Senator Barkley Favored Primary

In convention assembled at Lexington, May 12, Kentucky Democrats will nominate their candidates for state offices to be elected in November.

This was decided upon by the Democratic State Central Executive Committee in a meeting at Louisville, Feb. 20, notwithstanding the protest of many outstanding Democratic leaders, including Senator Alben W. Barkley.

Senator Barkley's views were expressed in a letter addressed to Bailey P. Wootton, Hazard, member of the Democratic State Central Committee.

The convention method, Senator Barkley wrote, would not promote harmony but would produce discord, disfranchise three out of every four Democratic voters in the State and prevent their participation in party affairs and repudiate the traditions of Democratic sponsorship of the primary system dating back for 30 years and flout the act of the Democratic Legislature of 1912 that gave Kentucky its direct primary law.

"A nominating convention in Kentucky will not bring harmony but will provoke discord in the party. It will lend itself to the opening of old scars, now happily well nigh healed. Groups, factions, sections and interests will seek to dominate it in order to control its actions, and however legitimate or honorable the object, we know that the methods are not always so irreproachable.

"There is never any assurance that the choice of a convention will be the choice of the people. A convention offers the temptation for all manner of dickering, trading and maneuvering, if not of actual corruption, in the control and delivery of delegates. It offers the perpetual temptation for candidates for different offices to combine and pool their strength, in consideration of mutual support, and it offers to the self-seeker the corrupt opportunity for bargain and sale in return for present or future emoluments. None of these things breed either harmony or success."

The editor of this paper heartily agrees with Senator Barkley's views, and we believe express the sentiment of a big majority of the Democratic voters throughout the State, especially in this district.

We are well acquainted with convention methods in selecting candidates, and are not going to apologize here for the political trickery practiced in old convention days.

The rank and file of the Democratic voters have been slapped in the face and a favored few will meet in Lexington, May 12, select whom they please as candidates to serve in public offices and we must vote for them in November.

Fulton County Entitled to 16 Delegates To Convention

Records in the secretary of state's office indicate that 1,973 delegates will attend the Democratic convention in Lexington, May 12, to select nominees for state offices.

The state central executive committee, which voted to hold a convention instead of primary, decided that each county should be entitled to one delegate for every 200 voters or fraction thereof cast in the last presidential election. Said delegates to be selected in district and precinct meetings on May 9.

Unofficial estimates taken from records in the secretary of state's office showed that Jefferson county will have 323 delegates at the convention. The next largest delegation will be from Kenton county, which, according to the unofficial estimates, will have 91. Kenton county will have 73 delegates, and Fayette county 50.

The number of delegates from the 13 counties in the First District were estimated as follows:

Ballard 15; Caldwell 9; Calloway 18; Carlisle 10; Crittenden 7; Fulton 16; Graves 32; Hickman 11; Livingston 7; Lyon 7; McCracken 24; Marshall 28; Trigg 7.

From the above estimates the entire 13 counties comprising the First District will have just about half as many delegates at the convention as Jefferson county.

Of course those big fellows up there in Jefferson county with 323 delegates at the convention could practically name the candidates. But where, oh where, would they look for Democratic votes to offset the large Republican majority at Louisville in the November election? The First District, of course.

It looks to us like the committee in calling a convention to nominate a ticket this year has "spilled the beans." Who wants to participate in a knock-down and drag-out atmosphere of a State convention anyhow?

Of course we will do our utmost to elect the ticket in the coming general election, regardless of how nominated or who may be chosen, nevertheless we think all Democratic voters in the State would be more enthusiastic if given an opportunity to participate in the selection of the ticket, however, they are not going to "riz up" and raise the devil about it. Some may at the convention.

PATRIOTIC TEA

The American Legion Auxiliary gave a charming tea Friday afternoon and evening at the Chamber of Commerce. The affair was as successful financially as socially, and added substantially to the auxiliary treasury.

Long-frond ferns and fragrant flowers with artistic decorations of crepe paper in patriotic colors gave additional beauty to the reception rooms. The arrangement of flags formed a pretty background for Mesdames B. O. Copeland, Jess Nichols, as they stood with a bevy of ladies in colonial costumes and whitened hair giving cordial greetings to guests as they arrived included Mesdames Ray Graham, Jess Jordan, Lawrence Shelton.

The tea table was beautifully draped in a lace cover with silver service at each end. A silver basket with red carnations occupied the center, flanked by candle sticks holding red tapers.

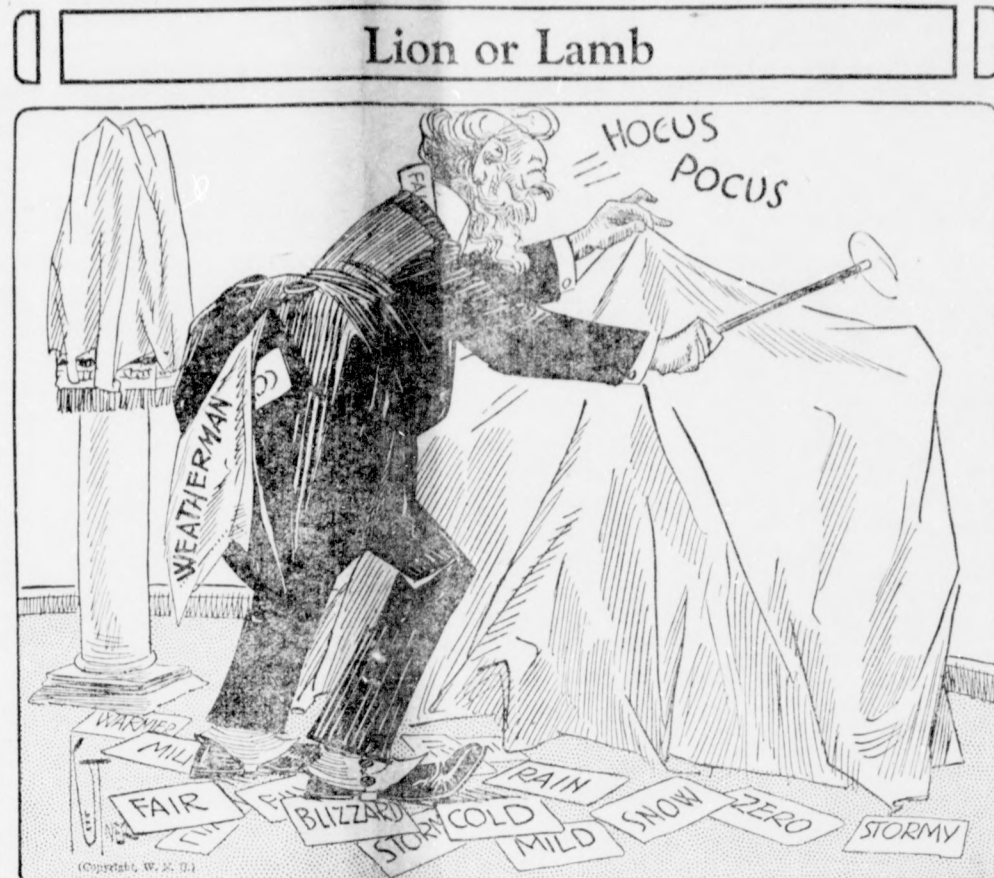

Table honors were done by Mesdames R. M. Alford, L. H. Howard, Walter Morris, Joe Scruggs, Mesdames A. B. Roberts, Cecil Weatherspoon, Hughey Butler, Allen Austin assisted in serving. Mrs. Morris Chowling also in costume presided at the register. Favors were miniature hatchets.

The musical program throughout the afternoon and evening was under the direction of Mrs. Loel Hindman and was given by some of Fulton's most talented and charming musicians.

NOTICE!

On account of the lack of interest shown by the poultry raisers in this community, I hereby declare the Fulton Poultry Association disbanded.

Evans Out For State Senator

Clinton Man Has Strong Backing of Outstanding Democratic Leaders

In this issue of The Advertiser we are authorized to announce the candidacy of John B. Evans, Sr., of Clinton, as a candidate for Senator of the First Kentucky District composed of Graves, Fulton and Hickman counties, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

It is with some degree of pleasure that we make this announcement, knowing Mr. Evans to be a man well qualified to represent the people of this district with the utmost satisfaction. He not only stands as an outstanding Democratic leader in his home county, but his loyalty to party interests is well known throughout this entire section of the State. He has served his home county in public office with distinction, and enters the State Senatorial race with strong backing by some of the leading Democrats in Hickman, Fulton and Graves counties.

Read what he has to say in the following:

Announcement

To the Voters of the First Senatorial District of Kentucky:

After thoughtful consideration I have decided to become a candidate for the office of State Senator, for the First Senatorial District of Kentucky, composed of Graves, Fulton and Hickman counties.

I take this method of making my announcement. I have long had an ambition to be of genuine service to the people of Kentucky. For many years I have enjoyed my acquaintances and friends throughout the District, and if elected to the high office I seek, an opportunity will be afforded to render wholeheartedly real, constructive service to the people I represent, as well as to the State as a whole.

I was born and reared in Hickman county, Kentucky, on a farm, and in these days of depression and distress I am in thorough sympathy with the farmer and his problems. I believe I know the needs of this class of our citizenship and will be willing and able to better his situation in life.

I shall not be new and inexperienced in the problems of public office, having served the people of Hickman county as sheriff for five years; one year by appointment and four years by election; have served as Mayor of the city of Clinton ten years, and have also held the office of Master Commissioner of the Hickman Circuit Court. How well I performed the duties of the offices I have held is a matter of public record, and the people are invited to investigate those records.

If elected to the office, I shall espouse those policies of government that will inure to the benefit of the state and to the people I represent. At all times I will be for, and advocate, all questions and policies looking to an economic administration of the State Government, in order that the taxpayers may be relieved of unnecessary burdens.

I favor good schools, good roads, proper care of inmates of our penal and charitable institutions, and such other charges and agencies of the State that tend to the happiness, moral and religious advancement of the people.

I have been a life long Democrat, having always been active in the councils of my party, believing as I do, that the principles advocated by the founders and leaders of the party more nearly meet the ambitions and desires of a free and patriotic people, than other parties, and it is now my honor to be Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of my county.

It is my ambition to see Kentucky occupy a high place among the States of the Union; and to this end, I shall favor the conservative and legitimate progress of the State in all respects.

If the people of the three counties of the First Senatorial District see proper to elect me to the office I seek, I pledge my best efforts in their behalf.

Thanking the voters in advance for their support and influence, I am,

Yours most respectfully,
JOHN B. EVANS, SR.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION DISBANDED

Elsewhere in these columns is a notice from John T. Watkins, secretary of the Fulton Poultry Association, of the disbandment of that organization. We are sorry to have to print this notice, sorry for the lack of interest and appreciation for what Mr. Watkins has done for the poultry industry in this community.

We are of the firm belief he has done more for poultry than any other one person, and the Fulton Poultry Association, organized six years ago, through his guidance has made wonderful strides in building up the different breeds of poultry.

From the first show held in conjunction with the Fulton County Fair, the poultry show has been the outstanding feature of the fair, and we hope the poultry raisers will get busy and re-organize and continue their good work.

New Surgeon at Curlin-Neill Hospital

Dr. M. W. Haws, Youngstown, Ohio, Comes to Fulton.

Dr. M. W. Haws, of Youngstown, Ohio, has come to Fulton to accept the post of surgeon and urologist at the Curlin-Neill hospital. Dr. Haws is a young man but has already done enough in his profession to indicate that he is to be reckoned with among the coming surgeons of the South. Dr. Haws was born in the eastern part of Kentucky, and took his B. S. degree from the Morris Harvey College, West Virginia. He took his M. D. degree from the University of Louisville.

After finishing his medical college work he accepted a position as interne at the Indianapolis hospital and later was made house surgeon at this 600-bed institution, a position which he held for two years. From this position he went to St. Elizabeth hospital in Youngstown as surgeon and urologist, having held that position for the past two years. He expresses himself as pleased to get back to his native state and Fulton people will welcome him here with much enthusiasm.

Brieflets

Whatever became of the old-fashioned Fulton merchant who used to throw in a pair of suspenders with every suit of clothes he sold?

Another thing Henry Ford deserves credit for is making horse-stealing a lost art.

The trouble with the fellow who "drinks to forget" is that he usually forgets when to stop.

Every Fulton motorist will do well to remember in driving in a big city that if he isn't right in traffic he'll be left in a hospital.

An efficiency expert is the only person we know of who gets paid for minding other people's business.

We've also noticed that the man who sings his own praises seldom gets an encore.

One thing impossible to find anywhere in Fulton is a man who can make a bed to satisfy his wife's ideas of how it should be made.

The good old days were those when young people lived at home, even before they were married.

One reason why men do not put aside temptation like they put aside money is that temptation doesn't pay any interest.

It's our opinion that if the younger generation of Fulton were headed anywhere it would have been there long ago.

Wonder if anybody will ever invent a brake that will stop a car as quickly as a telephone pole will stop it?

Maybe you haven't noticed it, but you can ride every day in a rumble seat and still be behind in your riding.

The good old days around Fulton were those when the farmers put their old clothes on scare-crows instead of on their backs.

The Bible says the meek shall inherit the earth, but it's our opinion that by the time they come into possession of it it won't be worth having.

Wrinkles are a sign of age everywhere except in prunes and automobile fenders.

It's our guess that most any dog would rather be treated as a dog rather than to be used as a substitute for a baby.

Go to the hen, thou sluggard and thou kicker; this noble girl never scolds about hard times—the harder they are the harder she scratches, the more she lays, and the happier she sings when the sun shines. She is busy—cackles, lays and scratches—great example—who ever saw a pessimistic hen? Her fruit may be the lowest in price since the previous Republican panic, but her spirits are right on the mountain top.

Car Filled With Canadian Liquor Captured by Fulton Officers

A large amount of fine bottled Canadian liquor, according to the labels, is now in storage at the City Hall, following the wreck of a rum running car early Wednesday morning on State Line and Carr streets when it ran into a post. The driver of the car escaped, although police have a good description of him. The "booze" at present day prices, is valued at several thousand dollars.

THE HORN-HONKER

There may be a few nuisances around Fulton that it is impossible to get rid of, but the chronic horn-honker is not one of them. There surely must be a way to eliminate him, since there is no difference of opinion as to whether or not he constitutes a nuisance. The horn was put on the auto for a good purpose. When preparing to pass a car on the road, when children are playing on ahead in the street or highway, or when a pedestrian, failing to note the car's approach, steps into its path—then is the time to use the horn. And those are about the only occasions on which it is necessary. To use it to summons someone from a house or store, or to use it in a traffic congestion, constitutes a nuisance and a danger. It is apt to confuse a pedestrian, or a new driver who is trying to get out of a traffic tangle without injury to himself or someone else. Be considerate, and you'll be safe. And that is especially applicable to the horn-honker.

MEN AND MACHINES

Since most everyone in Fulton finds occasion for discussing unemployment, even though conditions are fast growing better, then a recent statement by the president of the American Federation of Labor should be of local interest. He points out that in 1918 one man could make 40 electric light bulbs in a day. The next year a machine was perfected which makes 75,000 bulbs every 24 hours. Each of these machines threw 92 men out of work. In shoe factories 100 modern machines now take the place of 25,000 hand-workers. One man now turns out 32,000 razor blades in the same length of time it took to make 500 in 1913. Two hundred men now make 7,000 to 9,000 auto frames in a day, which formerly was hand-work, necessitating several thousand men to finish the same number in the same time. And this same thing is going on in every branch of industry. The machine has been displacing the worker. Think it over a few minutes and you'll quickly decide that there isn't, after all, very much mystery about the cause of unemployment.

A FALSE ARGUMENT

Since the 1930 revealed that quite a few towns over the country lost in population during the 10-year period, several newspapers have advanced the argument that "the small town is doomed." We get a good laugh out of that, those of us who live in Fulton and in thousands of towns like it. For we know that living conditions in our smaller communities are far in advance of what they were 10 years ago, while they have been growing constantly worse in the cities.

While high wages have lured many small-town residents to the cities, there has, now that good roads and autos are common, sprung up a new movement that is slowly but surely leading the city dweller to seek a home in the smaller town. They become disgusted with conditions, and each year finds more and more of them moving out where fresh air and sunshine make for health, where children escape the dangers of crowded thoroughfares, and are not lured into the evils with which every city is more or less afflicted. It is not a theory; it's an actual fact.

Every year finds the smaller towns taking a firmer place in the nation's social and economic system. They are fast gaining all of the better advantages of city life, while retaining those elements of community life which are most beneficial and wholesome. In short, the small town of the future is going to have the support of both the farm and the city, instead of depending almost wholly on the farm as in the past. It will not vanish from the picture, as some big-town editors predict. Its future is brighter than it has been at any time in the history of America.

WATER SYSTEM
INSTALLATION MEETING

Mr. Matson, field specialist in rural engineering from the University of Kentucky, will conduct an open meeting for farmers and their wives Thursday, March 5, at 1 o'clock at Cayce High School on installation of simple water systems.

Most of the lecture and discussion will be on water systems which the average man can install himself. The best kind of materials to buy, the system which will best suit the individual family needs, proper and healthful methods of sewage disposal, costs of materials, etc., will be among the things Mr. Matson will discuss.

The beginning of a water system, which can be added to as family finances permit, can be secured in a price range of from $15 to $50 is very important, however, that when a start is made the whole system be planned in order to avoid the necessity of tearing out any of the original fixtures.

Anyone contemplating installation of a water system within the next five years will do well to attend this meeting as this work will not be duplicated in this county. The meeting is open to anyone whether co-operating ordinarily in the work of the county or home agent or not.

Persons expecting to install a system soon will do well to get in touch with H. C. Brown, County Agent, of Hickman, or Miss Henning, Home Agent, Fulton, in order that special consideration be given their problem before the meeting and perhaps a personal visit to the farm be arranged for Mr. Matson in the morning.

SOUTH FULTON
SCHOOL NOTES

Ralph Contrell won in the finals of the radio spelling contest at Union City, Saturday. This is his second consecutive year to win the county contest. He will represent Obion county in the state contest at Nashville in April.

The elementary grades are preparing for the inter-scholastic meet to be held in Union City April 10. Contests will be held in arithmetic, geography, grammar, Tennessee history, U. S. history, music, declamation and spelling. We won many honors in this meet last year and hope to win the loving cup this year.

The elementary basketball tournament of Obion county will begin Thursday night, February 26, at the school gymnasium, and continue until Saturday night. Prizes will be awarded to the winning team. This is the first year that the county has had an elementary tournament and much interest is being shown in the coming event.

The sixth grade entertained with a program in chapel Thursday which was enjoyed very much by the student body. The high school boys are expected to take part in the tournament at Trezevant the 26th, 27th and 28th.

The school was presented with four beautiful pictures of Washington, Lincoln, Franklin and Lee last Monday by Mr. Luther Bell. The school is very grateful to Mr. Bell for these beautiful pictures.

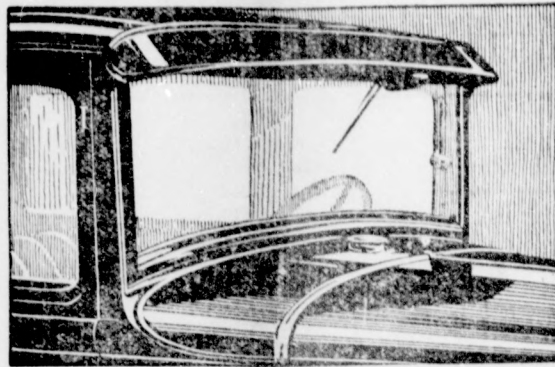

Several new pupils were enrolled Monday. We welcome these new pupils into our school.

Mrs. Joe Harris, Clarence Brundige, Love Brown and Rufus Kimberlin were visitors in school Monday.

Miss Ivora Cantrell, our music teacher, has returned home after a successful operation for appendicitis at the Curlin-Neil hospital.

MILLINERY TRAINING SCHOOL

A short talk on spring fashion trends with the rest of the day devoted to spring millinery will be held at Cayce at 10 o'clock Friday, March 6, under Miss Isabelle Story, Field Specialist in clothing from the University of Kentucky.

FORD

EVERY new Ford is equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof windshield. This is made so that the glass will not fly or splinter under the hardest impact. It has saved many lives and prevented injuries in many automobile collisions.

This shatter-proof glass windshield is just one of many features that make the new Ford a value far above the price. Others are the silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, sturdy steel body construction, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

BEELERTON TEAMS
OPTIMISTIC OVER THEIR PROSPECTS

Beelerton High School is rather optimistic over the prospects for their teams in the District Tournament to be held at Fulton, Kentucky, March 5, 6 and 7.

The Lady Hoopsters are rather fortunate in having six regular players who won first honors for B class High Schools at Fulton last year. Ima Fite, who is pretty well known in the basketball circle, is captain this year and still retains the accurate eye for the 'Iron Ring' and the old time fighting spirit in the game. Playing with Fite as forward is Agnes (Amos) Pharis, who knows her baskets in basketball. Evelyn Byrn is still burning "em" up at center. Watch her go! The regular defense zone is being occupied by Zelma Hodge and Mary Cook, two old time guards.

The new recruits this season are Opal Cook, who caught it from her sister, Mary; Truda Mae Singleton, the little girl with the blue eyes; Margaret Shelton, the girl with the winning smile; and Frances Best, who is always innocent.

Hazel Bostick, who has had quite a little experience, will either go in as forward or center.

This season the Beelerton girls have played 14 games, (nine of these encounters having been with A class schools) and have won nine games, losing five. The total number of points for Beelerton girls is 152, while that of their opponents is 148. In view of the fact that the Beelerton girls will have to meet only B class opponents on the Fulton hardwood, they have a very likely chance of being runners up in the finals.

The boys are less fortunate in having veteran players to carry the "Old Blue and Gold" to victory again this year. Coach Pillow found it necessary to go out and build up a team from boys who had not yet exhibited their accuracy at net tossing. He has accomplished it to a remarkable degree.

It is Foy, the midget forward who hits them from any angle; Batts, the freshman, makes them just for fun; and H. Hodge, who is very good at craps and tip has. His defense is well supported by W. Hodge and Coy Matheny. He also has a host of "bench warmers" whom you will no doubt hear from in the tournament. They are: R. Polsgrove, J. Hicks, W. Bard, J. Bolin and "Professor" Duke.

The Beelerton boys this season have played every school regardless of size that a game could be scheduled with. In playing seventeen games we find that the total points of our opponents is 136 while our team score is 121. Considering that all A class teams will be eliminated they are expecting to make at least a very favorable impression.

Restless
CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

POULTRY

(By J. T. Watkins)

A great many people are complaining about the low price of poultry and eggs, and want to know why the price is so low. Well, to my way of looking at it, there are two or three reasons for the low price of poultry products. First, times are so bad for all branches of farm products most farmers have nothing to sell to obtain ready cash, so they have to fall back on the lowly hen for his cash. Had you ever stopped to think when the farmer wanted ready cash at any time of the year he always had to go to the chicken yard to get the cash? Well, he does. Any time he catches a few hens and takes them to town he can sell them, or if he has a few eggs he can always find a market for them. So that is one reason the price has dropped, every farmer in the country is selling his poultry to buy feed to feed his mules and cows, consequently the price of chickens has been pounded down to a very low figure for there is a larger supply than demand.

Now, why is the supply larger than the demand? Simply this, a great many people who have been enjoying poultry dinners two or three times each week, have been without work and can't afford to have chicken on their table, so when you take into consideration the vast number of people who have stopped eating chickens you will see why the demand is not up to normal. Again lots of farmers have had to sacrifice their flocks to buy other commodities usually raised on the farm, but which were killed out by the recent drouth.

There will be many chicken raisers go out of the business this year, and the ones who stay in the game should come out on top next year, for there will have to be a great many chickens raised to take the place of those sold this year.

The hatcheries all over the country are turning out baby chicks by the hundreds of thousands, and still there will be a shortage of poultry next fall, is my guess. Some of you may say I am too optimistic, but why not look for the bright side?

Speaking of hatcheries, do you know we have a hatchery right here in Fulton that is hatching out baby chicks twice each week that are as good as you can buy in the United States from any hatchery? All eggs hatched to sell come from flocks in this immediate neighborhood, and you can't find any better Rhode Island Reds bought from a hatchery than those hatched from eggs secured from Mrs. Tom Jolly, nor Ernest Carver. When you want Barred Plymouth Rocks you can get chicks hatched from Cecil Burnett's flock; white Wyandottes from the flock of Mrs. Frank Sellers and buff Orpingtons from the flock of Mrs. D. J. Perry. Mr. Drew, the manager of the Fulton Hatchery, buys from several other breeders in this locality that have equally as good flocks that I can't recall just now, but I will say there is no reason for you to send away from Fulton to buy baby chicks, for you can get as good and possibly better than if you sent away for them. Another thing, by buying from your home hatchery you not only help a local industry but you help each one of the breeders who in turn spend the money right here in Fulton and we all get a whack at it.

It has been about a month since I said anything about rabbits, so I guess I will give them a little advertisement. It is nearing the time when we commence to talk about the Easter Rabbit. Well, if nothing goes wrong I will have about thirty or forty baby rabbits that will be the right size for Easter pets for the kiddies. I better not say too much about this or the "boss" will be charging me for an advertisement, but however, I will bring about a dozen up here to sell for Easter bunnies for the kids. So there.

I had a chinchilla doe bring some little ones about a month ago, and one of them was born with only one ear. I have examined it with head and can find no hole where the ear should be. I guess it didn't want to hear too much. I am going to give this rabbit to Col. McAdoo for his menagerie under the big tree by the cigar factory.

I have had quite a number of people ask me about the show at the fair this year, but all I could tell them was "I don't know."

If there is a fair there will be a chicken show, but who will be the superintendent or the judge, I don't know.

If the poultry association is going to kick in with their usual special premiums I don't know.

I am not egotistical enough to think no one else can run the show, for they have shows all over the United States, and I don't run all of them, but I do believe it will be a long time before they have as good a show as the one held last year. There was not a county fair show held in the United States that had 856 chickens entered, and all of them standard bred poultry. That is a mark I set for them to shoot at and it will be hard to beat, and I don't mean maybe.

I'll pull for the show—I won't knock it.

SEEK DEATH CAR DRIVER

Former Fulton Woman Run Over By Auto in Jackson.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 20.—One automobile driver was exonerated and a second one was sought today in connection with the death of Miss Cora Benedict, 60, former Fulton, Ky., school teacher, and magazine writer, who was fatally injured here last night when she was knocked down by one car and then run over by another.

Miss Sylvia Gillespie, of this city, reported to the police that Miss Benedict, in trying to cross the street, stepped into the side of her car and was knocked down.

Witnesses of the accident said a car following the Gillespie auto, ran over the prostrate form of the injured woman, causing a fracture of the skull.

She was found in an unconscious condition by firemen returning from an alarm and rushed to a local hospital, where she died.

Miss Gillespie was released by the police, who said the accident was unavoidable.

The remains of Miss Cora Benedict were brought to Fulton, her former home, and interred in the family burying lot in Fairview Cemetery. Her untimely death brought sorrow to her relatives and large circle of friends here.

MODERN "PROPHETS"

People have always been interested and intrigued by prophets who tell them what is going to happen in the future, so they will be interested in learning that these modern prophecies can easily be analyzed and explained. Take, for instance, Gen. Ludendorff. He prophesied another world-war, to begin in May, 1932, and to end in the annihilation of Germany. Further details of his vision are not important. The fact is that Ludendorff's antics since the war have turned the German people against him. He has disgraced himself in half-dozen different ways. So he got to hating the Germans—all the more because he knew they were right. And, naturally, when he came to prophecy, he just prophesied them all away. It is quite simple. It is the same principle which moves those beggars in Europe to call blessings down on the head of a stranger in anticipation of a dime, but to change the blessing to curses if the dime does not drop into their cup. Modern prophets are all pretty much alike.

Ancient Legend of Lanreath

By LEETE STONE

(Copyright.)

IN the days of good Queen Anne there lived a lovely peasant maid in the village of Lanreath which lies on the emerald bosom of Cornwall, midway between those gems of traditional lore, Looe and Polperro. Her name was Lacy and there was not a single swain in all the community that would not willingly have laid down his life for her—except one; the one who loved her, perhaps, most of all. His name was Richard. Men smiled with a contemptuous curl of the lips when he passed by.

He wore no sword; he was gentle; a lover of peace; a reader of books. It was so he came to be called a secker after soft living in a day and age when the creed of men was everlasting strife and bloodshed.

And Lacy loved Richard; loved him for his sensitiveness; loved him for the romance that lived within him, manifesting itself in glowing words and tender, passionate little verses which he would bring her often on bended knee. But Lacy, loving Richard, would not assure him of it. Not until he proved himself the superior of all her bold and swashbuckling suitors in that mental province known as bravery.

It must be remembered that Lacy lived in a time when to woo and capture a woman's love was a matter of mettle rather than mind.

One night Richard and Lacy strolled in the velvet dusk on wide Lanreath moor, faint stars above them presaging midnight brilliance.

"It is said that Greatover rode the moor last night, Richard," Lacy said, a sudden decision forming within her mind.

"A-ah," Richard shivered ever so slightly. "Let us return before it is fully dark. Perchance he will be abroad again tonight."

"Richard! Richard!" Lacy drew closer to him, half-turned, and clasped her hands over one of his lean, slim shoulders. "We cannot go on like this. I will tell you now that I love you in all ways—but he whom I marry must be the bravest man in Lanreath. Richard, I'll marry you if you'll halt Greatover. Remember, his dying words! That whoever had courage to stand directly in his path with drawn sword and cry 'Halt! Begone!' that would banish him forever from the moor."

Richard's face had whitened with the progress of Lacy's words. Long silence; then his lips were pressed in a thin line.

"Very well, my love; each night shall find me here. If the shadowy steeds trample me into the moor, remember that I tried."

Greatover, he it known, was an avaricious landowner who had lived in Lanreath long ago. He had wasted a fortune in useless lawsuits attempting to seize a wide stretch of the moor for personal property. From time immemorial British moorland had been "common" land; free to all. So embittered was Greatover by his failure and the loss of his gold that he weakened and died. On his deathbed he swore solemnly that he would return o' nights and drive wildly over the moors he had longed to own in a black coach, borne by six sable, headless horses; promising, however, that whoever among the men of Lanreath were brave enough to stand directly in his path and bid him begone, would banish his apparition forever from the moor.

So the years went by and always in the moonlight Greatover, his black coach and six headless horses haunted the moor, careering wildly; the shade of Greatover himself, half risen from his driving seat, leaning forward grinning madly and lashing first the lead horses, then their followers, with a long, snakelike whip.

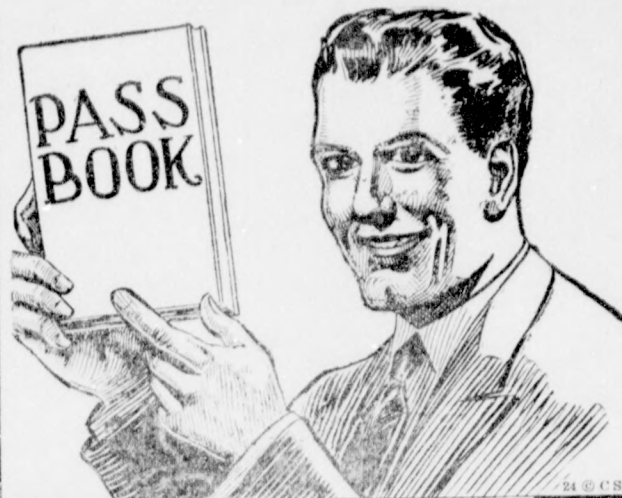

Richard went home after Lacy's declaration; wrote a farewell sonnet to her, for he verily believed his last hours were at hand; buckled on the sword he had not worn since being instructed in its use; mounted a white horse and rode forth at midnight to the middle of Lanreath moor. There he stationed himself and waited in the soft blaze of moonlight.

Hardly had he paused when far down against the dim horizon edge he discerned a swaying black blot which seemed, slowly, indeed, to grow larger and larger. His eyes glared upon what he knew to be the phantom approach of Greatover and his unearthly equipage, fear took hold of Richard and wound itself like a tight stricture around his heart. Then of a sudden, as the sepulchral vision came closer and closer, and the staccato thud of ghostly feet became audible, that courage which is of the soul rather than the muscle flooded Richard like a wave.

"For Lacy and for Lanreath!" he breathed, clenching and poised the slim rapier in his hand. In the weird light he discerned blood streaming from the severed necks of the six steeds; heard and saw Greatover's maniacal laugh! Wicked hoofs were reaching up to tear and trample him from his mount. It seemed as if someone else shouted loudly:

"Halt! Begone!"

Richard was alone in the moonlight. Greatover was gone, never to return. All the village folk worshiped him and men smiled no more, but were respectful when he approached. And Lacy told her children of the bravery of their father.

ELDERLY HOLSTEIN
STEADY PRODUCER

Beauty Segis De Kol Is Winning Renown.

Although just an "ordinary" pure-bred Holstein cow and worth on the block about $50 at present butcher's prices, Beauty Segis De Kol, owned by the Upper Peninsula experiment station of Chatham, Mich., has become famous throughout the state of Michigan and her sturdy production and reproduction year after year are winning renown for herself and her unbroken string of living descendants throughout the nation.

Beauty is the sole survivor of a number of cows purchased for the establishment of a foundation herd at the Chatham station in 1914. At that time the Upper Peninsula was largely undeveloped and animals of rugged constitution were required. Soon after her purchase, Beauty dropped a heifer calf that is still in the herd and she and her descendants have produced more than 70 calves of which nearly two-thirds have been females. In the station herd are some 20 head that are descendants of Beauty that include living daughters, granddaughters, and great-granddaughters. Twenty-nine male descendants of Beauty have been in service and twenty-six of them are in nine different counties of the Upper Michigan peninsula.

No advanced registry records have ever been made on Beauty, but the station herd was put under the Holstein herd test plan and she is credited with a herd test record by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America with 11,772 pounds of milk containing 370.4 pounds of butterfat on three daily milkings in 290 days, and this record was begun when fifteen years old. Cow-testing records and the barn milk sheets indicate that she has produced in her lifetime a total exceeding 150,000 pounds of milk and 4,000 pounds of butterfat since she first freshened back in 1915. Her best record, according to the barn milk sheets, was made in 1920 when at seven years of age she produced 15,184 pounds of milk containing an estimated total of 455.52 pounds of butterfat. Her best C. T. A. record, begun when fourteen years old, amounted to 12,546 pounds of milk containing 376.38 pounds of butterfat.

Dairy Profits Largely Under Operator's Control

A great many dairymen give a lot more attention to the price of butterfat than they do to the cost of producing it. Price, of course, is an important factor and is worthy of consideration, but the cost of producing a pound of butterfat, taking dairy farmers as a group, varies a great deal more on different farms than the price thereof, even under the most favorable market conditions. This is a well known fact among progressive dairymen, but apparently not among the rank and file of those who milk cows regularly. On that account it is a matter worthy of emphasis—worthy of much thought and study.

From a summary of the yearly records of hundreds of thousands of cows belonging to herd improvement associations, the disadvantage of maintaining low producing cows has been brought out in a very striking manner—in a way that should make the owners of that class sit up and take notice. More than that—it ought to cause them to do something about it.

Dairy Facts

Unless a farmer has an abundance of hay made from alfalfa, the clovers, soy beans, or other legumes for his cows in milk, it is difficult to make profit.

A pen of calves that consumed only four gallons of water daily when it was kept before them at ordinary temperatures, drank 15 gallons daily when fed warm after feeding.

There is no question but alfalfa hay is one of the very best if not altogether the best and most valuable roughage available to the cattleman and the dairyman in particular.

Good cows fed well and properly cared for will return profits even under adverse conditions. Join the local cow testing association so the ability of each cow may be determined.

Get the most from purchased grains by feeding dairy cows 16 per cent protein mixtures with alfalfa and clover hay, 20 per cent with mixed hay, and 24 per cent with timothy.

Only 25 per cent of all the cows of milking age in New York state are on test in dairy, herd, improvement associations or dairy record clubs.

In 1920, New York dairymen had 364 herds that averaged 300 pounds of butter fat; in 1929 there were 308 such herds.

When a farmer feeds all of the cows in the herd about the same amount of grain, some are underfed, some are overfed, and others get about what they should have.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Old World Recipes By HELEN SCHAUFFLER Domestic Science Expert

To most of us old China means incredibly lovely bits of pottery, delicate color prints, gorgeous silks and intricately embroidered fabrics, along with fragments of lovely poetry. Many of us do not know that these ancient epicures of the highest order.

We are under the impression that the Chinese have subsisted since before Confucius upon chowmein, chop suey and rice, with now and then a bird's nest soup. As a matter of fact, their diet presents a bewildering variety, ranging all the way from peacocks' tongues to the most delicious pork dishes, recipes for three of which are given here.

Pork Chops with Ginger—Pepper loin chops and dredge in flour which has been mixed with one tablespoon of sugar. Sauté with a little fat until brown on both sides. Add to the chops, salt, one cup of water, one-half teaspoon of lemon juice and a small piece of preserved ginger for each chop. Cook uncovered until tender. Do not turn the chops.

Roast Pork with Chestnuts—Wipe four pounds of loin of pork. Pepper well and dredge with a little flour. Shell and peel two cups of chestnuts. Peel and cut into small quarters two cooking apples. (One cup of dried apples may be substituted). Boil these for five minutes in two cups of water with two tablespoons of sugar. When the roast has been in the oven for three-quarters of an hour surround it with chestnuts and apples. Pour the syrup over the whole. Baste frequently until pork is brown and tender.

Pork Chops Baked with Pineapple—Cover the bottom of a shallow baking dish with slices of fresh or canned pineapple. Sprinkle with two tablespoons of sugar. On top of these lay peppered pork chops. Place in a hot oven for ten minutes. When the pork fat has fried out a little, salt well and pour pineapple juice sweetened with one teaspoon of sugar over the chops. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes. Garnish and serve.

Lesson for March 1

JESUS SENDING FORTH MISSIONARIES

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore said he unto them, the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-22.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Trying Out His Helpers.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helpers of Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Missionary Task.

The sending forth of the seventy was for a special time and purpose. The missionary enterprise today has much in common with that of that day, but there are certain essential differences which should be recognized.

1. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).
1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). They went forth not merely because of an inner urge but because of personal and direct appointment. Only those should go forth as missionaries who are appointed by the Lord.
2. Sent two by two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel, and support each other.
3. The reason for their appointment (v. 2). It was the greatness of the harvest and the fewness of the laborers.

4. The force back of missions (v. 2). The disciples were instructed to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. Prayer indited by the Holy Spirit has been back of every missionary enterprise.

II. The Seventy Instructed (vv. 3-10).

1. As to the source of their commission (v. 3). "I send you." Everything depends upon the authority of the commission. No missionary should go forth without the consciousness of being sent by the Lord.

2. As to the dangers confronting them (v. 3). Missionaries thrust forth by the Lord will be exposed to deadly peril.
3. As to their support (v. 4). Being sent forth by the Lord, they were to look to him to provide for their need.

4. As to the speed of their mission (v. 4). So urgent was the need of the speedy evangelization of the Jewish territory that the distractions of social intercourse were to be omitted.

5. As to behavior in homes where received (vv. 5-9).

a. Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessing in preaching the gospel.

b. Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than are commonly provided.

c. Heal the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

6. The awful fate of those who reject Christ's message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ and reject the Heavenly Father who sent him.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their report (v. 17). They were highly elated. They found that they could not only heal the sick, but cast out demons also. It is easy even in Christian service to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 18-24). (a) He told them that it was no surprise to him (vv. 18 and 19). With prophetic eye, he saw their success as indicating that time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of his mighty triumph over Satan, he assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. (b) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. (c) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The consciousness that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto him and that only as men received him could they know the Father caused him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (d) Congratulates the disciples (vv. 23, 24). He assured them that they were sharing privileges which had been denied to many of the prophets and kings.

By His Presence

When God possesses us we are possessed by his presence, and the Holy Spirit cannot be in us without purifying our thoughts, desires and motives and so equipping us for his service.—W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Boundless Possibilities

Oh, I am staggered as I think of the boundless possibilities that God opens before the man whose whole nature is filled with His Spirit!—Selected.

IMPORTANT Announcement of Interest to Every Home Without Electricity

Opening Display and Sale of the New INSTANT-LIGHT ALADDIN KEROSENE MANTLE LAMP

"REDUCING"

BEWARE OF POOR SEED

The approach of seeding time finds the residents of Fulton and surrounding territory turning their thoughts to crops and gardens. Actual work of planting will be started almost before you know it, so it really isn't too early to give attention to this all-important matter.

This year, more than ever, those who insist on a revenue out of the ground must make every lick count. There is no call for a tremendous over-production, but there is need to see that nothing is wasted; that what you plant brings a profit in some form or another. It is no time to experiment. Planting a certain class of seed simply because that variety may be a bit cheaper than a tested and tried kind is not good investment. If there is any one thing that should be as near perfect as it is possible to secure, it is the seed that you put in the ground.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in actual cash, to say nothing of long hours of back-breaking labor, are wasted every year through the sowing of poor grades of seed. And yet, there is no occasion for doing so. Tested varieties and guaranteed grades are to be had. The cost may be a little more, but the yield far more than makes up for the difference. This year you want to be sure of your harvest. You cannot afford to waste either your money or your time. For that reason you should determine now, while you are starting to plan your spring work, that you will put in the ground only the best that money can buy. It will be cash in your pocket when the ground gives you your return.

WORKING FOR CLINTON MAN

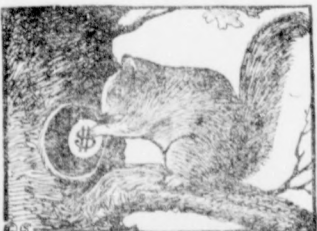

Party Here In Interest Of John B. Evans

Judge E. J. Bennett, Jailer F. Massey, Willis Bond and C. B. Byashe of Clinton were in the city Friday afternoon, in the interest of John B. Evans of Clinton, who announces in today's issue of The Advertiser his candidacy for the State Senate from the counties of Hickman, Graves and Fulton.

These friends of Mr. Evans stated that the prospect was very bright for the election of Mr. Evans and it is not thought now that he will have any opposition for the office. Strong support has been enlisted in Graves county, and much work is being done in this county also.

Birth Announcement

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Belew received a message Monday announcing the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Otis Howard of Oklahoma City. Mrs. Howard is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Belew and their many friends will be glad to know that she is doing nicely.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT CAUSE OF DEATH

Jesse Speed, 15 Years Old, Walks Through Window While Asleep.

Jesse Speed, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Speed, died Tuesday morning at 1:30 at the home of his parents as the result of a peculiar accident. The young man was addicted to sleep-walking and arose Monday night soon after falling asleep, believing, as he said later, that the smokehouse was on fire. He attempted to walk through a closed window in his bedroom and suffered severe cuts on one of his thighs. He was taken to Dr. Dudd's office for treatment, and after the wounds were dressed was returned home to the Gus Bard farm, on the Mayfield highway, some three miles north of the city. He had lost much blood and this, together with the shock, is said to have caused his death later in the night.

The funeral service and burial were held at Walnut Grove church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. C. H. Warren conducting the services and the Winstead & Jones Company had charge of the burial.

CRUTCHFIELD CLUB

The Homemakers' Clubs are like the little song that we know, "The more we are together, the happier we are."

Each meeting gets more and more interesting.

Eleven members and two visitors were present at the last meeting.

After the business meeting, the home improvement leaders gave us our first lesson on kitchen improvement. Many suggestions were made on what each member could do to make this work a success.

They fully explained what is meant by scoring the kitchen and how it should be done. Pictures were used to illustrate different changes that can be made in the kitchen to make it more convenient and attractive.

A demonstration of scoring a kitchen was given and score cards given to each member to score their own kitchen.

These lessons should appeal to all women, as the kitchen is their work-shop, and every convenience possible should be made.

Mrs. W. V. Little gave us a short but interesting talk on her trip to Farm and Home Week, at Lexington, Ky.

The social hour was spent with contests and stunts. The most interesting was "A baby contest." Just imagine seeing the pictures of our members when they were babies and guessing at who they were.

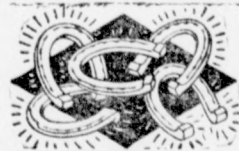

Flowers and seed were exchanged.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. R. T. Rudd, on March 19th.

The projects will be: The back saving kitchen and early summer care of lawns.

We were glad to have Mrs. Cherry and Mrs. Nichols visit our club and we invite others.

MRS. S. A. WAGGENER, Secretary.

Community Building

New Importance Given to City Shade Trees

A writer in The American City calls attention to the fact "that nature is a better artist than man when his work is viewed from the air." As seen from an altitude of 1,000 feet or more the rounded hills, the verdant valleys dotted with lakes, the groves of trees and the contrasting flats of foliage of forest, orchard, hedgerow and glade, present a most satisfying picture. But the appearance of the works of man are mostly a blemish, so long as it been the practice to think of anything upon the roof as out of sight. Thus to the eye of the traveler in the air is presented, wherever towns appear, a sad array of ugly roofs, sooty chimney pots and featureless architectural members supposed by their designers not to matter because not seen from the street below.

The subject presents an entirely new problem. Already there is sufficient importance to air travel to make it worth while to consider the air view of every city. And those who realize the importance which may attach to the subject in the near future, point out that the present practice of sacrificing beautiful shade trees for the sake of street widening, may soon be regretted vainly. It has been remarked in Germany, where this air-consciousness is well advanced, that to modernize Berlin from the architect's new air viewpoint will be simplified greatly by the fact that the city is full of beautiful trees, so massed and aligned as to give a most favorable air view.—Kansas City Times.

Beauty and Utility in Miniature Greenhouse

Twenty-five dollars is estimated as the cost of a greenhouse that can be installed in the average home, following the arrival of midget golf courses and similar institutions.

A home greenhouse for persons of moderate means, described in Woman's Home Companion, consists of a few window sashes of small size; three storm windows, a little lumber and weather strip and a bit of ingenuity. It can be built outside of any ordinary window and will give the illusion of looking out into a garden, besides furnishing much recreation.

A sample greenhouse tried out grew marigolds, calendulas, brodiaeas, heliotrope, cyclamen, lobelia, mignonette and a climbing stephanotis, besides vegetable and flower plants for spring planting. Five minutes a day sufficed for attention to the attractive miniature greenhouse.

Beautifying School Lots

Hundreds of our Missouri rural schools need water-tight roofs vastly more than they need shrubbery, exclusion of children bearing guests in winter more than they need flower borders, and a good coat of paint more than they need velvet lawns. At many of them a lawnmower would be far less of a blessing than even one of the rusty pumps to obviate the necessity of carrying the water half a mile or more. Nevertheless the Virginia plan of beautifying school lots has a suggestion to be pressed, with due sense of proportion, of course, on Missouri rural districts. The benefits to pupils and to parents as well as assuming guardianship over gem spots of green set in the midst of smiling fields are well understood by teachers.

Why, indeed, should successive school lots be included among the shabbiest of run-down premises encountered in a day's ride along the splendid new highways?—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Be a Booster

When times are hard it behooves every good citizen to be a booster for his own town. Knocking is like a run on a bank. After you have started it it goes like wildfire and like a snowball it gathers as it goes. Soon signs of depression appear, people are afraid to spend, afraid to venture, and the once good times begin to crumble and the town is down at the heels. Be a booster. It gives courage. It is catching and soon your united efforts will have the old place ringing with cheer and good fellowship and hope in the future will be the keynote of good times.—Marie Blackburn, Pa., in Grit.

Smoke Causes Big Loss

Smoke which results from the use of bituminous or soft coal and from the improper combustion of other fuels in the heating and power plants of factories, homes and public buildings does an estimated damage of more than $500,000,000 a year in the United States, according to figures made public by the Fuel Research Laboratories.

Consider Home's Entrance

The entrance should be hospitable and so placed as to help the harmony of the building—not necessarily in the exact center of the front wall, but in harmony with the other features of the house.

Swamp Area Made Useful

A swamp area of 288 acres near Minneapolis, Minn., when reclaimed will contain a complete recreational field, with playgrounds, golf course and a 50-acre lake.

From Real Life

MUCH has been written about the advisability of keeping on hand an emergency shelf of canned foods, but the emphasis is always laid on what a resource this precaution is in case of the arrival of unexpected guests. Here is a concrete instance from real life in which an emergency shelf of canned foods saved shopping, time, trouble, and enabled the housewife to keep a place open for her maid. Let her tell the story in her own words:

Spanning the Gap

"It was a blow when my maid fell ill. I had trained her and liked her, and I didn't feel like beginning all over again with another one. But she had to have an operation. That meant two weeks in the hospital and at least two more weeks for her convalescence. How was I going to run the household all by myself for a month?"

"That's where my emergency shelf came in. The first day my husband came home to luncheon, I surprised him with some delicious oven-baked beans and Boston brown bread. But the oven in which they had been cooked in big iron pots were up in a big New England cannery, and not in my own home.

"For dinner that night I had as a foundation for the meal, a whole baked chicken which also came, all prepared and ready to heat, out of a can, and some rice. During all that month I went very seldom to market. I got enough different kinds of canned foods these times to span the gap and save my maid."

A Happy Wedding

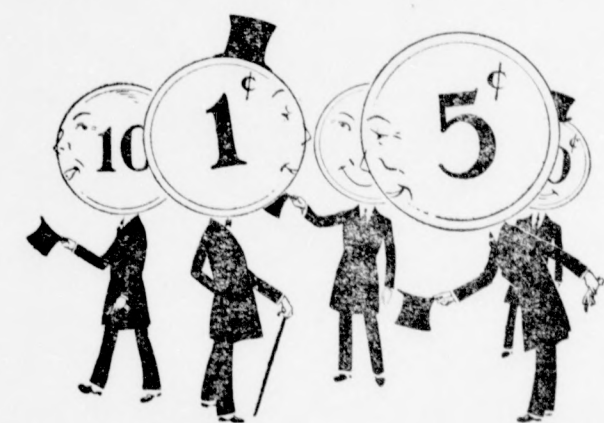

THEY know what to eat down South. There are many marriages of foods in this country such as ham and eggs, pork and beans, and roast pork with apple sauce, but below the Mason and Dixon line apple sauce is indissolubly wedded to ginger bread.

And how good it is in that combination! The smooth, slightly sweet consistency of the apple sauce seems to blend more than harmoniously with the tang of the ginger. Made with the best grade of juicy apples—as it invariably is in the canned product—apple sauce is a most delectable as well as healthful food.

Apple sauce has many other friends among the foods in addition to ginger. Cream cheese, grated cheese, dates, pineapple and ginger ale all can be combined with it in pies, muffins, biscuits, salads and cake, but we do not wish to suggest any infidelity to the beatific Southern union mentioned above, so we are giving here a recipe in which apple sauce remains strictly true to ginger.

A Fine Pudding

Apple Ginger Tapioca: Add one-third cup minute tapioca to three cups boiling water, and let cook in a double boiler until transparent, stirring often. Add one-third cup sugar, one cup canned apple sauce, two tablespoons ginger syrup and one slightly beaten egg yolk. Cook a few minutes more, cool slightly and add three tablespoons chopped preserved ginger and one stiffly beaten egg white. Serve very cold with either plain or whipped cream. This recipe will serve eight persons.

The Cent Comes Back

PENNIES are getting popular again for other purposes besides buying newspapers. They associate regularly now with dimes, nickels and quarters and it's more than a bowing acquaintance. For, as prices come down, more and more purchases call for old cents. You would need a lot of them, for instance, to buy the ingredients of the following bargain dinner for four. Though it costs only fifty-five cents, you would have to make change with pennies four times if each purchase were made separately. Here are the specifications for a dinner for four people which you can purchase for that small price.

Cream of Celery Soup 10¢
Macaroni and Tomato 13¢
Liverwurst 13¢
Bread and Butter 6¢
Crushed Pineapple Sauce 13¢

This provides about half a loaf of bread, two-thirds of a can of crushed pineapple, eight to nine slices of liverwurst, and here are the recipes for the made dishes in this dinner.

Simple and Satisfying

Cream of Celery Soup: Combine the contents of one can of celery soup with one can of water, season to taste with salt and pepper, and heat to boiling.

Macaroni and Tomato: Boil one-third of a package of macaroni till tender, then drain. Simmer the contents of a No. 2 can of tomatoes with one-half bay leaf, two slices onion one teaspoon sugar and salt and pepper to taste for ten minutes. Remove bay leaf and add to the macaroni.*
