FULTON CHOSEN AS DISTRICT CENTER

Indications that Fulton is being recognized as an important distribution center is exemplified by the number of concerns which are considering the city as a natural point of distribution.

One of the most recent companies to choose Fulton for a district office is Colonial Baking Co., located at 228 Fourth Street with Mr. S. T. May as Sales supervisor.

A Clean Up and Paint Up Week

A is for alley, that we should keep clean; B is for basement, neat to be seen; C is for "Clean Up," begin it today; D is for dirt, drive him away.

E is for Emma, who burnt the old cot; F is for father, who helped me a lot; G is for garbage, we burn every day; H is for health, that dirt drives away.

I is for idle, that does not mean us; J is for James, who cleans without fuss; K is for Kenneth, who killed many a rat; L is for Larry, the mice fear this cat.

M is for mosquitoes, destroy breeding places; N is for never neglect dirty places; O is for odor, prevent it you can; P is for paint, making things spic and span.

Q is for question, is this Clean Up Week? R is for rags that the ragmen seek; S is for safety, as well as for soap; T is for trash, to hard it's a joke; U is for useful, be this to your school; V is for vicinity, keep it clean is your rule; W is for willingness, to help win the prize; X is in x-exercise, "Use it!" GOOD FAIRY COMES TO TWIN CITIES

To save the lives of our citizens, young and old, up my street and your street, the Good Fairy Civic Pride waves the magic wand which is the signal for all of us to join in and clean the attic, the basement and all in between, and don't forget the front yard and the back yard.

This great National Movement, "Clean Up and Paint Up," which comes to Fulton and South Fulton, once a year, is with us again. The date set by the Young Men's Business Club and the mayors of the twin-cities, is May 20th to May 27th.

Let's make Fulton and South Fulton "the city beautiful." It can be done, if each one of us determines to be a good neighbor. Clean up and paint up. Your neighbor's civic pride will start him doing the same. It is infectious; once you start, it can't be stopped.

Every home on every individual street has a real responsibility. Just as one rotten apple will eventually spoil the entire barrel, just so one run-down place will spoil the looks of the block in which you live.

Remember the beauty of flowers, the message of affection. Window boxes, porch boxes, flower beds, all are colorful thoughts and they tell those who pass, as well as those who call, that here lives cheerfulness.

Colorful porch furniture is so easy to have. The quick drying enamels of today make the decoration of porch furniture a pleasure and bright colors add to the appearance of a home.

Clean and paint your house. A spick and span home with a garden is indicative of good living. The passerby says, "Whoever lives here has much pride."

Let's all pull together. I'll do my share, you do yours, and it will be the HOME BEAUTIFUL, the CITY BEAUTIFUL, the city healthful.

RESEARCH WORK WILL BE CARRIED ON AT REELFOOT DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Summer research at Reelfoot Lake will be carried on by a staff of about eight, Prof. C. L. Baker of Southwestern, director of the Biological Station, at Walnut Log, Tenn., said yesterday.

Prof. Baker spoke on Reelfoot yesterday before the Tennessee Academy of Science, which originated the station. Most perplexing problem at the earthquake-formed lake is the growth of vegetation which is gradually choking the lake.

The planting of eroded land will greatly increase wild life, Albert J. Marsh, area biologist at Humboldt, told the academy at the last of the two-day sessions. He pointed out that removal of all birds would mean destruction of mankind because of the vast increase of insect life that would ensue.

MOTHERS LIVE FOREVER

A person could write a million words about love, devotion and service. Then it could be spoken in one single word—Mother. For mothers embrace everything which makes for better living.

Mother is one person who devotes a lifetime to lovable service and lifelong devotion. Mother is one person, one subject the world over. Regardless of race or creed, country or continent, mother love stands out as the survival and symbol of righteousness and faith.

Wars may change living conditions and boundary lines, but mother love will continue to be the greatest reality of our existence.

Mother lives on forever—whether she is here on earth or beyond—she is always present to serve.

A person is said to be dead only when forgotten. That is why mothers are always with us. Forget-me-nots of love which are always in bloom.

If your mother is here for you to enjoy, serve her well by recognizing greatness and your own obligations. Make every day of her life Mother's Day. If you think this way, make it a legal holiday for mother by your acts of kindness and consideration. When you do this, you are only increasing your own share of sunshine to bask in.

Count each day a blessed one that is shared with your mother. To those of us who are less fortunate, and count on our memories for comfort, we too are blessed. Mother continues to remain in our hearts. Many memories remain in our hearts to keep our love always present.

The best part of our character shows us the eternal plant of love which memories of mother keep ever green.

Mother love is still our shrine of worship. It is one of our most precious possessions, offered to us in unselfish devotion and service. Therefore, keep your heritage of mother love sacred. It is your part of heaven on earth.

From the day we are born until the day beyond, memories of mother will always linger on.

CONQUERING DISEASE

Americans have added nineteen years to the average length of life in the past hundred years. Eleven of these nineteen years have been added since 1900, according to health reports gathered by the Hospital Research Institute, Chicago.

Efforts made to lift the national health standard have been aided tremendously by the growing knowledge that the hospital health center in which this battle of science is waged to defeat disease and accident, the Institute declares.

"Contagious and infectious diseases are being traced to their causes," continued the Institute. "They are being defeated by isolation and asepsis, sterilization, serum, and other modern methods which improve from year to year. Because of advances made in science and the medical professions, the mortality rate for tuberculosis has been reduced more than 66% in the past three decades. Pneumonia and influenza deaths have been reduced 24%, measles 87%, whooping cough 59%, diphtheria 90%, and scarlet fever 87% in the same period.

"There is still much good work to be accomplished in the wear-and-tear-out diseases, such as those attacking the nerves and heart, and the conquering of cancer. Untiring medical research, with the aid of modern hospital technique, is making progress in this direction."

THE STOREKEEPERS

Those of us who are past middle age can remember when the kindly neighbor whose job it was to sell us the necessities of life was known as the storekeeper. The name was quite appropriate. He bought a stock of goods, hung out a sign, sometimes, and waited for his neighbors and friends to drop in and buy.

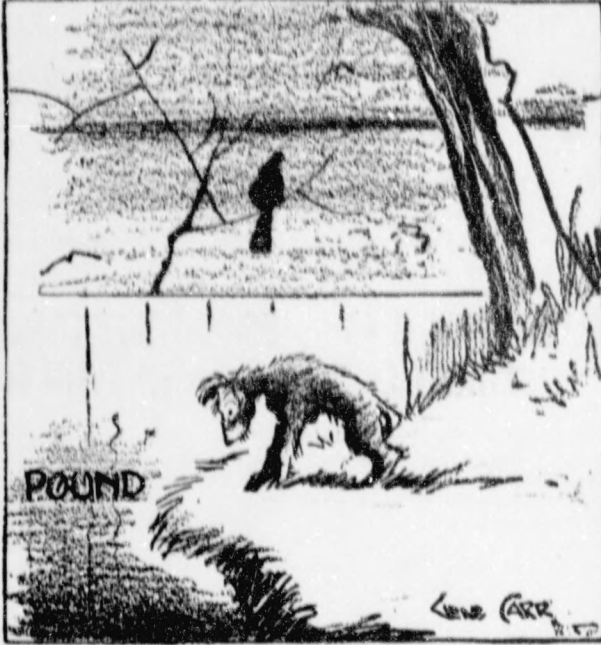

Later on his son inherited the business, if it had not gone to the wall, adopted a slightly more aggressive attitude toward the securing of trade, and called himself a merchant. Here and there a venturesome soul began to really study business methods and actually plan for greater volume and a wider trade radius. Some became real business men and reaped rich reward.

Later still, the department store and mail order house came into existence, followed by the chain stores.

In spite of these revolutionary developments, however, thousands of independent merchants are making money today. They are doing it through adopting scientific methods of buying and selling, through the employment of systematic accounting, through a study of their customer's requirements, and through advertising.

But a great many flun such new-fangled ideas, and stay in the rut in which their forefathers ran their course. They are headed for bankruptcy and don't know why. But to anyone with a fundamental knowledge of modern business practice the reason is plain. These failures are not business men, nor even merchants—they are only storekeepers.

20 MILLION PHONES

Statistics are usually rather dull reading, but some facts recently compiled concerning the world's telephones might well be a source of pride to the people of this country. For the United States now has one-half of all the telephones in the world.

The world total was estimated to be 41 million before the outbreak of the present war in Europe, which has doubtless reduced the number considerably in the belligerent countries, and approximately 20 million of these are in the United States. New York City alone has more than all of France, and three times as many as the whole continent of Asia.

Americans make more than 90 million telephone calls every day, or over 1,000 each second, which is an average of about 223 a year for every man, woman and child in the country. Taken together, people in the rest of the world make only about 15 calls per capita annually. Nearly one-half of the world's telephones are dial instruments, and the proportion of these is about the same in this as in other countries. About two-fifths of the world's telephones are government operated, the largest public system being that of Germany.

The total length of telephone wires in the United States is approximately 93 million miles, or exactly enough to reach from the earth to the sun at certain times during the year.

HANDICAPS OVERCOME

An anonymous writer has called attention to some of the handicaps which were overcome by those whom the world recognizes as geniuses and leaders of the first rank. Among those mentioned are the following: Demosthenes, who became one of the world's greatest orators, stuttered in his youth.

Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte, two of the greatest generals and statesmen of all time, were epileptics. So was Mohammed, who founded a religion which now has more than 200 million adherents.

Alfred the Great, considered "the ample should be inspiring to any who are inclined to complain about minor afflictions or difficulties.

WOMAN DRIVERS SAFER

Most men have the idea that they are better automobile drivers than women, and many wise cracks have been made about the supposed menace of lady drivers to traffic safety. But according to a recent report by Dr. Harry De Silva of Yale, the shoe is on the other foot.

As director of the driver's research bureau of the university, Dr. De Silva made a survey covering 3,000 motorists of both sexes, as a result of which he concluded that women are safer drivers than men. He said in an address before a training school for license examiners.

"We found that while women drive about half the mileage of men, they have only one-third as many accidents. This shows that women are still safer drivers, and that they do not have fewer accidents merely because there are fewer women drivers."

He also declared that young drivers have more accidents in proportion to miles driven than older ones. For example, motorists between the ages of 20 and 25 had three times as many accidents as those over 40 years of age.

Those driving alone were found to drive faster than those having other persons in the car, and those driving slowest were generally fathers who had members of their own families as passengers.

Dr. De Silva's findings appear to have been made as the result of an impartial and scientific study of driving habits. In spite of this, however, a good many men will probably remain unconvinced that a woman is a safer driver than a male of the species.

COST OF ARMAMENTS

It is difficult to realize what a crushing economic burden war and preparations for war are placing on the peoples of the world, to say nothing of the terrible sacrifices of human lives which war entails.

We think, and rightly, that the expenditures being made for national defense by our own country are enormous, but relatively they are small compared with those of other great powers. This is illustrated by an estimate given in the United States News, which compares military expenditures of various nations with their national income. It says:

"Where the United States devotes less than 3 per cent of national income to defense, Britain is devoting 30 per cent, Japan 30 per cent, France 40 per cent, Germany as much as 50 per cent."

No estimates are given for Russia, Italy or other nations, but it is known that all are making expenditures for armaments far greater than ever before. And in every one still heavier burdens will be laid on the people as the theaters of war are extended, as now seems inevitable.

Appalling as all this is, the situation must be faced by every nation, however much the people may desire peace. Even the most ardent pacifist can now realize that the United States must arm mightily for national defense—and we may as well prepare to pay the price.

TIMELY TOPICS

Arrested for intoxication, Mike Pawlik of Chicago told Judge Hermes that he was despondent because his wife wanted to sell him for $500. Mrs. Pawlik admitted that she would even sell him for $50, or give him away if she couldn't do any better. The judge said he would take him and then sent him to jail.

In New York City a census enumerator was greeted by a woman who opened the door and threw a glass of water in his face. Then the lady apologized profusely and explained that she thought it was her husband, whom she was expecting to come home about that time.

You Can't Tell a Cop Anything

By IRVIN S. COBB

THE man who told me this story vouched it as being true in all essential details. Late at night on a highway near Sheep-head Bay a motorcycle cop pursued an automobile which seemed to him to be exceeding the speed limit. Overtaking the alleged offender, he waved a signal to the driver and the latter drew up alongside the curbing and halted. The policeman, have also halted, dismounted and got out his deadly little summons book.

"What's the trouble, officer?" inquired the person at the wheel. "You're going to get a Ticket for fast driving, that's what," snapped the cop. He poised his pencil. "I want your name and you can talk about it to the judge tomorrow morning." "I can't do that." "Why can't you?" "Because I am the judge." "Aw, tell it to Sweeney," growled the incredulous policeman. "I can't do that, either. I am Sweeney." And so it was—Magistrate Sweeney of one of the Municipal police courts.

MADSTONES
 We have become so accustomed to the Pasteur treatment for hydrophobia that even the most ignorant are easily convinced of its efficacy. Two generations ago such was not the case, as all of the middle-aged people can recall. When a person was bitten by a mad dog, the case was hopeless and likely to be horrible. Not far from my home neighborhood just about the time of my birth a young woman was bitten by a dog that she was petting. Nothing was thought of the matter at the time; a few weeks later she developed all of the symptoms of the hydrophobia and died a few days later in the greatest agony. This story spread everywhere in our section and gave all of us cold creeps, coupled with a feeling of absolute helplessness. I do not know whether any one tried a madstone on her or not, probably not, for I recall that the mere break in the skin had long ago healed. And that reminds me of the uses of this mysterious stone that is likely to be found in every community.

In certain members of the cattle family there forms in the digestive system an accretion somewhat resembling stone. Older people who discovered these stones piously preserved them and applied them to fresh snake or dog bites. The theory was that a madstone, particularly one obtained from the paunch of a deer would adhere to the wound and would draw out all of the poison. To make the stone give up its poison, it was necessary to soak it in sweet milk, but I have forgotten how long this process had to go on. Old-timers used to tell me that the stone after clinging for a while to the bitten place would turn green, showing that it had drawn out the poison. I do not remember whether any one of my acquaintances had ever actually tested one of these miraculous talismans, but the faith in them was so strong that a mere man hardly dared lift up his voice against them. I am sure that I grew up to believe in them as implicitly as I believe in calomel and quinine. How this superstition grew up I cannot even guess. Probably the very presence of a stone-like object in the stomach of a cow or a deer made it appear something queer and likely to be of magic use. There might have been other uses long ago, but this one great use was the only one left when I could first remember. One wonders whether some of the modern snake fanatics may not have a stock of these magic stones to protect themselves in case of actual snake bite. This custom of treating snake or dog bites again suggests the thought that many of us civilized ones would resort to a madstone if we were desperately bitten and could not get any immediate or trained medical service. The family of such a victim would try anything, and why should they not? When the psychology that we have built up from long association with science suddenly meets a new obstacle, almost any of us returns momentarily or longer to the primitive days when we were distinctly of the folk. Before you laugh too much at a madstone's powers, imagine yourself in some such tragic predicament as people of half a hundred years ago had to face, before Pasteur and his treatment were ever heard of.

It's an old story. Prof. Casper J. Kraemer of New York University has translated a manuscript written in Greek on papyrus, found in Palestine not long ago. The writing dates from 689 A. D., and is a call for a mass meeting of "men unable to bear the burden of taxation."

To win a bet of $5, Andrew Evans of Blackburn, Eng., swallowed a live mouse, which later had to be removed by an operation.

WHEN Columbia decided to film "The Tree of Liberty" they decided to give the public more than good value. Many of the scenes of the book are laid in Williamsburg, Va., at the time of the Revolution and just afterward. And since the Rockefeller have obligingly restored most of the buildings of the town so that they look as they did then, Columbia sent the company to Williamsburg.

They also invited newspaper writers down to see Cary Grant, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carle and others working, under the very able direction of Frank Lloyd.

Students from William and Mary college acted as extras; in a scene made in wind and rain in front of Raleigh Tavern, they see them, dressed as students of the college, were in the seventeen hundreds. The wind and rain were artificially produced on a beautiful spring evening.

The next afternoon Grant was to be photographed riding up to the door of a famous old plantation. The governor of Virginia and crowds of enthusiastic fans assembled to watch. When you see that scene, imagine the governor and the rest of us shivering in a chilly wind from the James river, waiting for the sun to come out, while Grant patiently rode his horse up and down until somebody pointed a candid camera at it at close range, making it so nervous that it ran away. Grant lost his hat and got his wig rumpled, and by the time order was restored the sky was too cloudy for any pictures to be made.

The following day a mob was to storm something or other, and a torchlight parade was to be held. So it rained. The picture people were patient; they're accustomed to that sort of thing. The newspaper people were not, so they went home. The only news was that the title had to be changed to "The Howards of Virginia," because the other one sounded too much like a Warner Brothers patriotic short, and that Martha Scott, instead of Joan Fontaine, would play the lead.

It's going to be a swell picture, one of Frank Lloyd's best—that's recommendation enough for any movie.

Director John Stahl, who has been connected with only two studios—Metro and Universal—during the past 25 years, has broken away, along with such producers as Walter Wanger and Frank Capra, to enjoy the freedom of making his own picture selections. You must remember his "Back Street," with Irene Dunne, and "Only Yesterday," with Margaret Sullivan, to mention just a few of his successes.

He's chosen "The Life of Daniel Webster" for his first free picture, and has signed with James Roosevelt to direct "The Boy Grew Older" for him.

Spike Jones, drummer in Oscar Bradley's orchestra on the CBS "Screen Guild Theater," refused an offer of $200 for a drum head recently. The original cost of the drum head was only $10—but it's covered with signatures of famous Hollywood stars who have appeared on the program, from Shirley Temple to Bette Davis.

Larry Ross was recently nominated as the perfect date by a group of pretty girls who act as professional fashion models. To show his appreciation, he invited four of them to be his guests at a very smart—and very expensive—night club. When the night was over, Larry, who was selected as the perfect date because he knows just what to do when escorting a woman, found that he couldn't pay the check—because he'd left his wallet at home.

Many commentators will air their views on the forthcoming presidential campaigns to be held this summer. To one, however, it will hold special interest. Many years ago Edwin C. Hill, "America's Star Reporter," covered the Theodore Roosevelt convention. From the time Teddy became President, Hill was referred to by the Rough Rider as "the unofficial member of my cabinet." This summer Hill will again cover a Roosevelt convention providing Franklin Delano Roosevelt runs for a third term.

TRIBUTE

April 5, 1940—76 years, three months and 25 days ago today she was born, of hardy, honest, God-fearing parents, inheritor of a simple faith.
 She accepted Christ as her Master early in life. In the faith she never faltered, for it she never departed. It was strength to her in life, it sustained her in the Valley of the Shadows.
 She never complained of misfortune, or loss or sorrow, or trouble, or sickness. She suffered all of these.
 She bore her afflictions with a fortitude that scoffed at adversity. She never knew fear in life or in death.
 In her last moments she smiled and pointed upward to show us the beautiful ship that was coming for her. She looked upon the voyage as a pleasant one because she could see beautiful flowers and hear singing.
 She requested from her hymn book:

"O sing to me of heaven, when I am called to die,
 Sing songs of holy ecstasy, to waft my soul on high,
 When cold and sluggish drops roll off my dying brow,
 Breathe forth in songs of joyfulness, let heaven begin below,
 When the last moment comes, O soothe my dying face,
 To catch the bright seraphic gleam which o'er my features plays,
 Then to my raptured ear let one sweet song be given,
 Let music cheer me last on earth and greet me first in heaven,
 In heaven above where all is love, there will be no sorrows there."

She was lovely to look upon in face and form.
 She was more beautiful and stately than a calla lily in the first pink flush of dawn.
 She loved the beautiful in art, in music, in human life, in her garden, in her flowers.
 She was high in mind, firm in will, strong in convictions and determined in purpose.
 She hated sham, she despised fraud, she scorned hypocrisy.
 She detested filth in any form. She clung to the good and true.
 She poured out her life to others. She loved her flowers, her friends, her home, her children, her God.
 She was a Southern gentlewoman, the like of which I shall never see this side of eternity.

THE FORUM

By J. PAUL BUSHART, Editor

A column conducted for news, views and comments, in which readers of The News are invited to participate. Mail contributions care of THE FORUM, this newspaper.

Chicago, Ill., May 7, 1940
Dear Editor:

Through the courtesy of a subscriber of yours (Mrs. Anne Myrick Klape, Chicago) I was handed a copy of The News recently, and it brought back to me memories of my youth, a few brief years of which was spent in Fulton, but I suppose it is a greater Fulton today. Because I am taking you back over 60 years ago!

My name is John G. Murphy, son of William and Mary Murphy who resided in Fulton for some few years, having come from Jackson about 1877. I was one of four children, the eldest, about 14 years of age. Had just left school, I think it was the sixth grade in the S. W. Baptist University at Jackson, having won the medal in a class of about 12 for declamation, and the Jackson Sun acclaimed me as an "embryo genius." I'll never forget J. W. Burkett, the editor, whom I had the pleasure of meeting twenty years later at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha, Neb., while I was the representative of The Associated Press there.

About 1877 I began the task of learning telegraphy in the I. C. depot under the tutelage of an operator with the great American name of Winfield Scott Cassell. He was an educated and capable man. The agent was J. G. Hall, and he had one or two bookkeepers in his employ, because the I. C. did a good business there. Another young man who was with the Memphis & Paducah road (later the C. & O., I believe) whose name was Boaz was also learning telegraphy, and his tutor A. J. Greif, the agent. We strung a line between the I. C. depot and the M. P. & N. depot, and it afforded us continuous "traffice." As I acted as "messenger" I practiced several hours a day, with the result that before a full year had passed I was able to take a position as a regular operator.

If you think any more of my life's history as a telegrapher would be of interest to your railroad readers I shall be glad to write of several incidents in connection with the early days of the telegraph.

It was a nice warm afternoon, while I was the Messenger, and the operator had been receiving telegrams for the President of the Company, James C. Clarke, whose private car was attached to the rear of No. 2, the fast New Orleans-Chicago train in those days. When the train came to a stop I delivered the messages, and Mr. Clarke asked me to wait that he would have to answer one of them, and he began writing the message. The train moved out but he calmed me by saying, "You'll be all right, Johnny, sit still." As the train was about the top of what the railroad boys called "Clinton Hill," Mr. Clarke handed me the message, then picked me up saying, "Hold on to my shoulders, Johnny," swung off the lower step while the train was still running 15 to 18 miles an hour, depositing me on terra firma, then turning, he had to run a little, caught the rungs and swung aboard.

Mr. Clarke was not a young man and when I told about it at the time it was considered quite a feat.

Mr. Clarke had a son who was trainmaster of the Kentucky division. J. M. Turner was chief train dispatcher at Jackson. John G. Mann was general superintendent. On the Memphis & Paducah road N. Monierat was general manager, and C. H. Warren superintendent. Farmer Grange stores which had been in operation for only about a year or so were closing up.

Familiar names to me as I recall them were Tom Huddleston, Mr. Eddings, the elevator man, and Mr. Paschall. I think the Hallam Brothers published the weekly paper then.

Very truly,
John G. Murphy

P. S. I am now on the retired list—and at 75 am not entirely senile. Cannot afford to be a paid subscriber but would appreciate an occasional copy.

Money Talks

By Frederick Stamm, Economist
Director of Adult Education
UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

The anti-chain store bill introduced into Congress by Representative Patman of Texas has been attacked by both producers and consumers all over this country.

Who are these chain store defenders and what do they say about the chain stores?

A National Grange spokesman has said: "It seems to us that if there are specific abuses in chain store methods or practices, they should be eliminated by specific legislation. . . . But the present proposal is not a remedy. . . . it is intended as a death sentence."

John Rice, representative of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers Association, said that enactment of the Patman Bill would "completely disorganize" the fruit growing industry. "Chain stores are vital market outlets for fresh fruits," state other representatives of fruit growers.

The Philadelphia Consumers' Advisory Council, through Mrs. Gustav Ketterer, to a House Committee said: "The consumers realize the contributions and benefits of chain stores to public welfare, knowing that these stores pioneered in refrigeration and sanitation for protection of public health and the preservation of health qualities of food. . . . which mean a great deal to the housewife."

Professor Malcolm P. McNair of Harvard University said there was "grave danger that if this measure should become a law, it would cause a new business slump by upsetting the balance of production and distribution."

Labor unions have also come to the defense of the chain stores. The unions have organized chain store employees, but they have never been able to organize independent store employees. If the chain stores go, labor organizations will be adversely affected.

Last week I presented Patman's views, this week what some of the chain store defenders think. Now what do you think about the chain stores? The outcome should be of interest to you. If the chain stores defeat this bill, they will be stronger than ever. If Patman wins, the chain store, as you know, is dead. I shall be glad to write an article on the readers' viewpoint if you will write me at the University of Louisville.

A CROP TO CONSIDER

Each year more and more farmers are including soybeans in their plans for cash crop production, and those who have not already done so might well consider the possibilities of this crop as an additional source of income.

According to the Department of Agriculture, the soybean has now risen to eighth place among American crops, yet prices have never been maintained and there has never been a surplus to depress the market. As a result of scientific research, this "miracle bean" now appears in no less than 260 manufactured products.

By far the most important of these products is soybean oil meal, used as a protein ingredient of feeds for livestock and poultry, the demand for which has increased amazingly in the last few years. Nutritional experts generally agree that this meal possesses many advantages, being more palatable and easier to digest, besides promoting more rapid and satisfactory growth than other protein feeds.

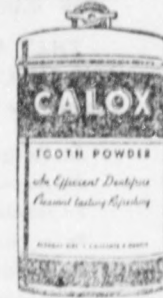

From the grower's standpoint the soybean has many desirable qualities. The crop may be planted from early spring to midsummer; its growing season is comparatively short; it will thrive on poorer land than corn and some other crops; it is resistant to drought, and the plant is little subject to disease or insect attacks. All in all, it is one of the most dependable and profitable of farm crops.

We wonder whether a woman dreads fixing her face as much as a man hates shaving his.

"There ought to be a law!"

REDDY ELOWATT your electrical servant

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

In the last 10 to 15 years, the engineering improvements and operating economies of your electric company have made it possible to cut the average price of household electricity just about in half. Many customers now using more household appliances, lots of light, a radio and refrigerator pay very little more to operate all of these than they used to pay for light alone.

WELL, Sir, if you look for it, you'll probably find there is a law covering whatever state of affairs has you disturbed.

But there are some things laws can't do.

For example, Thomas A. Edison did not become a great inventor by act of Congress. Edison made use of the intelligence and perseverance that God gave him.

We in the electric service business like to think we are following, in some small way, the principles of this great man. At least this much is true: there is no law responsible for the fine work of the employees of this company. There is no law that moves scientists, engineers, linemen, managers, office workers and many others to do much more, each day, than is expected of them. Day in and day out they are busy planning how to improve our service and increase its usefulness to you.

We believe these people have every right to be proud of the great job they have done. Yet they are the very ones who realize, better than anyone else, that our service to you is not perfect. Their constant effort underlies every service improvement and every rate reduction this company has ever been able to give you, and every one that will be made in the future.

No law did this except the great unwritten law of America—to make a good product or render a good service, to sell it at a reasonable profit and to depend on the public's sense of value and fair play. We follow this principle. We constantly make a good thing better, constant; distribute it to more people at less cost. That is the American way, to which every employee of this company is dedicated.

BUSINESS WILL FIGHT

An increasing number of business and industrial organizations are becoming fed up with political coercion and harassment, and a number of them are preparing to fight back by taking their case to the public through educational campaigns designed to show how the country as a whole is being injured by unreasonable laws which handicap the business community.

Among organizations which will have an active part in voicing the demand for greater freedom for private enterprise is the National Association of Manufacturers, whose members provide the greater part of the nation's industrial payrolls. The association's president, H. W. Prentiss, Jr., recently declared:

"Henceforth industry will decline to 'turn the other cheek.' It will meet unjustified attacks with undeniable facts, militantly and decisively."

It is undeniable that economic recovery has been retarded by an almost endless succession of hostile legislative acts which have brought hardship and bewilderment to business men, big and little. An atmosphere of fear and uncertainty has been created which has discouraged the investment of new capital, which is so necessary to provide jobs for the army of unemployed.

Efforts to combat and correct this situation should have the support of every citizen who is interested in his country's economic welfare.

Uncle Jim Says

A sound farm program makes every acre do its best.

Instead of just "living-at-home" let's plan to "live-well-at-home".

Good green pastures help take the red ink out of the livestock business.

It is not the farmer's fault that people beg for bread while surplus wheat goes begging for market. Poultry flock selection is like going to the field to select seed corn and culling hens is just pitching back the "nubbins".

The worry cost of farming can be decreased by growing plenty of garden stuff to supply the table with fresh vegetables in summer and canned foods in winter.

A recent survey shows that over one-third of the students now enrolled in courses of agriculture and home economics at Agricultural colleges are former 4-H Club members.

Now is the time to: Put the mow-er and rake in shape for the early hay crop, fit the workstock with collar pads, whitewash the fences, put out salt for livestock, get rid of roosters if you are through hatching eggs.

The family table is one market that always pays retail prices for food products. There is still time to enroll in the Tennessee Farm Food Supply Program before the May 15 closing date. See your county farm or home agent for particulars.

When James Bland held up a Los Angeles cafe, a waitress handed him $18 and then pushed him backward into a laundry bag, held by the cook, who quickly tied the top and called the police.

GARDEN DEPT. HOST TO WOMAN'S CLUB

Mesdames Robert Graham, W. W. Miller, Dorris Valentine and Mace McDade were acting hostesses when members of the Garden Department of the Fulton Woman's Club were hosts at the general meeting of the club Friday afternoon, May 3. Mrs. Ira Little and Miss Laverne Browder served as pages.

The club rooms were unusually attractive with an arrangement of flowers grown by members of the Garden Department. The arrangements were judged by a committee and were also examined and admired by the entire group.

The new president, Mrs. Mansfield Martin, presided over the business session. Minutes of the previous meetings were read by the secretary, Mrs. Aaron Butts, and reports were given by other officers. Mrs. Martin read the standing committees that will serve during the coming year. Members voted to give a prize to the department having the highest average of attendance at the general meetings through out the next club year.

The following were elected as delegates to represent the club at the State Convention being held in Louisville May 8-11: Mesdames Mansfield Martin, Warren Graham, Aaron Butts, Ernest Fall, Jr. and Wilmon Boyd. Alternates are Mesdames Robert Graham, J. E. Fall, Sr., Hendon Wright, Jake Huddleston and Joe Browder. It was decided to have a June club meeting in order to hear the report of the president on the convention.

After the business session the meeting was turned over to Mrs. S. R. Mauldin, chairman of the Garden Department, who extended a welcome and announced the program. The first number was a lovely piano solo by Miss Donna Jean DeMyer. Mrs. J. E. Fall, Sr. was then introduced and gave a most interesting talk on the famous gardens that she has visited. During her talk she mentioned gardens at Mount Vernon and the Hermitage, the Japanese Gardens in San Antonio, Texas, Cypress Gardens in Winter Haven, Florida, the gardens of Mexico and Cuba, the Magnolia Gardens in Charleston, S. C., and the beautiful garden spots in the blue grass section of our own state. She also described the Bellingrath Gardens in Mobile, Ala. and said that they were the most beautiful gardens that she had ever seen.

Mrs. Mauldin then presented Mrs. Carl Hastings, who, in her usual charming manner, gave a review of Ellen Terry's "Memoirs." In appreciation of this interesting part of the program the club presented an attractive gift to Mrs. Hastings.

During the social hour delicious refreshments were served by members of the Garden Department. The garden motif was carried out by tiny nosegays on each plate. Several new members were present.
