stages Disposal Sale

The Little Clothing Co., located at 414 Lake Street, Fulton, has employed the services of Mr. P. R. Fouty, Chicago liquidator, to conduct a store-wide disposal sale which opened Thursday, January 4, and will continue until further notice.

In every department throughout this fine store prices have been marked down on every item in suits, overcoats, tapecoats, shirts, pajamas, trousers, sweaters, neckwear, hosiery, underwear, shoes, hats, etc. Nothing is held back, nothing is reserved. Mr. Fouty states. Every article of this fine stock of nationally advertised clothing, shoes and furnishings, is being offered at astounding price reductions in order to liquidate inventory to one-half of the entire stock.

Never before in the history of the Little Clothing Company has a sale of this magnitude been held. This is a community benefit that will save the public thousands of dollars within the next few days. For further details and prices turn to the huge 2-page advertisement in this paper.

DR. HAWKINS SPOKE AT SOUTH FULTON

Speaking before the student body of South Fulton in the first assembly of the new year Tuesday morning, Dr. Don P. Hawkins, Christian church minister, stressed the fact that "true worth is in being, not seeming; in doing each day that goes by, some little good; not in dreaming of great things to do by." Dr. Hawkins pointed out that only the best, worth while things of life are worth attaining unto. He stated in part:

"Christmas is over. The time is fallen, and the wreaths are faded, the ribbons wrinkled, street decorations have been taken down, the tang of frost and the touch of snow has added a finishing touch. The toys, too, are somewhat misshapen already. We have sung Christmas hymns in our worship, and have closed that particular part of our hymn books for another year, and praise God with other words until another Christmas shall dawn.

"It is a rather terrible Christmas for some. We are back on earth again, and the earth is hard, so hard it sometimes seems to be stone. The song of the angels must not stop now. The permanent possession of a great human heart with the spirit of Christmas always in the heart, is what we should desire. A heart that is full of human sympathy for the unfortunate, is a memory that is dearest. We may disdain these things but they are never to be uprooted. In the meantime we shall trudge along the old road, be it ever so rough under our feet. Sometimes dark with storms, while the tempest gales howl. Yes, we shall trudge along, you and I. And we shall carry the sun and in our souls. Let the music that echoes from the songs of Bethlehem vibrate throughout the New Year in our hearts, so that we shall not notice the rough road, the darkness of heaven and the splattering wind-driven rain."

Assembly singing featured the morning exercises and devotional program.

FULTON CHURCHES IN NEW YEAR'S SERVICE

A specially arranged ringing of the church bell at the Methodist church Sunday night as 1939 was ready to depart and 1940 ready to be ushered in, and with a congregation composed of members of the various Fulton churches on their knees praying for a greater 1940 than in 1939, led by the Rev. W. H. Saxon, Methodist pastor who had just given a stirring address featured the advent of the New Year in Fulton Monday morning. The program Sunday night was all that could be desired in the way of a watch night program. Ministers of the churches had arranged it, and members of the congregation carried it out in a highly acceptable manner.

From 9 to 10 there was a featured recreation hour with DuQuoin Hall representing the Methodist church, Tom Underwood of the Christian church and Henry Bethel representing the First Presbyterian church, leading in the singing of old time songs and hymns, and the playing of games. Two dramas that had been arranged by Hall proved features of the evening. Games proved very interesting and entertaining.

Refreshments in charge of a committee were served at 10:00 o'clock. At 10:30 in the main auditorium of the church a delightful program of music, in charge of Miss Ruth Fields, was carried out. Members of the Fulton High Glee club directed by Mrs. Hugh Pogue, an organ prelude, a 5-minute talk by Donald Hall, president of the Epworth League of the East Union district, on "Dreams for 1940," a solo by Miss Charlene Sanford, in our souls. Let the music that echoes from the songs of Bethlehem vibrate throughout the New Year in our hearts, so that we shall not notice the rough road, the darkness of heaven and the splattering wind-driven rain."

The 11 to 12 o'clock service was featured by a quartet on "Dreams of 1940" by Mrs. G. K. Underwood and Boyd Alexander of the Christian church; Mrs. Warren Graham and Mr. Atkins of the Methodist church; Dr. Radd of the Baptist church; the Rev. W. G. Garrett of the Nazarene; the Rev. Mr. Craig, evangelist and native of Fulton, who began a revival at the First Presbyterian church on Thursday evening. The congregational singing was led by C. L. Gardner. Dr. Don P. Hawkins of the Christian church, presided at the meeting, and at the 10:30 to 11 o'clock program gave a reading "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," by Riley, with piano accompaniment.

Near the close of the address the church bell began to toll softly indicating the approach of the midnight hour. The members of the congregation then assembled around the altar and spent the last few minutes of the old year in a prayer of earnest supplication to God for forgiveness for the many promises broken, and the many things left undone in 1939, and in an earnest petition for a realization of the great promise to believers for 1940. Just as the midnight hour came the church bell began to ring merrily announcing the advent of the new year. The congregation then exchanged New Year's greetings. The affair was well attended and proved highly enjoyable from beginning to end.

KY. FARM FEDERATION PLANS ANNUAL MEET

The annual convention of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation will be held January 10, 11 and 12 in the Brown Hotel, Louisville. At this meeting, the organized farmers of Kentucky will write the policies and program of the potent Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation. The first afternoon will be devoted to the discussion and adoption of the 1940 legislative program.

R. M. Evans, administrator, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Washington, D. C., will explain the workings of "The AAA in a Permanent Agriculture," at 3:15 Thursday. Scheduled for the same afternoon is Donald H. Kirkpatrick, general counsel, Illinois Agricultural Association, who will discuss "Illinois' Success with an Insurance Program."

The speaking program Thursday morning will be opened with President Ben Niles' annual address. For the ladies, Mrs. J. D. Giles, Selma, Alabama, will talk "As a Woman Thinketh."

The much publicized "Farm Tenancy as a National Problem" will be discussed by Mark Ehrbridge, vice president and general manager Courier-Journal and Times, and a member of President Roosevelt's Farm Tenancy Commission.

Everyone will want to hear Roscoe Stone, president of the Fulton County Farm Bureau, explain how they got "More Farm Bureau Members Than ACP Work Sheets."

Mr. Kirkpatrick will conduct a round table discussion at the honorary banquet in the Roof Garden for the county agents, county Farm Bureau presidents, and vocational agricultural teachers.

For the big banquet, Thursday night, W. C. Lasseter, editor, The Progressive Farmer, Memphis, will explain that "It Takes Organization." WHAS artists will furnish entertainment throughout the evening. After the banquet Jimmie Robertson's orchestra will swing forth for those who care to dance.

Friday morning will be given over the setting of county quotas, election of officers, and winding up unfinished business. To bring the convention to a rousing good close, Richard W. Blackburn, executive secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation, will send the convention visitors home over "Farm Bureau Highways."

To keep the program alive and full of life, Frank Gregg, associate general secretary, Louisville YWCA, accompanied by Mrs. Mae Bow, will lead the group singing. The "Cow Lane Rhythm Band" from Hopkins county will perform from time to time.

Original resolutions that came from individual farmers, passed the county's approval, endorsed by the districts, and now up for discussion and adoption, or rejection by the voting delegates at the state meeting is the story of how the farmers write their own program. A large attendance at the state convention is a sure-fire way of stating that the organized farmers of Kentucky are interested in the agricultural development of the state.

THE FAITH THAT IS AMERICA

By Wendell L. Wilkie, President, Commonwealth and Southern Corporation as condensed by The Reader's Digest from a copyright article in the North American Review.

For centuries my ancestors lived in Central Europe. Some of them were peasants, some artisans, others were landed proprietors; but all of them through those centuries had been restricted in their opportunities to the group in which they were born, and no one of them had ever known the true meaning of liberty. Those who did not observe the restrictions under which they were forced to live got into trouble: one had to flee his native land because he adopted the religion of his choice; another was ostracized because he believed in the principles of the French Revolution; and still another was jailed for expressing his own opinions. In 1848, my father and grandfather came to America to escape this repression of individual liberties.

They were led to these shores, as were millions before and after them, by a special reputation that the United States had among nations. This reputation is founded upon one simple fact: in the United States the plain man has always had a chance.

My father and mother were the first generation in their families to grow up in America. My mother became a lawyer. My father was also a lawyer. Of course, in Europe my mother would have found it impossible to practice a profession; and my father would have found it difficult to get out of the groove worn by his ancestors. Furthermore, it would have been utterly impossible for them to have given their six children the education which we received in America. We went to high school and college.

And with schooling finished, there were no doors closed to their children just because they came from a plain family in a small town. No class distinction, no law interfered with their effort to earn a living in the occupation of their choice, or to express their opinions as they pleased.

In all the long history of their family, these six children were the first to know, from the time they were born, the blessings of freedom. I don't want them to be the last.

This family record is the record of any number of American families. For us the value of freedom has had a practical demonstration. Freedom means, for example, that if you run a store, you can sell your products to anybody without a government official telling you what the price must be; if you are a professor in a university, you don't have to alter science or delete history as a bureaucrat prescribes. If you own a newspaper you don't limit your editorial opinions to what an official censor approves. If you are a laborer, you can leave your job when you feel like it for any other job you prefer; you and your fellow workers can bargain collectively concerning the conditions of your work. If you think taxes are too high, you can vote against those officials who think responsible. And there is no limitation upon your inherent American right to criticize anybody, anywhere, at any time.

These are practical applications of this thing called freedom. In this country we take them for granted—perhaps too much for granted. But in more than half the world freedom does not exist. The present conflict in Europe is perilous to this freedom because in a modern war people destroy the very things they say they are fighting for. It is because we wish to preserve our free democratic system that we must remain at peace. But we cannot remain carelessly at peace. If the price of democracy in ordinary times is eternal vigilance, in a war period that vigilance must be doubled.

JUST HUMANS

By GENE CARR

"I Don't Think I'll Risk Seein' This Picture With You, Dear!"

We must be careful that, under the guise of "emergency," the powers of government are not so extended as to impair the vitality of free enterprise and choke off free expression of thought. Already we hear the need for the government to control prices, to license American business, to regiment American employees and employers, to censor the radio. In a critical time there is always a temptation to surrender the responsibilities of a free citizen, to say to the government: "During this emergency, you take charge. You tell us what to do what to think."

If we should yield to this temptation, the end of our free democratic system might come as readily in peace as in war. Once these responsibilities of citizenship are given up, they are not readily returned. Government, in its practical working, consists only of aggregations of men; and men, having tasted power, do not easily surrender power. We must not be misled because suggested restrictions are for humanitarian purposes, for, as ex-Justice Louis D. Brandeis recently said:

"Experience should teach us to be more on our guard to protect our liberties when the government's purposes are beneficent . . . The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding."

The war has not changed the grave domestic questions confronting America; it has just temporarily diverted our minds from them. For ten years we have been haunted by our unemployment problem. Yet its solution has been in our hands for some time. During the depression decade, American industry accumulated an enormous deficiency in plants and modern machinery. To remedy this, industry will need even more than the present number of unemployed. Industry will also need a great deal of additional capital, and there should be no difficulty in getting this, as soon as the millions of American investors are reassured as to the future of free private enterprise.

The lack of confidence within industry is partly a result of industry's own defects in the period of over-expansion which ended in 1929. But since then we have had several years of reform; and some of these reforms have gone so far as to impair the efficiency and morale of business. In promoting recovery, the chief emphasis has been placed upon what the government should do: we have had colossal expenditures for "priming the pump," and a colossal tax program to pay for these expenditures. Here is just the point where our free democracy is threatened. We are not in immediate danger of losing our freedom of speech, or of press, or of worship. The greatest threat to the American system today comes from the effort to restrict competitive enterprise. And such enterprise alone can make economic recovery possible.

We have been told that the frontiers are gone, that our established industries are slowing down, and that there is little to be expected in the way of new inventions. We have been informed that the very basis of the American dream is no longer true; that the plain man no longer has much of a chance. But such a philosophy is as false as it is cowardly. Our people, comprising only seven per cent of the world's population, still control more than 45 per cent of the world's wealth. And we enjoy the highest real wages, the shortest working hours, and the greatest percentage of home ownership on earth.

The great days of America are by no means done. We have only touched the border of our achievement. If I did not believe this, I would not believe in America. Because that faith is America.

So my creed, if I were asked to define it, would run something like this:

I believe in America because in it we are free—free to choose our government, to speak our minds, to observe our different religions;

Because we are generous with our freedom—we share our rights with those who disagree with us; Because we hate no people and covet no people's land;

Because we are blessed with a natural and varied abundance;

Because we set no limit to a man's achievement; in mine, factory, field or service in business or the arts, an able man, regardless of class or creed, can realize his ambitions;

Because we have great dreams—and because we have the opportunity to make those dreams come true.

We are beginning a new year. What will 1940 hold for you as a driver and pedestrian as far as safety is concerned?

It is too early to tell definitely what the results of all safety activities in 1939 are, although from all indications, there is a possibility of a slight reduction in accidents. I will give you definite figures just as soon as actual figures are released.

In the meantime let's forget 1939 and look forward to 1940, and let every today and tomorrow be a safe day, free from all types of accidents.

"We can't have any fun this evening. All I have in my pocket is some small change."

"Well, what do you think it takes to send my kid brother to the movie? A five-dollar bill?"

FRIEND: "Ha, ha. . . I see you're a man who blows his own horn."

HORN PLAYER: "Your mistake, pal. It won't be mine until I've made six more payments on it."

HUBBY: "And now that we're married, I'll never leave you alone for a single nite."

WIFEY: "Why you suspicious thing."

"I had my husband arrested for mashing last week."

"Oh, did he flirt with another woman?"

"No, he mashed me on the nose."

NED: "Jane is always having her eyes examined."

TED: "Oh, are they bad?"

NED: Not at all, they're very beautiful and every man loves to examine them."

Which type are you One who never starts? One who starts and stops? One who starts under pressure? Or a genuine self-starter?

Make promises sparingly and keep them faithfully, no matter what it costs you.

Anything less than your best is little better than nothing.

"Swanee River" Coming Fulton Theatre Sunday

On Sunday of next week, the Fulton theatre presents "Swanee River," 20th Century-Fox's story of Stephen C. Foster, the great American troubadour, filmed in Technicolor. What Robert Burns was to Scotland and Thomas Moore to Ireland, Stephen Foster is to America. His songs embody the very soul of his country and spring inspirationally from its rich earth. What American is there who at some time has not hummed, sung or whistled "The Old Folks at Home" (Swanee River), "Old Black Joe," "My Old Kentucky Home," "De Campdown Races," "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair," "Oh, Susanna" or "Ring, Ring de Banjo"?

"Swanee River" is said to be a magnificent picture because it combines the immortal melodies of Foster with the romantic drama of his life, so that it is more than a glorious musical calcade of one of the most romantic periods of American history.

Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production for 20th Century-Fox, selected Don Ameche to portray the great American troubadour, with Andrea Leeds as his sweetheart and wife, Jane McDowell, for whom Foster wrote "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair."

"Swanee River" faithfully tells the story of Foster's life as he actually lived it. His life contained all the dramatic ingredients—all the romance, the comedy and the color—which go into the making of a great motion picture. Few liberties were taken with the facts, for there was no need to do more than portray them faithfully.

In beautiful Technicolor, "Swanee River" takes moviegoers back to the romantic, colorful days of Foster's time when minstrels and river boats were popular. It shows his happy young manhood, depicts his early struggles, the introduction of his songs by Christy's Minstrels, his meeting with and marriage to "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair," portrays his rapid rise to fame and happy life with his wife and daughter.

Then, with relentless realism, "Swanee River" shows Foster's emotional instability, his disillusiones and disappointments, his gradual disintegration and eventual death in a shabby Bowery rooming house.

"Not everyone can afford to drive a large automobile, but nobody can be excused for driving a car that's ill-kept. Having the windshield clean and bright, the tires fully inflated, headlight lenses clean, etc., is merely a matter of going to a good service station. ## Money Talks

By
Frederick Stamm, Economist
Director of Adult Education
UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

New Years bring new hopes. We have closed our books on 1939. To some it has been a good year; they have made money. To others, a poor year; they have lost money. But how about 1940?

Industrial production should range upward of ten per cent over 1939 with automobiles and steel production leading the way. National income should reach seventy one billion dollars, an increase of at least three per cent over 1939. If we anticipate government farm subsidies as great as those of the past year, farm income should reach nine billion dollars in 1940, an increase of nearly ten per cent.

Farm prices in general should be slightly higher due to higher industrial activity and payrolls. Farm machinery sales should be up about twenty per cent due to larger farm income.

With both farm and industrial incomes up materially, retail trade, both rural and city, should enjoy the full benefit of enhanced purchasing power. Merchants should keep their shelves well stocked.

Contracts for new buildings, including residential, should be larger than for any year since 1930. This is good news for lumber dealers and builders supply companies.

Moderate price advances in all fields seem likely, but no huge war-stimulated rises in commodity prices appear in prospect for 1940.

These forecasts are based upon continued war and chaotic world conditions. All estimates are subject to revision as new economic forces are set into motion by these world conflicts. But, as far as we can see now, 1940 should be a more prosperous year than 1939.

CAPITOL COMMENTS

On Tuesday, January 2nd, your Representatives and Senators met in Executive Session to pass new laws or change existing ones in order to better serve the citizens of Kentucky. Through changing conditions and the advance of progress many laws become outmoded and many new laws must be passed.

In order to speed the passing of these laws and in order to meet these changing conditions the Legislative Council was planned to study and draw up bills necessary and beneficial to our State government. This body, composed of ten Representatives and Senators and five of the elected State officials presided over by the Lieutenant Governor, study the needs of the State and outline bills for the executive session of the Assembly to vote on.

The bills planned by the Legislative Council to be brought up at this session are:

1. An appropriation bill to keep the State within its income of 24 1-2 million dollars a year. This income is based on revenue of the past four years brought in by existing taxes.
2. A new chain store tax that will take the place of the old one ruled unconstitutional by the courts.
3. A teachers retirement fund of $500.00.
4. Extending the old age pensions to give maximum of $30.00 a month to those in need of that much. The present law provides for a maximum of $15.00 of which the State pays half.
5. Removal of State gas tax on farm tractors.
6. Creation of a farm tenancy commission.
7. Further study and rehabilitation of penal and eleemosynary institutions.
8. Creation of a bureau of markets in the Department of Agriculture.

Electrified Dairy Farm Helps, Livestock as Well as Farmer

Electricity spells profit and safety in this spotless modern barn.

By IRA MILLER
Rural Electrification Bureau

APART from the home, perhaps in no other building on the farm are the advantages of the full use of electricity more marked than in the dairy barn. And these advantages, which physically benefit the livestock as much as they help the farmer, result in greater profits to him.

The most obvious use of electricity in the dairy barn is for lights. Adequate illumination—lighting units of sufficient wattage spaced ten to fifteen feet apart, and controlled by switches at the doors—makes after-dark chores not only simple but also safer, by decreasing the danger of fire and personal injury.

An almost equally common application of electricity is to milking. Cutting the time required by half and keeping the bacterial count to a minimum, machine milking also will increase the yield—as much as 10 per cent—above that obtained by the slower hand method. Electric milking machines save time, labor and money on small as well as large farms—the portable type is recommended for the former, the pipe-line type for larger herds.

One of the most valuable services of electricity in the dairy barn is for pumping fresh running water to individual drinking cups for the cows. Like humans, they drink more often if water is convenient, especially when they are eating. As a cow needs at least four pounds of water for each pound of milk she produces, an increase in the amount of water consumed is followed by a corresponding gain in the yield of milk.

Proper ventilation of the dairy barn during cold weather is as essential to the maintenance of milk production as it is to the comfort of the animals and the preservation of the structure. Assuming that the barn is properly insulated, thermostatically-controlled electrically-driven exhaust fans—the number depending upon the cubic feet to be ventilated and the number of animals housed—offer the most economical and reliable answer to the problem.

Among other inexpensive electrical profit-makers in the dairy barn proper are electric fly screens, hair clippers, and ultra-violet and bactericidal lamps. A portable electric motor for cutting silage, grinding feed and holding hay, also is a "must" item where those tasks are an integral part of the dairy operation. The operating cost of an all-electric dairy barn is but a few cents a day, while the actual cash savings and profits that result will pay for the initial wiring and equipment in a few months. Even were there no direct savings or profits, the added safety, convenience and comfort would be worth much more than the cost.

These bills are Administration bills planned by the Legislative Council and are certain to be brought up during this session. The most important one to the taxpayers is the first one, that will keep the State within its income and provide for no new taxes. The Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation favors numbers 5, 6 and 8.

In addition to these bills the Kentucky Municipal League wants certain bills passed which we believe will be hard to regulate and almost impossible to enforce. Most of these bills they plan will take money from State revenue and return it to the cities. They want, for example, one cent out of each five of the State gasoline tax to be apportioned and paid to the several cities of the Commonwealth according to the population each city bears to the total population of the State.

They want an act providing for the return to the respective cities of the Commonwealth of all State automobile license fees collected on cars registered in the city.

An act exempting the cities from the payment of gasoline tax on gasoline purchased by municipalities and used for municipal purposes.

An act providing for the return to the cities of a portion of the State utility tax.

An act passed that will give the cities authority to set original utility rates, in franchises, and another act that grants the power to local authorities to assess public service corporations where as much as 50 percent of that property is in the city limits.

Many of these acts we believe the Municipal League knows are impossible of passing and impractical in enforcement, but we believe they go on the idea that by asking for a lot they may get a little.

The most dangerous of these Acts to the Commonwealth are the ones relating to the return of part of the gasoline tax, the exemption of municipal vehicles from gasoline taxes and the return of license fees on automobiles. Many States have tried these measures to their sorrow. They result in much tax evasion and in many instances graft and corruption, and we know that the State officials have unofficially stated their opposition to these measures.

SMITH'S CAFE

him and shout loudly. "What are you going to do about taxes?" The demand for a concrete tax and debt policy which really gets to the bottom of our tangled fiscal situation, is growing rapidly. The public which for some months has been occupied with European affairs, seems to be turning its attention again to our own domestic problems. The publicists and the columnists have been pointing out that there isn't much we can do about Europe, and that we have plenty to keep us busy at home.

There is a good chance that tax questions will pretty much hold the spotlight during the pending Congress. The Administration's defenders and opponents are unlimbering their artillery. But it won't be a purely partisan fight. For there is no general agreement within either major party as to just what the workable solution is.

White House opinion remains uncertain. The President has at times intimated, in rather vague terms, that he would be willing to cut government costs in some directions in order to provide the money needed for our vast national defense plans. At the same time, it is generally believed that he would still like to have the legal debt limit raised from its present level of $45,000,000,000 to $50,000,000,000 or more. It is felt that he may definitely propose that if Congressional sentiment seems favorable this session, and sentiment might turn favorable—though it obviously isn't now—if it seemed that the present legal limit menaced the defense program.

Curiously enough, in that this is definitely a spending Administration, the economy bloc leaders are generally Democrats. Senators Harrison and Byrd are perhaps the strongest advocates of genuine government expense reduction. By and large, the influential Southern group of Senators and Representatives, mainstays of the party during its lean years, support them. But, as yet, the group has had no really definite program to offer. And it naturally hesitates to embarrass the head of the party, the President.

On the other side of the fence, Republican spokesmen talk a great deal about economy. But it looks as if they are on the skittish side when it comes to getting down to the facts and figures. Senator Taft and Thomas E. Dewey, Presidential aspirants both, endorsed economy in general terms but have refused to propose a definite program. There is no great mystery as to why this should be so about these men or any others with political ambitions. Politics being what it is, successful candidates are usually vague and cautious candidates. The electorate will applaud economy as a general principle. But, as a rule, it is the first to raise a rumpus when the cuts are felt at home.

What all this amounts to is that the chances of anything big being done to solve the tax and debt problems during 1940 are remote. This is a general election year. Both parties want a short session, and both want to avoid having to place themselves too definitely on record as to major issues—with the single exception of the war issue, on which all seem agreed that we must remain neutral. So the odds favor a relatively evasive policy for both Democrats and Republicans. All officers of the government admit that our fiscal policy gets more involved daily, all admit that it must eventually be faced. But few really want to face it in a general election year.

When the historians write the story of this war, they will have many a knotty problem to unravel. One of the most interesting will deal with Italy's current policy. She is supporting the Finns against Germany economic ally, Russia. At the same time she recently announced that she still stands firmly by the Rome-Berlin axis. The only way you can get much sense out of that is on the supposition that Mussolini has decided to keep his country out of war at all costs, while cementing her influence in the Balkans.

Also interesting is recent British-French policy toward Russia. For years Allied statesmen were kept awake nights by the fear of a Russo-German alliance—tall tales were told of the supposedly indomitable Red Army. Today England and France are actively helping Finland so far as is possible, and have thrown their whole moral weight behind the little nation. And, say correspondents abroad, it looks as if the Allies are no longer afraid of Russia joining Germany in military action. Some even say that the Allies might welcome this, as it would open a new front—the Allied high command apparently thinks it would be suicidal to attempt to storm the Siegfried Line.

One reason for this may be Russia's military showing in Finland. The Red Army, according to military experts, is a flop. Its high command is stupid, and its troops poorly trained, equipped and disciplined. And its airplanes and motorized equipment have fallen far short of the advertisements. An efficient army, such as the German or French, they say, would have taken Finland in less than a week.

UNCLE JIM SAYS

Winter time planning is as important as Spring plowing on the farm.

Put first things first this year—take an inventory and start a system of farm records now.

Getting rid of scrubs among livestock is just as important as pulling up weeds in the garden.

Recent experiments have proved that electric lights are satisfactory for sorting and stripping tobacco.

Turning under legume winter cover crops sometimes increases the yield of corn and cotton as much as 40 percent.

Erosion in the winter feed lot which washes out valuable manure may be just as wasteful as erosion on the hillsides.

Under the Grant-of-Aid Program of the AAA, farmers in 1939 received more than 660,000 tons of lime for soil improvement—more than 19 times the amount they received under this program in 1938.

Tennessee hills are high but they are not high enough to give us the long-range view we need in times of uncertainty like the present—we need more than ever to study the farm crop and livestock outlook and records of past farming operations for ways of increasing efficiency.

Studies show that Tennessee farmers are using a larger proportion of their land for the production of feed and food than ever before, but experts say that this is still an insufficient acreage to provide enough products to meet the requirements for a minimum adequate diet.

Rev. Brooks Strongly Praises Retonga

"I Feel More Like A Healthy Boy Than A Mature Man Since Taking This Remarkable Medicine," He Declares. Eats Anything Now.

REV. JESS B. BROOKS

A large number of Ministers have praised Retonga in public statements because of a sincere desire to help other sufferers. A recent instance is the case of Rev. Jess B. Brooks, Clarkson, Ky., Missionary Baptist Minister, serving churches at Little Clifty, Millwood, and New Hope, and who is widely known and well liked by hundreds of friends.

"For four or five years I suffered from indigestion that made my food feel heavy in my stomach, and I felt full and tight as a drum after meals," stated Rev. Brooks. "Gas would bloat me up so bad I had hard pains in my stomach and side. No matter how much I ate my food didn't seem to nourish me, and I stayed weak and run down."

"Since taking Retonga my digestion seems perfect and all that heavy feeling and gassy bloating has stopped. I haven't any pains at all, and I feel more like a healthy boy than a mature man. I will be glad to talk with anyone personally about Retonga, or you may call me on the telephone at Clarkson 1609. This great medicine surpasses anything I ever saw."

Get genuine Retonga, accept no substitutes. Retonga may be obtained at DEMYER DRUG CO.—Adv.
