FIRST QUOTA REACHED IN RED CROSS DRIVE

Fultonians Glimpse Nation's War Tools

Seventy flat-car loads of the United States Army's mechanized cavalry brigade invaded Fulton on Monday morning, as they rolled through the New Yards of the Illinois Central System. Local citizens who saw the unusual display of military equipment, which was returning to Fort Knox, Ky., after participating in the army games in Louisiana, were impressed by the sight.

To Fultonians, who seldom have the opportunity to see Army equipment in such large quantities, the outfit seemed enormous. The equipment included 100 tank-like combat cars, armored tanks, radio trucks, equipped with both sending and receiving sets and supply trucks.

Awesome as the equipment seemed to bystanders, Captain Heiberg was not too greatly impressed. "This brigade, the only one in the Army which is completely mechanized, is one-fourth the size of a German mechanized division," he said. "And Germany has 12 such divisions."

A troop train returning to home quarters at Fort Knox also passed through Fulton Tuesday morning.

Yearly Expenditures Of Illinois Central

According to a recent annual report of the Illinois Central System, the major expenditures during 1939 amounted to $84,301,471. Of this amount $9,004,601 was spent in the state of Kentucky, as follows:

In Fulton County expenses were as follows: for 426 employees, payroll, $662,886; purchases, $37,202; water, $350; electricity, $4,672; telephone $378; taxes, $13,517—totaling $739,005.

VOTES RESPONSIBLE FOR WASTE

It's a rare person who doesn't consider price when he makes a purchase. Whether it be a home, an automobile, a suit of clothes or a can of beans, he weighs the related factors of cost and quality before deciding whether he is getting his money's worth.

But take a thousand or a million or a hundred million such otherwise sensible people, in their collective role as citizens and taxpayers, and they exhibit an entirely different point of view when spending their money for governmental purposes. Any glib politician or local "booster" can persuade them to enthusiastically back the spending of tremendous sums of tax money for "local betterment." Whether it be a bridge, a park, a sewer, a playground or anything else, they endorse it wholeheartedly, irrespective of how much it costs, or how little it may be needed. There, in a nutshell, is one of the primary reasons for our desperate fiscal situation. Shrewd buyers that we are as individuals, we have proven ourselves to be suckers when it comes to spending tax money.

It's easy enough to blame the politicians for this, and certainly they have been a factor in favor of reckless prodigality. But the fact remains that we elect the politicians, and they can't keep their jobs without our approval. The public gets the kind of representation it deserves. If the people want to court national bankruptcy, as they apparently have in the past, the politicians will gladly follow their lead, and vote for every spending measure that comes up. If the people want economy and local independence, they can have it.

The responsibility comes straight home to the voters. In the long run, they make all public policies. And they have made the present policy of fiscal insanity that has brought with it the most serious debt and tax problem in our history.

FARMER ON RAIL BOARD

Election of a cotton farmer to the board of directors of a great railroad would seem to be a most unusual procedure, but it happened a few days ago, and in the light of the facts it appears to have been a logical and wise action.

The farmer in question is Oscar Johnston of Mississippi, whose choice as a director of the Illinois Central is in keeping with a policy adopted two years ago, whereby directors of the railroad are selected from men of exceptional ability who are engaged in business along the lines of its system.

Mr. Johnston is president of a company which operates 50,000 acres of farming land, devoted mostly to cotton, in the Mississippi delta. But he is also a lawyer, a banker, a legislator, and in recent years has held several important government posts.

Among the Federal positions held by him since 1933 are those of director of finance of the AAA, vice-president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, manager of the government cotton pool, and assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury. He recently severed his government connections, but still serves two departments in an advisory capacity. He is now deputy chairman of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

One of Mr. Johnston's chief interests at present is the National Cotton Council, of which he is the founder and president. The object of this organization is to increase the consumption of American cotton at home and abroad. His wide experience and proved ability will make him a valuable addition to the Illinois Central's board.

THE TROJAN HORSE

War dispatches lately have contained numerous references to "the Trojan horse," in connection with the planting of spies and disguised troops in countries marked for invasion by Germany. Groups of Nazis or Nazi sympathizers have thus been organized in virtually all parts of the world.

The original Trojan horse was a huge wooden one, hollow inside, and capable of holding several soldiers. Its story is told of the ancient and perhaps legendary war between the Greeks and the people of Troy, about 1200 years before Christ.

After the Greeks has besieged Troy for about ten years in an effort to obtain the release of Helen, wife of Menelaus, who had been abducted by Paris, son of the Trojan king, the city was finally overcome by means of a clever stratagem.

JUST HUMANS

By GENE CARR

"Quick, Hand Me a Brick, Foolish!"
"Witch One!"

Jan king, the city was finally overcome by means of a clever stratagem.

Pretending to abandon the siege, the Greeks left the wooden horse outside the walls and withdrew. The Trojans brought the horse inside as a trophy of war. That night, when the city was asleep, the Greeks came out of the horse and opened the gates, allowing the Greek army to enter. Before the Trojans could organize resistance, the city was looted and burned.

Whether mythical or real, the Trojan horse has been for centuries the symbol of deception and treachery, and its story is told in classic epics, notably the Iliad of Homer. It contains a warning for nations of today, as many of them are now beginning to realize.

HEIGHTS AND DEPTHS

This old earth of ours appears to have a pretty rough surface, but although the distance from the lowest ocean depth to the summit of the highest mountain is approximately 64,500 feet, or a little more than 12 miles, this is not relatively great when it is considered that the earth's diameter is nearly 8,000 miles.

Mount Everest of the Himalayas, in Indo-China, is the highest mountain, rising to 29,141 feet. The greatest ocean depth so far discovered is 35,400 feet, near the island of Mindanao, one of the Philippine group.

In the Western hemisphere, the highest elevation is Mount Aconcagua, 22,834 feet, in South America, between Argentina and Chile. Mount McKinley in Alaska is North America's highest, 20,300 feet.

The Dead Sea, in Palestine, is 1,290 feet below sea level; the Libyan Desert in Africa, 440; Death Valley, California, 280, and the Caspian Sea in Russia 86 feet below.

Many areas in various parts of the world which are now submerged were once dry land. Some of these valleys off the coast of California have been charted in recent years by the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. Others have been discovered off the Atlantic coast between Chesapeake Bay and Cape Cod.

Such changes are still taking place. Only last year the British Admiralty reported that Thompson and Lindsay Islands in the South Pacific had vanished after being on the charts since 1825.

Honesty is the best policy, but other kinds such as fire, life and accident, should not be overlooked.

NOW IS GOOD TIME TO BUY BREEDING HOGS

Successful swine men say that now while hog prices are hovering around the bottom if the cycle is the best time to increase breeding herds, according to J. S. Robinson, U-T Agricultural Extension Swine specialist. Certainly it is a good time to improve the blood lines of our breeding stock by replacing the scrub boars and sows with animals of improved breeding, he says.

The boar is half the breeding herd and this fact should be kept uppermost in mind in the selection, feeding, and management of herd boars. There is no economy more false than the purchase of an inferior boar merely because he a few dollars cheaper than a good one.

The difference in returns from one litter of pigs, even when sold for pork, can easily make the difference between the cost of a poor or mediocre boar and a good one, Robinson says.

The herd boar should always be a purebred. This holds true regardless of whether he is to be used on purebred sows of the same breed, grade sows, or for crossing on another breed. The purebred sire will transmit more of his qualities to his offspring than the grade. He should be of the approved market type and a good representative of his breed.

The most desirable sire of market hogs is probably of the intermediate type. That is, in between the small, short-legged, small boned, excessively fat pig on one hand, and the large, rangy, coarse-boned, long-legged hog on the other. The intermediate type will transmit rapid gaining and prolific qualities and yet sire pigs that will be fat enough for market when they weigh from 200 to 225 pounds.

While each individual sow in the herd is not as valuable as the herd boar, much success in the production of pigs cannot be hoped for unless the selection, feeding and management of every sow is given careful consideration. In selecting brood sows, whether for the production of slaughter hogs or breeding stock, type is of utmost importance. Sows or gilts selected should possess the type and conformation that fulfills the requirements of the market at which their offspring will be sold. Then too, they should be as uniform as possible in type, quality, and breed, for only in this way can the greatest benefit be derived from use of a good boar.

Good breeding stock can be secured at reasonable prices. This is an opportune time to get some better bred animals in the breeding herds and to shape up the breeding herd so that the farm will be properly stocked when higher prices come rather than having to buy back into the hog business at prices advance, Robinson says.

MORE HOSPITAL BABIES

The decline in mortality among American babies in recent years has been most gratifying, and has been largely due to the increased use of hospital facilities by mothers-to-be, according to a bulletin of the Hospital Research Institute of Chicago. It is stated that nearly 50 per cent of all babies born last year first saw the light of day in a hospital.

Improved hospital methods of caring for these new arrivals have given them a better start in life, with aid in their battle against that first dangerous year, in which such a heavy toll of infant lives was formerly taken. In spite of the great progress which has been made, this death toll still takes an average of 54 babies out of every 1,000 before they are a year old. Fifteen years ago the death rate was 74 out of 1,000.

Commenting on the increase in hospital-born babies, the Institute bulletin says that 15 states now have 1,000 or more hospital bassinets available. New York leading with approximately 8,000 of these baby baskets. Pennsylvania comes second with about 4,550, and Illinois is third with about 4,200.

As the better care available to mothers and infants in hospitals becomes more generally recognized, it is expected that the percentage of hospital-born babies will be still further increased. The best efforts of the medical world are being devoted toward lowering the infant mortality rate.

Mrs. Helen Hursey of Dallas, Tex., testified in court that her husband "slept in a red skullcap and leather jacket, and woke me up every morning at 4 o'clock doing calisthenics in bed."

When he fell off a bench, Joseph Callahan of Chicago was "bitten" near the right eye by his own false teeth.

Patient Expected to Recover

THE time was in the early hours of a new day; the place was the lobby of a hotel on a downtown side street in New York; the principal character was a well-dressed gentleman in an alcoholic fog, who had come in and registered for the night a few minutes earlier.

Now, half dressed, he descended the stairway from the second floor and stood swaying slightly in front of the desk.

"Mish' Night Clerk," he said politely but thickly, "I'll 'ave request you gimme 'nozzler room."

"Well, sir," stated the clerk, "we're a little crowded. I don't know whether I could shift you immediately. It's pretty late, you know."

"Mish' Night Clerk," said the guest in a courteous but firm voice, "I repeat—mush gimme 'nozzler room."

"Isn't the room I gave you comfortable?" parried the functionary.

"Sheems be perfly so," admitted the transient. "Nev'less, mush am be moved 'medately."

"Well, what's the matter with your room?" demanded the pestered clerk.

The stranger bent forward, and with the air of imparting a secret addressed the clerk in a husky whisper:

"If you mush know, my room's on fire!"

BARK WHIPS

When toys are so plentiful that few children can keep up with theirs, it sounds silly, I know, for me to tell how we valued ours in the old country days. A very distinctive possession of the country boy was a bark whip, especially if he had it himself. After all, it did take some skill to make a good whip and to keep it for any length of time. Little boys did not own jack-knives; they were too dangerous for little fellows. When one got big enough to have a big knife, he had to use it, and whittling or making things came as a matter of course.

To make a bark whip, cut a straight limb of hickory or papaw. Carefully peel the bark from the tip, leaving enough of the end for a handle. Cut out the peeled part of the wood except a small portion, which should be sharpened to blend in with the whip. If you are not very skilled, you had better divide the bark into three strings to be made into a whip. It is a mark of real art if you can plait a four-ply whip and make it round, like a rattlesnake. Some of the first ones I plaited looked snake-like, that is, after a snake had swallowed a few frogs and a setting of hen eggs. A leather thong or a piece of binder twine makes a good cracker. Any boy who has patiently gone through the process of making a whip like this should be allowed full freedom to crack his whip as long as it lasts. The only trouble is that the bark soon gets rather stiff, and the rattlesnake effect is lost.

After all, the bark whip was just a bark whip. The thing that all boys wanted to do was to wield the genuine leather rattlesnake whip that the he-men of the threshing crew used to drive the horses hitched to the "power." Some of these whips were two or three yards long and could be wielded with all the grace now practiced by wild West-erners at a rodeo. We did not practice cutting cigarettes from some-body's mouth, but I have known country boys who could do equally clever feats. By the way, to plait one of these long leather whips and do as fine a job of your work as many people could do represented another of the arts not now so com-mon.

But back to hickory and papaw. Both of these varieties of trees were designed especially for whips and whistles. Cut off a length of either, with no knots showing. At the little end of the length shape up your whistle. Then tap the outside of the bark gently all around with the handle of your pocket knife, not too hard, for that would break the bark. Then with a deft twist remove the bark. Trim down the wood in-side to make your whistle and mouth piece. If you want to get a siren effect, cut off the mouth piece from the rest of the wood, leaving the core to run up and down as a sort of piston, to give variations of sound. I forgot to tell you to run the core of the whistle through your mouth to get it moist. After you start whistling, it will usually be moist enough and to spare. Then whistle until some one with jittery nerves makes you stop or until the whistle dries at night and breaks. We boys could not express enough contempt for the ignoramus who in making a whistle tried to use the big end of the limb. That to us showed how little sense the human animal could have. But do not take too many airs to yourself in making a whistle, for the best of us often made a failure, for it is a delicate matter, because of the nature of the bark and the state of the sap. All things of artistry come with difficulty and must be respected for this difficulty.

A NEW COTTON PRODUCT

What may prove to be an im-portant new use for cotton is seen in a ply-board recently developed by a Seattle building materials manufacturer, according to a recent statement by the National Cotton Council.

The new board, used in interior construction, is manufactured in panels long enough to cover the entire wall of a room, requiring only four panels to completely cover the room.

The manufacturer states that laboratory tests have proved the new board to be four to thirty times as strong as other boards now being marketed. Impact resistance is much greater than that of fibre and plaster boards, the laboratory report states.

Advantageous characteristics given the product by its cotton fabric covering as listed by the manu-facturer include fire resistance, low heat conductivity, rodent and ver-min resistance and water resistance. The cotton covering allows im-mediate painting or papering of the walls as quickly as they are put in place without the customary delay caused by plastering. In addition the covering assures the absence of wall cracks and checking.

The Seattle product is said by the Council to be in line with experi-ments conducted by the Department of Agriculture in the use of cotton fabric covered wall board. Test houses built by the department thus far have proved satisfactory, it was said.

FARMERS INCREASE GRAZING LIVESTOCK

While hogs have been ranking first in point of income in Simpson, Logan, Todd, Christian and Cald-well counties in Kentucky, a study made by the Agricultural Experi-ment Station indicated that farmers are tending to build up herds of beef and dairy cattle and sheep.

Larger acreages of hay and grain developed interest in grazing live-stock. This trend is considered an important factor in improving the productivity of the land.

Racing a train to a crossing is no fun when the race ends in a tie.

AMERICAN VACATIONS

As much as five billion dollars has been spent in a year by Americans on vacations and recreations, according to a recent estimate. With European travel cut off more vacation money will be spent in this country during the coming major holiday months than ever before in history.

Medical authorities assert that greater attention is given to health building vacations, as against former tendencies toward over-exercising, which caused more physical harm than good.

Heavy advance reservations are being made in Michigan, as shown in records of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, a health center. In preparation for a heavy season ahead, the staff of the institution has undergone more efficient departmentalization in recent months, according to Dr. John E. Gorrell, the administrator.

With facilities for more than 1,000 patients and guests there is service for complete medical diagnosis, internal medicine, neuropsychiatry, surgery, urology, eye-ear-nose and throat, meatbism, x-ray and radium. A dietary service, started over fifty years ago, includes dietetically balanced menus and semi-weekly cooking classes.

Guests at the health center enjoy golf, tennis, horse-back riding, swimming and fishing, in addition to a mechanized gymnasium. Freedom to play or rest as one pleases depending upon physical condition, says Dr. Gorrell, is the secret of a successful rest.

FEEDING ECONOMY

Every successful livestock feeder is aware of the importance of scientific feeding as a means toward reduced production costs, and a consequent increase in his net profits. For this reason he is on the alert to avail himself of the latest information obtainable as a result of research and experimentation by experts in animal nutrition.

These studies are being pursued continuously by government, state and private experiment stations, and the findings are made public through bulletins and other publications of the institutions concerned. Many bulletins on stock feeding and related subjects are issued by the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

In recent years America's new high protein feed ingredient, soybean oil meal, has been increasing amazingly in popularity among feeders, and it is said that more thorough experimental work has been done by colleges and experiment stations on this product than upon any new feed ingredient in history.

Hog feeders and breeders were among the first to recognize the value of soybean oil meal. This is perhaps partly due to the fact that the beans are grown and the meal processed in near proximity to the principal hog growing sections of the country.

One of the leading stockmen in the Middle West has referred to soybean oil meal as "the hog feeder's friend." It has likewise proved its value for all classes of livestock and poultry, being one of the most desirable and economical of all protein feeds.

Asked what she would do with 10 umbrellas she purchased at an auction of articles left on street cars, Mrs. A. Gilmore of Seattle, Wash., replied: "I'll probably lose them on street cars."

The Bendix Aviation Corporation claims its starter-drive is the world's most widely used auto equipment product.

Brady Bros. GARAGE

war, long-dreaded, doubted by many, had come at last. Holland was Germany's and her bombers were but 30 minutes flying time from London. The Belgian forces had all but capitulated. The British and French were falling back. The greatest military machine in all history, the swastika flying above it, pressed inexorably forward.

The problem before the President and the Congress was not whether the United States would go to war. There can be no doubt that interventionist spirit has immensely increased—yet, even if there were unanimous support for sending an A. E. F. abroad again, it could not be done now. Our army is small, and in need of vital supplies. Our air force is minuscule beside that of the great foreign powers. Our industrial machine is not geared for war. It would, say the authorities, take a year and perhaps more to prepare, equip and provide transport and supplies for a significant expeditionary force.

So immediate war was not the problem. The problem was how to make this country ready against invasion and attack. The possibility of a crushing allied defeat was not mentioned, but all think it was uppermost in the President's mind. And if that happened, and Germany sat astride Europe, swollen with success, what would happen? Would the British fleet fall into German hands? Would Hitler lay claim to Canada, Bermuda, the Indies and the other British possessions in this hemisphere? And if he did, what position would America take? That last question is easily answered—no one doubts that we would have to meet force with force. And what the President asked was that we give all we have to getting an adequate force ready. Never has one of Mr. Roosevelt's many speeches met with so enthusiastic a reception. Die-hard Republican newspapers endorsed it almost in toto, no less than New Deal newspapers. Ex-President Hoover said firmly, "The President is right." The Republican minority in Congress, with few exceptions, promised full cooperation.

The President's request for 50,000 warplanes, coupled with a plant capacity adequate to replace that many annually, literally "brought down the house." That was to be expected. For few doubters still question the efficacy of the air arm. It has not definitely proven its ability to destroy major warships, but it has proven beyond question its ability to harass, to disorganize, to wreck. The British and the French admit that air inferiority was the prime factor leading to their failure in Norway. And air superiority was a major factor in the success of Hitler's blitzkrieg in the Low Countries—even as it was last fall in the astonishingly swift conquest of Poland. Today airplanes are any army's eyes, even as they are a great offensive weapon, and a blind army is a beaten army.

The 50,000 warplane request, of course, entails a long-term program—it is estimated that it will be at least a year and a half before our factories can turn out that number annually. Of more immediate concern is a speeding up of the army and navy improvement program started months ago. More troops, more guns, and more and better anti-aircraft protection, more tanks, better protection for battleships against air attack, accelerated munitions production, a great air-pilot training program—such matters as these are to be attended to with maximum speed. For the experts have been suddenly convinced that there is no time to waste. If Alaska, with its tiny population, were captured, the entire Pacific Coast and much of the Western interior would be in ready range of enemy airfields. And from Greenland, Bermuda, parts of Latin America and other places where an invader might establish bases, today's swift and deadly bombers would find it an easy flight to our great centers of industry and population.

So the grim story runs. There is some debate as to details of the President's program—such as his proposal that $200,000,000 be appropriated to be spent at the Executive's discretion—but almost no question as to its necessity in general. One suggestion, made by Mr. Hoover and others, is that we should thoroughly investigate what has happened to past military appropriations before making the new ones—many believe that there has been great waste and inefficiency. This may or may not be done—under any circumstances, it is inevitable that we are about to embark on a record-breaking military betterment campaign.

From the economic point of view, this presents many grave problems. With a distorted budget and a gigantic debt, it will be difficult to raise the hundreds of millions military expansion demands without further disturbing our touchy economic structure. But as a White House spokesman observed, when a fire approaches your house you don't worry about how to pay for extinguishers—you charge them and consider ways and means to meet the bill later. And that seems to be the general attitude now.

Money Talks

By
Frederick Stamm, Economist
Director of Adult Education
UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

War knocks many an otherwise good prophecy into a cocked hat. As I pointed out last week American farmers have not profited much from this war.

But now Germany has marched into Denmark, one of the great dairying countries of Europe. Denmark normally exports 55% of her dairy products to England and only 38% to Germany. Denmark also exported large amounts of pork products to England. Now all these will go to Germany.

Norway also exported considerable raw material and foodstuff to England. Now that she has been drawn into the war her export business will dwindle to almost zero.

What effect has this latest war development had on farm prices? Wheat has already gone up about 5c on the bushel; corn and cotton prices are also up.

Germany's seizure of Denmark should mean cash in the pockets of Mid-Western and Southern farmers. It is only logical for England to turn to the U. S. and farmers may soon find hogs a very profitable investment.

Many expect Hitler to strike in the Balkans next. If this happens, the granary of South-eastern Europe will no longer supply France and England. This should further effect the price of farm products.

The Balkans also furnish oil for the Allies' machines. Should these countries be the next battlefield, the Allies must look to the U. S. for gasoline or operate their airplanes and tanks.

Although 3000 miles from the war zone, our economic life is materially affected by changing war conditions. The Mid-Western farmer and merchant can no longer disregard world affairs for they affect the price of wheat and corn, hogs and cotton in Chicago and Galveston as well as in London and Paris.

fort, Ill., sneezed and a bullet accidentally fired into his head in 1920, emerged from a nostril.

YOUR PICTURE OF YOURSELF

By Don P. Hawkins, Pastor
First Christian Church

Scripture: Mark 11.

Text: Mark 11:24—"Therefore I say unto you, whosoever things ye desire, when ye pray, believe ye shall receive them, and ye shall have them."

It is a good thing to have your picture taken.

I say this, not in behalf of photographers, for the kind of picture I have in mind CANNOT BE TAKEN BY A PHOTOGRAPHER.

This sort of picture must be taken by yourself and myself.

There is nothing in the world more vital than that the individual get a good picture of himself.

By that I mean he needs clean vision of the sort of person he wants to be—the sort of person he can be—and, behold, that is the sort of person he actually is.

Now this is really a very serious matter, so serious that it may mean success or failure in life for us.

It is very highly important that one's estimate on himself be based on REALITY, that is, a proper knowledge of his abilities. Many times in our contacts we come across splendid people with great possibilities who fail, and for one reason only: "They expect deep down in their own hearts that they will fail."

Dorothy Brand calls this the will to fail, and it is indeed a most expressive phrase. These people may even try hard to succeed and pathetically say: "Behold how I have worked," but theirs has been a deeper fault. It is the picture of themselves that they have created in the bottoms of their minds.

It is the picture of failure that they see.

Intensity of effort on your part and mine will not bring favorable results, if underneath our effort, the mind retains a picture of failure.

It really makes no difference how hard you strive unless in your soul you can say "I CAN."

The important thing becomes the imaginative picture of yourself. If that picture is one of strength and power and achievement your future is pretty well assured.

This is important in the moral realm of our lives. Why is it so hard to cure certain bad habits? It is because we are trying to do so by will power alone.

While we are mustering the forces of our will our imaginations are running in the opposite direction. The more one tries the worse he gets.

Bad habits are quickly broken when one holds before himself an imaginative picture of himself completely rid of the habit.

The importance of creative imagination is found in a thrilling passage of Mark's Gospel.

"All things, whatsoever ye pray and ask for, believe that ye have received them, and ye shall have them."

You could do no finer thing than to commit this verse to memory.

What does it mean? Simply by faith and by prayer you are longing for something worth while, hold in your mind a picture of yourself possessing that thing and you will possess it.

I am not here referring to unworthy material things but to the deeper spiritual values.

Faith is imagination grown up and confirmed and experienced.

We are told in the New Testament that if we have faith such as a grain of mustard seed nothing shall be impossible for us.

Imagination used in this sense is not fancy; but it is creative faith.

The New Testament does not deal with sin and trouble by appealing to the will at all. If it did it would scarcely be a gospel, for gospel means GOOD NEWS, except for men and women whose wills are strong.

Its appeal is for faith in one who can cleanse you and me from all sin.

The message is not to try harder but believe harder the message and you will be cleansed.

Religion is not an Aladdin's lamp or a magic carpet of some kind.

This is intended for a different field of life altogether than the material side.

Nevertheless the law is not without its values even here.

If one fixes his mind upon something, and keeps his mind fixed on that one certain thing, already tentatively he is that and he has set his feet on the way of being it.

Edward Markham has summed it up in one great line. "Our greatness is the greatness of our dreams."

If you will picture yourself as going far you will do so.

The battle is up to you.

Perhaps you have been bothered by fears of this and of that.

Or maybe you are a person with a great emptiness in your life.

Perhaps you are afflicted with trouble and the problem of life weighs heavily upon you.

What is the great secret?

It is to pray for release and for strength.

We are not to attack these difficulties by the power of the will but by faith.

Pray that you shall be released and even as you pray for release believe that you have it; and by faith you shall be delivered.

Believe it with all your heart and it shall be so.

"If with all your heart," says the Bible, "ye truly seek Me, ye shall find Me."

I. C. EXTENSION DEPARTMENT SPONSORS DAIRY-SOILS MEETINGS

Several dairy and soils meetings were conducted in this section last week under the auspices of the Agricultural Extension Department of the Illinois Central System and the Fulton Chamber of Commerce. Meetings were held at the following places:

Cayce, Monday night, with 64 farmers present; Crutchfield, Tuesday night with 72 present; Fulgham, Wednesday night, 120 present; Pilot Oak, Thursday night, 65 present; Woodland Mills, Friday night, 50 present.

B. M. Luttrell, Illinois Central Agricultural Agent, talked on management of dairy herds. He brought out the fact that West Kentucky and West Tennessee farmers are selling their best cows to northern farmers, and that this practice should be stopped in order to build up and improve their own herds in this section. Already 500 heifers from the bulls placed by the Fulton Chamber of Commerce are in milk, and approximately 1500 more are being raised.

Paul Farlow, agricultural agent for the railroad, talked on feeding dairy herds, stressing the need of more limestone and phosphate in the soil and better pastures. Good pasture is half the success of the dairy business, Farlow stated, and in this section farmers are able to have good pastures for 9 to 10 months a year.

Motion pictures were shown at these meetings on the subject, "Save the Soil." These were interesting and further stressed the need of more land sowed in good pasture mixtures, using Italian rye grass, lespedeza, sweet clover, red top and such like.

DAIRYING JUMPS TO SECOND PLACE IN TAYLOR COUNTY

The production of nearly a million pounds of butterfat last year made dairying second only to tobacco growing in Taylor county, Kentucky. Income from milk and cream is placed at about $225,000. Last year's tobacco crop brought $205,000, in round numbers. Adding the worth of the calves from 8,000 to 9,000 cows to the value of the milk and cream would make dairying a close second to tobacco, according to County Agent C. V. Bryan.

Eighty percent of the 2,300 farmers in Taylor county are milking cows. Eleven cream buying stations and a cheese factory take the milk and cream from the farms of the county.

The development of dairying in Taylor county began with the break in tobacco prices about 20 years ago. The county agent, the railroad, cream buying concerns, merchants and other forces combined to place cows and purebred sires on farms of the county.

Four-H club work also was enlisted to interest farmers in the ownership of good cows. In 1926 members of 4-H clubs owned 120 dairy heifers, and their descendants still are scattered in the producing herds of the county.

Dairying, and the hay and grass production that go with it, have been of great value to Taylor county, County Agent Bryan declared.

Charged with speeding, Mrs. Thelma Nelson of Denver told the judge she was hurrying home with her crying baby. The judge dismissed the case, saying "I have a son about the same age."

Ernest Warther, steel worker of Dover, O., has whittled from ivory, ebony, black walnut, pearl and bone, moving models of several famous locomotives.

Scientists say that life on earth began in hot water. And it is still there.
