A FISHERMAN'S CHRONICLE

In view of general criticism of the present administration of the fisheries of the United States, the Baltimore Sun has published a report on the condition of the fisheries of the United States. The report states that the proper management of the fisheries is the responsibility of the government, and that the government is not doing enough to protect the fishermen. The report also states that the government is not making enough money from the fisheries, and that the fishermen are not getting a fair share of the profits. The report concludes that the government should put more money into the fisheries, and that the fishermen should be allowed to make more money.

Breeders Aid in Clean-Up Campaign

LEICESTER, July 16—(AP)—The American Association of Breeders and Beer Distributors announced today that a clean-up campaign is underway in the state of Kentucky.

The campaign is being conducted in conjunction with the Kentucky Board of Health and is designed to eliminate unsanitary conditions in the state's drinking water supply.

According to the association, improper disposal of sewage has been a major factor in the contamination of drinking water in Kentucky.

The association is urging all citizens to cooperate in the campaign and to report any cases of unsanitary conditions in their vicinity.

The Kentucky Board of Health is also cooperating in the campaign and is sending out health inspectors to check on the condition of drinking water supplies in the state.

The association is asking all citizens to help in this important endeavor by reporting any cases of unsanitary conditions in their vicinity.

The campaign is expected to result in a cleaner, healthier state for all Kansans.
