At a recent meeting of the Fulton County Board of Education, members voted to discontinue the Sylvan Shade high school and transfer the pupils to Hickman, beginning with the school term next fall. The Board will furnish transportation and pay tuition.

The change was brought about by a recent ruling which raised the enrollment required for accreditation from 45 to 60 in the upper four grades. Authorities believed that after graduation this year the school could not meet these requirements.

Another change was the addition of the 12th grade work at Western High school and a bus line will run from Brownsville to Western next year to furnish transportation for all pupils in that section above the 7th grade.

MEETING THE TRAIN

A good old custom that grew up with the railroads was as sort of patriotic duty or probably as a means of entertainment that broke up the monotony of the day for the city dwellers and furnished thrills for the country contingent. This custom was in no sense confined to very small places, either, for good-sized towns turned out en masse when the train came. The pop-corn man did a thriving trade for a few minutes each train time and probably dozed the rest of the time or wheeled his wagon up town. The passengers, "one of whom I was often which," enjoyed the show of the crowd quite as much as the loafers enjoyed the train and its motley group of passengers.

Money Talks

By Frederick Stamm, Economist
Director of Adult Education
UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

Unemployment, relief, and new governmental activities have greatly increased the cost of government. We all recognize that we must care for the needy, the unemployed, the aged. But we must also recognize that, as taxpayers, we furnish the funds from which these payments are made.

These new demands for money from our governmental agencies have created our complicated tax system, and have caused a rivalry between the federal, state and municipal governments for our money. It has created the problem of double taxation which is becoming more serious each year. Do you know that in 34 states the citizens pay not only a federal but state income tax; in 26 states not only a federal but also state tax on tobacco; in 48 states not only a federal but also state tax on alcohol and gasoline? In many states there are both state and federal taxes on new automobiles, and some cities have a gasoline tax in addition to the state and federal taxes. So you see that they unconsciously taught me, songs that I can still sing after a third of a century.

Buses come and go, airplanes zoom overhead, but nothing can take the place of meeting the train at the little depot.

Do you also know that the city of Philadelphia has a city income tax and New York City has a city sales tax? Ten years ago many of these new state and city taxes did not exist.

We cannot eliminate taxes, but we can and should study carefully where our taxes go. Our federal government is the largest business organization in the world. As citizens and taxpayers we should demand from our senators and representatives, in session now, that they study very carefully the problem of taxes, costs, and efficiency.

This is your problem. It will not be solved by "letting the politicians do it." Your alert action in the federal, state, and especially the local field can greatly aid your community to get more for its tax dollar. Citizen groups meeting for discussion and action can accomplish much. With taxes now taking approximately twenty-five cents of every dollar—you should be more than just mildly interested!

Patience surpasses learning. All are not thieves that dogs bark at. If you can't help, don't hinder.

CINCHING A JOB

A few years ago, at the age of 79, Thomas F. Ryan died worth many millions of dollars. In the meantime he had given away a lot of money also. But so far as the main facts of his life are concerned, they do not differ greatly from those of other poor boys who have risen to wealth and power.

A little story is told, however, which may give some insight into the manner in which young Ryan got his start toward great riches. His first job was with a Baltimore dry goods store, where he was hired for $3 a week and told to report for work the next morning. Now he was in earnest about that job and didn't want to take any chances on letting it get away from him, so he said to the boss: "If you don't mind, I'll start right now without any pay for today."

Needless to say he made good on that job, and two years later, at the age of 19, he obtained employment in Wall Street. At the age of 23 he became a member of the New York Stock Exchange, from which time his rise in the financial world was rapid and he became one of America's richest men.

Doubtless his remarkable success was due to the spirit which he displayed in cinching his first job—his willingness to "start right now." A good many boys of today might emulate that spirit with profit to themselves.

CAPITOL COMMENTS

By David M. Porter

With the approach of Spring many things will happen in Kentucky. Many new faces will appear in Frankfort, and much work will be done on the roads of Kentucky. The severe winter did millions of dollars worth of damage to Kentucky highways. Some of these highways will be repaired, but a number of new roads will be built in Kentucky. The Highway Commissioner, Lyter Donaldson, and Highway Engineer Thomas Cutler, are making plans to put Kentucky roads on a par with those of other States. Kentucky—long known as a detour State—will soon become a mecca for tourists throughout the nation who will drive here in the summer to see the Blue Grass country, Mammoth Cave, and other attractions that should and will draw tourists when we get the roads.

In Frankfort this past week many bills have been passed, and much legislative work run off. Kentucky's distilling industry was locked in battle. Seagram's—the distillery that makes a specialty of blending whiskey and neutral spirits—made an effort to get Kentucky's legislature to pass a law removing the tax on the neutral spirits. They claimed this would permit them to compete with other States who had no tax. The distillers of Kentucky Bourbon were up in arms. They believe that Kentucky is known throughout the world for its Straight Bourbon, and that if Kentucky distillers started blending this Bourbon with neutral spirits, it might cheapen the name of Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey. There was much excitement and long debates in the House, but the bill was killed by a large majority.

Another bill that passed the House this week that is of vital interest to the people of Kentucky and the 93 counties of the state that are in debt, was one that would empower the State to take over the finances and sinking funds of all counties that were more than six months in default, and put the finances in the hands of a finance officer and the Kentucky Commissioner of Finance. Many county judges throughout the State have opposed this bill because the State itself will offer no financial aid to the counties. They will only issue State certificates to the county bond holders if the majority of the bond holders would so vote.

The trouble with this bill is that it takes the financial set up of the county out of the power of the county officials and the bill will be ineffectual because the majority of the bond holders will not agree to take up these certificates in lieu of judgment on the bonds against the county, as they lose their power to sue when they change to State certificates.

Boyd and Graves county are suing the State now for huge sums involved in an agreement the State made to put up dollar for dollar with the counties in building roads.

There is no doubt that the State should offer some aid to the counties who are in debt through issuing road bonds to build Kentucky highways. Many of these bonds are for much more than all the money the State spent building roads in those counties; and, for this reason, county money went out to build roads in other counties in the State, and was not spent benefiting the tax payers of some particular counties.

Our belief was that the proper solution might be a bill putting a 3 per cent tax on para mutual betting, as a number of other States are doing; prorate this money to the counties and require those in debt to apply this on their bonded indebtedness; stipulate that the counties who were not in debt would use the money to improve their county roads. This measure was not put through the House or Senate and the present bill was drawn up, we believe, as a gesture to appease the counties who needed aid. We believe that the coming two years will prove the ineffectualness and that the next session of the legislature will take some positive action to aid the counties in debt.

The labor bill reported in last week's column is before the House now and we will tell you the result of this legislative action in next week's column.

CINCHING A JOB

A few years ago, at the age of 79, Thomas F. Ryan died worth many millions of dollars. In the meantime he had given away a lot of money also. But so far as the main facts of his life are concerned, they do not differ greatly from those of other poor boys who have risen to wealth and power.

A little story is told, however, which may give some insight into the manner in which young Ryan got his start toward great riches. His first job was with a Baltimore dry goods store, where he was hired for $3 a week and told to report for work the next morning. Now he was in earnest about that job and didn't want to take any chances on letting it get away from him, so he said to the boss: "If you don't mind, I'll start right now without any pay for today."

Needless to say he made good on that job, and two years later, at the age of 19, he obtained employment in Wall Street. At the age of 23 he became a member of the New York Stock Exchange, from which time his rise in the financial world was rapid and he became one of America's richest men.

Doubtless his remarkable success was due to the spirit which he displayed in cinching his first job—his willingness to "start right now." A good many boys of today might emulate that spirit with profit to themselves.

CAPITOL COMMENTS

By David M. Porter

With the approach of Spring many things will happen in Kentucky. Many new faces will appear in Frankfort, and much work will be done on the roads of Kentucky. The severe winter did millions of dollars worth of damage to Kentucky highways. Some of these highways will be repaired, but a number of new roads will be built in Kentucky. The Highway Commissioner, Lyter Donaldson, and Highway Engineer Thomas Cutler, are making plans to put Kentucky roads on a par with those of other States. Kentucky—long known as a detour State—will soon become a mecca for tourists throughout the nation who will drive here in the summer to see the Blue Grass country, Mammoth Cave, and other attractions that should and will draw tourists when we get the roads.

In Frankfort this past week many bills have been passed, and much legislative work run off. Kentucky's distilling industry was locked in battle. Seagram's—the distillery that makes a specialty of blending whiskey and neutral spirits—made an effort to get Kentucky's legislature to pass a law removing the tax on the neutral spirits. They claimed this would permit them to compete with other States who had no tax. The distillers of Kentucky Bourbon were up in arms. They believe that Kentucky is known throughout the world for its Straight Bourbon, and that if Kentucky distillers started blending this Bourbon with neutral spirits, it might cheapen the name of Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey. There was much excitement and long debates in the House, but the bill was killed by a large majority.

Another bill that passed the House this week that is of vital interest to the people of Kentucky and the 93 counties of the state that are in debt, was one that would empower the State to take over the finances and sinking funds of all counties that were more than six months in default, and put the finances in the hands of a finance officer and the Kentucky Commissioner of Finance. Many county judges throughout the State have opposed this bill because the State itself will offer no financial aid to the counties. They will only issue State certificates to the county bond holders if the majority of the bond holders would so vote.

The trouble with this bill is that it takes the financial set up of the county out of the power of the county officials and the bill will be ineffectual because the majority of the bond holders will not agree to take up these certificates in lieu of judgment on the bonds against the county, as they lose their power to sue when they change to State certificates.

Boyd and Graves county are suing the State now for huge sums involved in an agreement the State made to put up dollar for dollar with the counties in building roads.

There is no doubt that the State should offer some aid to the counties who are in debt through issuing road bonds to build Kentucky highways. Many of these bonds are for much more than all the money the State spent building roads in those counties; and, for this reason, county money went out to build roads in other counties in the State, and was not spent benefiting the tax payers of some particular counties.

Our belief was that the proper solution might be a bill putting a 3 per cent tax on para mutual betting, as a number of other States are doing; prorate this money to the counties and require those in debt to apply this on their bonded indebtedness; stipulate that the counties who were not in debt would use the money to improve their county roads. This measure was not put through the House or Senate and the present bill was drawn up, we believe, as a gesture to appease the counties who needed aid. We believe that the coming two years will prove the ineffectualness and that the next session of the legislature will take some positive action to aid the counties in debt. The labor bill reported in last week's column is before the House now and we will tell you the result of this legislative action in next week's column.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Some day in the future the level of business activity may establish itself on a reasonable normal, and follow a more or less horizontal course. But that day has certainly not arrived. Business graphs still present a crazy-quilt appearance, and the trends either for better or worse are astonishingly vertical.

The improvements in industrial production that set in late last summer was one of the sharpest in all our history. And the downward reaction that has taken place this winter has followed the same pattern. Within a very few months the industrial production index dropped from over 120 to less than 100. That was not completely surprising—a substantial drop was anticipated by all the forecasters. But the decline was sharper than was expected. It was led by steel, which went from near-100 per cent of capacity to under 70.

At the moment of writing, the downward trend has just about stopped, which leads to the belief that the bottom may have been reached and that the anticipated spring upturn will soon be in evidence. And if that upturn follows the anticipated pattern, it will be like that of last fall—extraordinary strong, culminating, in the opinion of some economists, in a production index as high as 140 by the end of the year.

One bright spot in the business picture is, of course, foreign trade. January export business was $358,000,000, almost exactly the same amount we sold in December. And that figure is 70 per cent above the January, 1939(level. Europe's appetite for American airplanes, metals, raw cotton, chemicals and machinery is gargantuan.

Brightest purely domestic spot in the picture is retail trade. January business was 10 per cent over the opening month of last year. Biggest jump was shown in the rural field—up 12 per cent. Indications are that chain and independent stores shared about equally in the improvement. There is a good chance that total retail trade will hit $40,000,000,000 this year—last time that figure was reached was in 1937. Low of $25,000,000,000 was hit in abysmal 1933, and the 1932 figure was only $1,000,000,000 better. Last year's total was about $38,000,000,000. Biggest year in history was 1929, when retailers' cash registers jingled merrily to the tune of $49,000,000,000. It is felt that biggest jump in retail selling this year as a whole will be in urban areas. Reasons: farm benefit payments will probably be lower this year than last, and factory employment and payrolls higher.

One sign is found in mounting automobile production and demand. That has a salubrious effect on many other industries, including the biggest business of them all—steel.

—O—O—

The first reports of what Herr Hitler said to Mr. Welles have filtered in. And, if you take them as a fixed declaration of German policy, they certainly do not seem conducive to peace. Instead, they seem to make war to the death inevitable.

According to reports, the Fuehrer insisted that German political domination of Czechoslovakia, German-occupied Poland and Hungary be recognized—that the Allies keep their hands off Scandinavia and the Balkans—that Germany's pre-war colonies, bulk of which were taken by England, be returned—that Britain lead the way in disarmament by doing away with such fortifications as Gibraltar—and that Britain's "stranglehold" on the world economic structure be broken. It is significant that Hitler said little about France—it is an oft-repeated Nazi doctrine that Germany has no quarrel with France, that the two countries as now constituted can live forever in peace, and that John Bull is the troublemaker.

It is naturally unthinkable that England would make these tremendous concessions, unless she were facing certain defeat at arms. They are tantamount to destroying the British Empire, and leaving the Isles remote and helpless.

However, that does not mean that all hope for an early peace is gone. For Hitler undoubtedly demanded a great more than he could expect to receive. A good bargainer often asks the impossible as a starting point, and makes concessions from there. And certainly great pressure will be brought on Hitler, as well as the Allies, to consider ending the war. Italy is extremely eager that hostilities stop—her own neutrality grows more difficult to maintain daily. The smaller neutrals, especially Belgium, Holland, Scandinavia, Rumania and Greece will do everything in their power to promote peace. And it is felt that even Russia, Hitler's avowed "friend," will sing a similar tune. Russia is in no position to fight a major war, and if matters go on as they are now, there is a strong possibility that the Allies will declare war against her in order to open a new flank and make fighting in the vulnerable Baltic possible.

It is significant that the German reception to Mr. Welles was cordial in the extreme—honors were given him that are usually reserved for the heads of States. The German government is apparently desirous of improving German-American relations, and it was intimated that Berlin would welcome an American ambassador.

HOGS ARE HOGS

In one respect at least the farmer has the edge on the manufacturer, merchant or business man of the city. Through marketing cooperative organizations, farmers, by group action, can dispose of their products quickly and at a maximum price. A single manufacturer, on the other hand, must maintain his own salesmen, and they must be better salesmen than those of his competitor next door. He must train them and furnish them transportation, on the gamble that they will sell enough goods to reimburse all costs and leave a little profit. He must always be on guard against the possibility of a competitor thinking up a new "model" that might overnight leave him without a market for his product.

Marketing cooperatives are the modern farmer's "salesmen." The farmer does not have to worry about new models. Hogs are hogs. They have not changed materially since the days of King Tut. Neither have cows and the milk they give.

But the job of selling which the marketing co-ops do, is not simple just because there are no new models to contend with. Their business is to help the farmer maintain ready markets and stable distribution for time-honored necessities of life—not automobiles, face cream and luxury gadgets, but the products of America's farms.

TIMELY TOPICS

During the days of prohibition in the United States, the prevention of rum-running from Canada was one of the problems. Now, because of the high war tax, Canada's liquor prices are so high that smugglers are slipping liquor across the border from the U. S.

The Truth About Chiropractic Brings Back Better Health

A 10-Minute Talk by Dr. Willard Carver of Carver Chiropractic College, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Chiropractic truth is no simpler than any truth. All truth is simple, plain and easily understood. Phases of subjects seem deep and mysterious only when, for any reason, they do not deal with truth.

Any statement of truth found anywhere, any fact, indeed, in no matter what relationship, is always simple and is always easily understood.

It has not been the general consensus of opinion that fact is simple, because the so-called scholastic world has always dealt so completely with theories and abstractions and phases incapable of demonstration.

Unfortunately, there has been a great deal of anstruse theories and irresponsible conclusions indulged altogether too much with regard to Chiropractic.

One of the most, if not the most, difficult thing for ordinary students, with regard to any aspect of Chiropractic, is the fact that it is so simple, so direct, and so completely uninvolved that students who are not prepared for such simplicity find it impossible to understand, because they are looking for some deep and hidden meaning, when, as a matter of fact, the whole science of Chiropractic is perfectly simple and very easy to understand.

Chiropractic starts from one prime fundamental biologic fact, which is—that life power, being received into the brain, transmitted through the nerves, and delivered to tissue elements at the ends of the nerves, causes all animation. This fact is called the biological fundamental of Chiropractic.

It will not do, in the abstract, to just say that the law announced is the biologic fundamental of Chiropractic, because the world at large has an entirely erroneous idea as to what biology really means.

It has been contended throughout the scholastic part of society that biology is a discussion of living things. If that were true, what has just been stated as the Chiropractic fundamental would cease to be that, and would resolve itself into a therapeutic statement, co-extensive with the remainder of medical theories.

The fact, however, remains that biology is, in its first aspect, a discussion of life, and, in its second aspect, the physical expression that results from the application of life to matter, composing the human body, or, so far as that is concerned, any other animate body.

It will be readily seen that life consists in power and intelligence; that a human organism could not be produced unless life, with its intelligence and power, operated upon the material area of conception, bringing into formulation the first granule of the new human, and then continuing to develop and produce other granules to the complete development of the majestic form and image of the particular human organism, according to the plan and image.

It will be readily seen that this is not saying that any part of the organism—the human body, for instance—is alive. Indeed, it is saying exactly the contrary. It is saying that no part of the human body is alive, but that it must be animated by life, and for that purpose the life under consideration must be received from the universal source of life.

Take an example. Here are two men, the same size and the same age—lying upon two tables, side by side. One man is what ordinary people call alive—the other man is what ordinary people call dead, having just been instantly killed by the projection of a bodkin through his heart. No blood has been spilled.

To carry the illustration, what is the difference between these two men? Life has left one of them, life still remains imminent, not inherent in the other.

Where did the man that is still animate receive his animation from, and when? Why, of course, at the moment of his conception, when his life, that causes him to be an individual, a person, came to the gametes of conception, and caused the marvelous and instantaneous conduct to take place, which resulted in the production of the primary granule of his person. He has retained in his body throughout its entire development and maturation the life that came in the first instant of conception.

What became of the life of the man who lies there upon the table inanimate, having received the wound from the bodkin? His life which came to him at the moment of conception has left him, and left him inanimate, and that life undoubtedly returned to the source of life from which it came.

A chiropractor begins at this fact, the beginning of animation, and reasons deductively to every other conclusion that he reaches. He reasons that this life force produced the very first movement that ever took place in that part of the new person, that in due time would be the brains of these men's bodies.

He deduces that this same life force and intelligence causes every operation to take place in the growing and developing body.

He deduces that the alimentary system took the necessary substances from the environment for physical upkeep of each body. He reasons that absorption from the intestine and intertubular areas of the lungs take place under the impulsion of the life power of each of these men.

He deduces that each muscle that moves in the body, for any purpose, moves because of the mandate of life operating upon it. He knows that life power and intelligence produces every chemical elaboration necessary to the production and maintenance of every character of tissue in the body.

He knows that airtation—that is to say, the intermingling of the necessary operations for dioxidation—are handled by intelligent life power.

By all of these phases of simple deduction, he knows that the two men lying upon the tables are neither one of them alive, but that one is animate, having the power and intelligence of life imminent in him, and he knows that the other is inanimate, and the reason he is so because the power and intelligence of life have left him—ceased to be imminent in him.

A chiropractor knows that any interference with the receipt of life power into the brain, the transposition of it through the brain and nerves to the ends of the nerves, results in a lessening of the power of life in any part of the body thus affected, or all of it, if the whole organism is involved.

A chiropractor knows that distortion is the only phase that can, in any way, interfere with the receipt, transmission, or delivery of life, intelligence and power.

A chiropractor, therefore knows that the entire office of a chiropractor is to remove such distortion and thereby secure such relationship as will permit a full quota of life power and intelligence to be delivered to every and all parts of the human body, at all times, thus establishing and maintaining health.

SAFETYGRAMS

Many of us drive along at 60 miles an hour feeling perfectly safe and assured that nothing can happen. If weather and traffic conditions are favorable, and the vehicle is in the best possible condition, this does not present such an unusual problem.

However, inattention to traffic conditions, recklessness or thoughtlessness in driving, and the many other driving faults we all have, make 60 miles an hour too fast a speed.

Let us remember this: When you hit a stone wall or other immovable object when driving 60 miles an hour, the force of the impact is as great as if you were driving off the top of a ten story building. Can you imagine the shock?

Indoor Games Most Enjoyable Under Good Lighting, Says Expert

The room shown here was formerly an attic. Now it is used for indoor games. Note how the portable lighting system attached to the ceiling provides an abundance of well-diffused, glareless light.

By Jean Prentice

INDOOR games and sports we have always had with us, but few have become as popular as the present vogue of ping-pong and table tennis. Claiming among its adherents the young and old of both sexes, it bids fair to reach the proportions of a national pastime. Good Lighting Conditions Required. Like all other games involving rapid motion, ping-pong and table tennis (they are really the same thing, you know) require the best of seeing conditions. The little white ball streaks back and forth across the table so fast that only the best of lighting can be used, if players and spectators are to enjoy the game to the fullest extent. Light bulbs of adequate size (wattage) are necessary, of course. But they, of themselves, do not provide the real solution. The light must be shaded, so that it will not glare.

Ready Made Sets Available

If your present recreation room has plenty of well-shaded light, then you need do nothing further to provide good seeing conditions. If it hasn't, then you'll be glad to know that recently there have been placed on the market a number of ready-made lighting sets. These are completely equipped with light bulbs of proper size, special parchment shades, and a wiring assembly consisting of plug, cord, pull-chain sockets, fixture loops and ceiling hooks. They are really quite reasonable in price, and may be installed in a more jiffy. Extremely attractive, too. With equipment such as this, there need be no excuse for eyestrain while enjoying your favorite indoor pastime.

Don't Keep Eyes in "Low Gear"

It must be remembered that the eyes are like cameras, and should never be compelled to take "snaps" under "time exposure" conditions. The attempt to play high speed games with the eyes in "low gear" under inadequate lighting often results in eyestrain, head aches, and bodily fatigue. For your eyes' sake, make sure that your lighting is adequate for the seeing conditions under which they are used, at work as well as at play.

COUNTY AGENT

Paul Davis of Rush Creek community has a flock of 65 white rock hens that are averaging 87 per cent production. 50 per cent production is profitable.

120 acres of English peas are being planted for canning purposes in the Delta Section. They are contracted by the Union City Canning Company. This company will also contract green beans, greens, black-eyed peas, crowder peas.

If you have not tried Hybrid corn I would suggest that you try an acre or two and check the yield against other corn. Hybrid corn has revolutionized the corn growing industry in the corn belt. It has gained farm popularity more rapidly in a generation and has permanently established itself notwithstanding many rapid developments.

The growing of hybrid corn blend well into a good farm program as it enables one to grow more good sound corn on a given acreage thus leaving more acres for diversion from soil depleting crops.

If one thing should be picked to explain the superiority of hybrids it would be the root system. The fact that the roots are much longer and very many more of them explains the ability of the corn to withstand a drought and adverse conditions as well as produce better grain.

A few of the advantages are:

1. Better root system.
2. More dependable.
3. Practically no barren stalks.
4. Larger yields.
5. Less stalk and more corn.
6. Less rotten and moldy corn.
7. Stiffer stalks, more resistance to wind.

Do not pass judgment before the crop is harvested. Measure results by scales.

Never buy Hybrid corn about which you know nothing. Not all Hybrid corn will give you the above advantages. Not all hybrid is adopted to this section. Be sure to purchase ADAPTED HYBRIDS. This information can be had at the county agent's office. For your information, Charles Wright, Fulton R. 1, is a breeder of a leading white variety that is adapted to this county and has a supply of seed available.

ONE-MINUTE SERMON

By Dr. Don P. Hawkins, First Christian Church

Next Sunday is Palm Sunday, the day of the Christian Church year when the triumphal entry into Jerusalem of Jesus is celebrated; the day in which we talk of kings and kingdoms, emperors, of rulers in their realms. It is One of the Banner Lord's Day of the Ecclesiastical Church Year. Halo sits no longer about the heads of kings as in days of yore.

There is a king of Italy, but his place in government is not so important now. He lives in Quirinal Palace bit Piazza Venezia. Il Duce's office forms the policies and leads the nation. Captains remain with us, a whole host of them, but many kings have departed from their places of power.

Is Christ really King in YOUR life? Or is he a puppet on a throne and the wires that pull your life and mine here and there tied to people and policies wholly at a variance with the personality and spirit of Jesus?

The triumphant entry was a big success. Jerusalem saw her King enter her gates. But it didn't last. It wore off. They killed Him soon after the middle of the same week and placed His bruised body in a stone sepulchre.

Less Than Half A Week of Allegiance. Fickle folks.

The writer recalls seeing a Passion Play presentation in Oberammergau, Germany. He remarked to one person at the end of the week: "Those people on Friday looked like the same folks we saw earlier in the week on Sunday."

"Well," replied our guide, "They are the same people. They have to be the same people. The people in your New Testament who waved palms and shouted hosannas were the SAME people who stood before Pilate in three more days and shrieked 'Crucify Him! His blood is on our children.' Was the guide right?"

Yes, HE WAS RIGHT. And because he was right this story of glorious testimony and foolish fickleness on our part in our love for Christ sometimes fits into many human situations.

STEPHEN FOSTER

Some interesting sidelights on the life of Stephen Collins Foster, sweet singer of Southern songs, who never lived in the South, are given in a book by John Tasker Howard, an authority on American music.

Foster was a native of Pittsburgh, where he spent most of his life, and it is said that he formed his taste for music through a negro girl servant in his home, who took him to colored revivals and early minstrel shows. Her influence is seen in his predilection for songs of the cabin and plantation.

When he wrote "Old Folks at Home" he had difficulty in finding a pleasing name of a Southern river to fit the meter of the first line. He tried "Pedee," and then "Yazoo," finally searching an atlas until he found "Suwanee." The song was sold to Edwin P. Christy, a minstrel singer, for $15, under condition that Christy be allowed to pose as its author, and first editions of the song bore Christy's name.

Foster's songs numbered in all about 125, for which he wrote both words and music, sometimes on wrapping paper, when nothing else was at hand. They earned for him about $15,000, but he was a ne'er-do-well and drank pretty heavily. His wife worked as a telegraph operator to help eke out a livelihood, according to Howard.

An old record in Bellevue Hospital, New York, gives an account of his death in 1864, at the age of 37, as a result of a fall in a Bowery rooming house.

Stephen Foster's life might not have been considered much of a success by his contemporaries, but his matchless songs have won for him something akin to immortal fame.

A LOFTY PERCH

THESE iron workers are changing the face of the Ford Exposition. High on their scaffolding, they are riveting the steel skeleton for the entrance facade which will greet 1940 visitors to the New York World's Fair.

The picture at right shows the front of the building as it undergoes the changes that will give it an imposing all-glass front, rising 74 feet from the ground to the roof.

Above are the iron workers in action—on the left, the passer, who has just caught a hot rivet in his "catching can" in mid-air, thrown him by the heater on the ground below. In the middle is the buckler, who holds the rivet in position, while the riveter, at right, wields the rivet hammer.

This scene is typical of steel construction jobs. It's a sight that never fails to fascinate the passers-by, especially when a skyscraper is going up in a large city.

"Retonga Is the Finest Medicine I Ever Saw"

Many Years of Torture From Indigestion, And Run Down Condition Quickly Overcome, Declares Mrs. Hardesty. Feels Fine Now.

Unquestionable proof of the superior merits of Retonga is found in the public statements of well known men and women who declare this new medicine brought them splendid recoveries from their long standing, stubborn troubles after every other means tried had failed. For instance Mrs. Carrie Hardesty, well known resident of 2827 Garfield Ave., Louisville, states:

"Acid indigestion bothered me so terribly that even toast and coffee brought on suffering from sour stomach," declares Mrs. Hardesty. "Gas would bloat me until I could hardly breathe, and I'd belch up food so hot and sour it would burn my throat. I had to be up several times at night to relieve my kidneys. I had terrible bilious, dizzy spells, and I felt terribly nervous and run down. When I sent my daughter for Retonga the druggist sent something else, but I tried it and was no better off. Then I insisted on genuine Retonga, and now I feel fine. I can eat big meals without any suffering from acid indigestion or gas pains. I don't have to get up nights, and I sleep sound. The bilious dizzy spells have stopped, and I am full of new strength. Retonga is the finest medicine I ever saw."

Get genuine Retonga today at DeMyer Drug Store.

THE FORUM

By J. PAUL BUSHART, Editor

A column conducted for news, views and comments, in which readers of The News are invited to participate. Mail contributions care of THE FORUM, this newspaper.

A negro down in Georgia, who was having a hard time of it, decided that there was only one thing left to do. So he wrote a letter to "The Good Lord," which read as follows:

"Dear Lawd—Ise a poor negro farmer and I need help. You are the only one to turn to. My wife and child are hungry and ragged. If you can see your way clear to send me $100.00, it would make my burden easier to bear."

Naturally, this letter when addressed to "The Good Lawd" went to the dead-letter office at Washington. Jim Farley, postmaster general, had it called to his attention, so he decided that the President should also see this unusual letter. When Roosevelt read the letter, he was so impressed with the circumstances and faith of the negro, that he sent him a check for $50. Time passed by. Eventually, another letter came addressed to the Good Lawd. This letter read:

"Got your letter and check. Put money to good use, like I said. But it didn't last long, and now Ise in the same shape, only worse. So, Lawd, if you want to help me again send the letter direct to me, and not by the way of Washington, for that fellow Roosevelt kept half that other hundred I asked for."

Ripley is always getting off some good ones. Saw one the other day on the "Mathematics of War," as follows:

About Transplanting

TRANSPLANTING is an important activity in almost every garden, but a gardener can save time and possible disappointment if he knows what can and what cannot be transplanted.

The following annuals should not be moved: California poppy, celosia, didiscus (blue lace flower), four o'clock, and luncheon. Among the perennials, larkspur (perennial sweet pea), and oriental poppy should not be transplanted.

These flowers are damaged, sometimes even killed, by transplanting because of their peculiar root growth.

The following popular flowers may be transplanted with little fear of damaging them: Annuals—agrostis, alyssum, snapdragon, aster, calendula, marigold, pansy, petunia, pink, salvia, scabiosa and verbenas; perennials—aubrietia, buddleia, Canterbury bells, columbine, hollyhock, pyrethrum, pink, scabiosa and viola.

There is a third division of flowers, plants whose lives will not be endangered by transplanting, but whose growth will be stunted. Both plant and blossoms will be smaller but earlier. Larkspur, zinnia, phlox, nasturtium and bachelor's button are in this classification.

It is advisable, when moving either small seedlings or larger plants, to transplant them into well conditioned soil which has been watered about 12 hours before the transplanting. This helps the plant through its period of readjustment, when it must have ample moisture. Make sure soil is firmed well around the roots.

Except where it is necessary to move full-grown perennials to more favorable locations, transplanting should be performed with small plants. When plants are larger, well-developed root systems are injured by the moving, sometimes resulting in severe damage to the plant.

In all cases it is advisable to take up with the plant a good amount of the soil in which it is rooted.

How to Apply Fertilizer to Tobacco

LEXINGTON, KY.—Valuable information on how to apply commercial fertilizer to tobacco, so that the growing crop will benefit by the maximum amount of plant food, is set forth in a bulletin issued here by the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky.

"Row application of the fertilizer is preferable to broadcasting, unless an unusually large amount is used," the bulletin states.

"Four hundred to six hundred pounds per acre, perhaps much more," it declares, "can be used safely in the row if properly applied. One of the most difficult problems connected with fertilization of tobacco is to get proper placement of the fertilizers. This is particularly true with machine setting of Burley."

"The best placement for Burley tobacco is in continuous narrow bands on both sides of the row and about three to four inches from the plants. The depth of placement should be three to four inches. Some of the setters sold recently have fertilizer distributors which make such placement, but the older ones do not. Most growers have single row fertilizer distributors, and fairly good placement can be made with them if proper care is exercised. "The best method is to mark out the land and to run the drill on both sides of the row, leaving a space of six to eight inches between the bands of fertilizer. The tobacco should be set between the bands.

Still Another Way.

"Another method is to drill the fertilizer directly in the row a week or ten days before setting the tobacco. The fertilizer should be mixed with the soil by following the drill with a double-shovel plow or Rastus cultivator with narrow shovels."

"On the Experiment Station farm, fertilizers have been successfully applied by using two-horse corn planters with fertilizer attachments."

PLANS COMPLETED FOR COTTON MATRESS MANUFACTURE

Farm Families With Less Than $400 Yearly Income Eligible to Receive Cotton from FSCC

Preparations have been completed for beginning the manufacture of cotton mattresses by farm families, from cotton obtained from the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, under a cooperative plan of the U-T Agricultural Extension Service and the AAA, it was announced by Director C. E. Brehm.

Four Tennessee counties, representative of the four Agricultural Extension Districts, have been designated for purposes of instruction and organization and other counties will be included in the program shortly, Director Brehm said. The four counties in which mattress making will be started as early as possible are Union, Coffee, Giles and Tipton.

Under the agreement by the Agricultural Extension Service and AAA, families having no more than $400 a year cash income, and living in rural sections, are eligible. No family certified through the county AAA office by an authorized person, can have more than one mattress, or equivalent material, such as 50 pounds of cotton and 12 yards of ticking.

Home demonstration agents will be in charge of instruction and home demonstration club councils, working through county clubs, will select responsible HDC members in each community, as chairman, to sponsor the mattress making work. Materials are ordered through the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, and agreements are being worked out for delivery of the materials to the community where mattress making projects are under way. The county agent will cooperate with the AAA county committee.
