AFTER 164 YEARS

It is now 164 years since the adoption of our Declaration of Independence, and this year's anniversary finds the United States in real danger of having to fight again for the liberties which that immortal document and the Constitution provided for the people of this nation.

We have too long taken these liberties for granted, and until recently have failed to realize that they might be wrested from us, either by foes from without or foes from within—and we have both.

There can no longer be doubt in the minds of informed people as to the fact that the fate of all Democratic nations is at stake in the present war. There may be honest differences of opinion among patriotic citizens concerning how America should proceed to meet the situation which unfortunately exists, but it would be folly not to recognize its existence.

Overconfidence and stupidity combined have brought disaster to France and other nations of Europe, and have brought the British Empire dangerously near the brink of ruin. These former Allies of the first World War permitted Hitler to flout the Treaty of Versailles and tear it to pieces, bit by bit. Thus they lost the fruits of a victory won in 1918 after more than four years of struggling and sacrificing.

The vital question for the United States at this moment is how to best protect our people against the loss of our own liberties, which have been enjoyed for more than a century and a half. The answer must be prompt and decisive. There is danger even now that we have waited too long.

GUARDING OUR HEALTH

A substantial part of the several billion dollars which constitutes the yearly sickness bill paid by the American public is due to general indifference to health. A survey by the Battle Creek sanitarium shows that every 3.2 second one patient entered American hospitals during 1939.

"In the same year," says Dr. John E. Gorrell, administrator of the Michigan health center, "9,879,244 patients were admitted to registered hospitals of the country, not including more than a million babies born in hospitals."

Much of the nation's sickness bill could be saved and general health improved by only moderate effort and a first step should be a regular check-up of physical condition by a competent doctor who is alert to the danger signals, the survey report says.

"History repeats in health records as in other ways," declares Dr. Gorrell. "At the end of each depression many physical ailments appear among business men who give little thought to their health during the period of economic stress. The highest percentage of nervous disorders is found in persons who have been subject to severe mental strain. Less worry and proper attention to health measures would reduce the sickness bill and add greatly to vitality and longer life."

As the vacation season approaches, medical authorities point to the wisdom of rest and recreation under proper supervision.

COUNTING FARM COSTS

Unfavorable agricultural conditions during recent years have caused farmers to make a careful study of their production costs, with a view to adopting more economical methods wherever possible. To do this a more systematic and detailed keeping of records has been found necessary, particularly among livestock feeders, whose success depends largely on a knowledge of feed values.

Stockmen are greatly aided in their operations by the experimental work continually carried on by the Department of Agriculture and state experiment stations, whose bulletins on a large variety of subjects pertaining to feeding are most valuable. In recent years a feed which has been the subject of most intensive research is soybean oilmeal, which experiment stations now agree is one of the best protein feeds obtainable for all kinds of livestock.

When whole soybeans are fed to hogs, it has been found that "soft pork" often results, but repeated experiments have proved that this danger is eliminated by the use of oilmeal, which cost records show to be one of the most economical protein feeds. It is equally desirable for cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry.

The rapidly growing popularity of this product is best illustrated by the fact that its production has increased from 21,000 tons to more than 1,000,000 tons in the last ten years, with the demand still rising.

A NATIONAL NUISANCE

Quite a lot of crusading has been done with a view to doing away with the barricades of billboards which mar the beauty of our natural scenery, but in spite of some progress made here and there, the billboard is still an outstanding national nuisance.

If this nuisance is ever to be effectively abated it must be done through convincing advertisers that their part in perpetuating it is bad business for them. Appeals to sentiment and love of the beautiful are generally futile.

State, county and city authorities can aid in the movement very materially, however, but it is often difficult to spur them to action. An example of commendable activity in the fight against ugliness is seen in Georgia, where the county commissioners of Fulton County, in which Atlanta is situated, ordered the removal of all signs and billboards along the highways under their jurisdiction. The member who sponsored this measure said:

"There is a proper place for everything, including advertising. Our highways are designed to give tourists and Atlanta motorists the most beautiful scenery possible, but that scenery is being ruined by the ever increasing number of billboards and signs."

This is true for every county in America where the encroachments of the "outdoor advertisers" have been permitted to have unrestricted sway. Billboards in locations which render them offensive are irritating to the public, without benefit to the concerns which pay for them with the mistaken idea that they are building business good will.

COLLEGE MORALS

In what amounted to a defense of present-day college students against charges of immorality which are often heard, Dr. Sweet of the divinity school of the Chicago University told of conditions in our leading colleges in the early days.

During Colonial times and for some years following the Revolution religion was at its lowest ebb, according to Dr. Sweet, and even in the universities Americans were hardly touched by the church. This is asserted by some of the early presidents of the universities themselves.

Lyman Beecher is quoted as saying that at Yale in 1790 most of the students were skeptics, while "rowdies were plenty and wine and liquor were kept in all the rooms." Similar conditions were reported about the same time at Harvard and Dartmouth, at the latter it being said that in 1799 there was only one student who claimed to be a Christian.

Ashbel Green, the president of Princeton from 1812 to 1822, writes that there were not more than five or six students who did not use profane language in common conversation, "sometimes of the most shocking kind." Bishop Meade has declared that the Episcopal college of William and Mary was during this period "a hotbed of infidelity and of the wild politics of France."

In spite of the conditions noted by Dr. Sweet and others, however, it seems that most of these wild students of early days turned out fairly well and many of them became leaders in the building of the new republic. Perhaps those of the present will do equally well after they had had their jazz fling.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT

Congress now has a real chance to make the industrial job of providing for our national defense a whole lot easier.

Here's the situation: The Smith Bill, amending the Wagner Labor Relations Act, was recently passed by a whopping majority in the House of Representatives. The bill in question is the outcome of careful study of the imperfections of the Wagner Act and of the attitude of the board which administers it. For a long time, the public, the press, and a major labor organization, the American Federation of Labor, have all urged that the Act be changed to make it a fairer instrument for settling industrial disputes. But now a small group of inside schemers are seeking to thwart the popular will by bottling up the amendments in a Senatorial committee tangle.

The proposed amendments won't transform the Wagner Act overnight from a trouble-fomenting piece of legislation into a model of fairness, but they are an important step in the right direction. Plainly, our lawmakers ought to adopt these amendments now, a move that need not interfere with giving consideration later to other substantial and sound changes.

But the time to act on the Smith measure is NOW, and the need for immediate action is obvious. No other legislation now pending is more vital to national defense. Efficient and uninterrupted production is necessary to national defense, and the Wagner Act, in its present form has definitely slowed down our country's manufacturing machinery.

It is to the interest of all Americans for Congress to amend the Wagner Act as promptly as possible—and upon such action a large measure of our national well-being and security depends!

Mrs. Schuyler Bursen of Kankakee, Ill., whose sight was restored recently after nine years of total blindness, looked around and exclaimed: "My goodness, but skirts are short this year."

Investigating a complaint that Mrs. Mary Pratt of Kansas City was housing a zoo, police discovered in her home two owls, a goat, four ponies, a dog, several cats, a monkey and a full grown lion.

A church in Haines City, Fla., uses rocking chairs instead of the regulation pews to seat the worshippers in comfort.

Three on the Ocean

By IRVIN S. COBB

IT SEEMS to me that in the wide range of themes treated from time to time in these columns, we have rather slighted the subject of oceans. Why not a few grouped stories, then, about oceans?

Here is number one, which has the merit of being true: Years ago, when I lived in Washington, I had a cook named Lizzie. Lizzie, who was colored, hailed from the mountains of Virginia. With a skillet she was a poetess inspired, but hers was a one-sided genius. For the beauties of nature she seemed not to care at all.

For the summer, I took a cottage at Atlantic City. The cottage stood close to the beach. One morning, as I stood on the veranda, with nothing between me and the coast of Spain except sky and water, I heard a rattle of breakfast pans in the kitchen and bethought myself that Lizzie had never looked upon the marvels of the sea.

"Oh, Lizzie," I called, "come out here on the porch a minute. Lizzie came, wiping her hands on her apron.

"Lizzie," said I with a wave of my arm to the eastward, "there's the Atlantic ocean."

Lizzie gave a brief look.

"Suttinly is flat," she said, and returned to her domain.

Then there is the yarn of the young woman from the middle-West who paid her first visit to friends residing at Santa Barbara. She also arrived in the evening. On the following morning as she stood at her window, she saw, framed in by trees, a bit of placid blue surface glistening in the California sunshine. She spoke to her hostess through the open door into the adjoining bedroom.

"Oh, Helen," she asked, "what is that little scrap of water I can see off here in the front of the house?"

"That's the Pacific Ocean," said the resident lady.

"Is it?" Her tone betokened disappointment. "Well, I always thought it was much larger than that."

To my way of thinking, though, number three is the gem of the collection.

The thing happened four years ago during the holding of the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco. In a hall in the proceedings an Eastern delegate, a rather pompous and self-sufficient person took a stroll in the general direction of where he assumed the shore line to be. He walked a considerable distance without finding it.

A ragged youngster trudged past him.

Say, my lad," said the visitor, patronizingly—"how far is it to the ocean?"

The youngster eyed him calmly:

"Which ocean?" he asked.

LOOKING PEART

The learned dictionaries tell us that "peart" is a dialectal form of "pert" and that some of its meanings are obsolete, such as "expert, skillful, keen, clever." Obsolete words are supposed to be those that have gone out of usage, but I fear that "peart" is still alive in many parts of the English speaking world. I would like to remind the learned men who record usage that "peart" and "pert", though they may have originally been the same word, long ago acquired different connotations.

There are two meanings for "peart" that are decidedly folk in flavor. Bright-looking children are "peart." When any one has been sick and is getting better, he looks "peart." I cannot recall having heard the word used derogatively, and we always use "pert." It was an honor to look "peart." Eyes, all admit, do tell how bright the spirit is that resides behind them. A dull eye that looks sleepily out upon the world lacks charm and challenge. Put a gleam into such an eye, and at once its beholder becomes "peart-looking." Shy little fellows that accompanied their fathers to the country store often looked peart because they were so thrilled with their good fortune in getting to ride behind and be really big fellows, not babies. Sometimes they were not only thrilled but actually afraid of the strange sights and sounds, though to older people there was nothing more exciting for them than seeing a sleepy village and its rather worn loafers, whittling endlessly on goods boxes and spinning old, old yarns. Those small, peart eyes took in, though, many a thing that older eyes could not see and that no amount of hardship or years could dim.

When chills and fever racked us in those quinine-and-camel days, we certainly lost the light of the eyes, so often referred to by the poets. An "ager" is calculated to shake a lot of self-conceit out of most of us. Between every-other-day chills we sometimes rallied and looked peart again, giving encouragement to our parents and making them hope that they would yet raise us to be grown men and women. Peartness also vanished under the blows of too many green apples or too much boiled custard or too many helpings of other dainties on the farm. Probably the thing that took out the gleam of the eye most effectively was a good and very necessary scolding or licking at school. It was days, sometimes, before one felt peart again, especially if one's parents kept up the old-time rule of giving a whipping at home for every one received at school, regardless of the justice or injustice of the proceeding.

But, fortunately, peartness is hard to down. Sickness of whatever description ultimately yielded to the surging life force within; the eyes brightened, the big voice came back, one felt equal to any meal set before him, and even the taunts and jeers of the bullies rattled off like bullets on armor plate. Life brings "unpeartening" events, but the force within us rises under stress and answers blow with blow. When children cease to be peart, humanity will be on its way down-hill.

MOVIE FEATURES PASTURE PROFITS

Hollywood gives us movies which star dogs, elephants, penguins, and even a pig like the one Will Rogers cherished in "State Fair." But "Green Acres," an all-color movie now making the rounds of farm meetings, is the first one to elevate "Bossy," the milch cow, to stardom. Included in her supporting cast are beef cattle, sheep, hogs, and horses. But "Bossy" gets all the fat lines—and that's no joke, as farmers will observe when they see the picture at one of their farm meetings.

The picture tells the story of pasture improvement which today is making its way into the front rank of up-to-date profitable farming practices. "Despite the fact that pasture is the cheapest feed that can be grown for any kind of livestock, pasture improvement is just beginning to receive the serious attention it deserves," said R. H. Lush, Pasture Specialist, The National Fertilizer Association and co-director of "Green Acres." "It is a crop that responds to plant food, lime, and good management. Results of hundreds of experiments and demonstrations conducted by State Experiment Stations have spotlighted its value to every farmer."

"Every well-fed cow," said Mr. Lush, "eats the equivalent of 100 pounds of grass a day. The cost of producing 100 pounds of digestible nutrients from oats is $2.02; from corn silage $1.54; from corn grain $1.38, while pasture produces this amount for $.64."

The results of 34 experiments also showed that the cost of producing 100 pounds of beef on unimproved unfertilized pasture was $4.05, while the cost on fertilized pasture was only $2.71. The same experiment showed that unfertilized pasture produced only 12.6 cans of milk per acre, while the treated pasture made 44 cans.

Results of 7 years experiments at Tifton, Georgia, show unimproved pastures produced only 65 pounds of beef cattle per acre, while carpet grass and legume pastures fertilized produced 291 pounds of beef per acre.

Albert McDaniel of Johnstown, Neb., bought a used car for 50 cents, and when he later took it apart found inside a lady's purse containing $25.

Because he thought his name was "a drawback socially and sounded un-American," Hubertus Ralph Theodore Roosevelt Kretschmas of New York City had it changed to Theodore Roosevelt.

Harry Gavitt of Topeka, Kan., has a lake where he trains fish. They jump through hoops, over hurdles, come at his call, eat out of his hand and allow him to pet them.

For more than 25 years August Schoening of Sebawaing, Mich., is said to have been raising families of pet crows and teaching them to speak English and German.

BLUE MONDAY

Gas, Oil, Tobacco, Liquor, Amusement Prices to Advance Because of Tax

FOR U. S. DEFENSE

Louisville, Ky.—Higher prices for gasoline, oils, tobacco, liquor and amusement tickets hit pocketbooks this week when the new defense taxes became effective Monday.

Federal Revenue Collector Selton R. Glenn estimated 1,000 amusement places in the state would put into effect the three-cent tax boost on all tickets costing 21 to 30 cents and an added one-cent tax on tickets costing 31 to 40 cents.

State cigarette dealers estimated by Glenn to number 30,000, are to start collecting 8.33 per cent more taxes—which figures a half-cent more on a package of 20 but actually is expected to bring an increase up to two cents with some dealers trying to widen the narrow margin of profit they've been getting.

Liquor prices are to be upped 15 to 20 cents a pint. Some retailers here reported consumers were buying liquor by the case to beat the effective date of the increase.

Louisville oil executives said gasoline would go up half a cent a gallon. The tax applies also to industrial oils.

The new taxes on amusement tickets include baseball, football, racing, boxing and other sports. While inapplicable to schools and churches, they apply to entertainments sponsored by universities.

Brady Bros. GARAGE

She had to raise her boy to be a soldier

In many lands today, mothers are forced to give up their children—even the youngest. Dictators demand them—and dictators are all-powerful. In peace as in war, they control business and industry, capital and labor, life itself. Men and women are told what work they must do. There is no prize for ambition, no hope for the man who would like to choose his own career.

How different it is in the United States! Here is a republic, governed under law by men responsible to the people. In this free nation, we choose our life-work for ourselves. This system of free enterprise, more than anything else, makes the United States the world's greatest nation. Because men are free to dream and work as they see fit, scores of industries have grown great in America: the automobile, radio, telephone and electrical industries are just a few.

As typical Americans, the employees of your electric company are devoted to the American principle of working together, producing more of the good things of life and making them available to more people. Through their efforts electric service steadily improves; at the same time, its price steadily comes down.

What inspires the people of your electric company? They are paid for what they do, of course. But the best answer is this: the employees of this company are proud of their part in keeping America great. They work as free men to bring better service and value to other free men. They are glad to create wealth in peace instead of destroying it in war.

This company has been built by free Americans. It is built to serve other free Americans, its customers. It is free from political dictation. Like all industry, like the nation itself, it will succeed as long as there are free Americans to work for it and free Americans for it to work for.

Orin Winstead, manager of the Paul Nailing Implement Company here, knows how to get a wiggle on when he is in a hurry, despite the fact that some of his friends are inclined to call him Wadlow at times. Visiting a farm near Water Valley recently the farmer said to him: "I need a mower and if you can get me one here in 45 minutes, I'll take it." So Orin struck out for Fulton. He arrived at his implement store, had to finish setting up the mower before delivery. That job completed he rushed back to the farm with the mower. As he rolled up he pulled out his watch, took a long breath. Then exclaimed: "Here's the mower, and it's ready to go. You said 45 minutes. Well, I'll give you back 12 minutes of that time." Thus a sale was made, at the cost of a lot of strenuous work and the loss of a lot of wind which Orin won't forget for a while.

I never did have any use for John L. Lewis and his radical C. I. O. And the more I see of his organization, and the dirty activities that have been exposed about it, the less I appreciate such a group of so called people's leaders in a Democratic country like ours. The C. I. O. and affiliated groups are fertile ground for Communism, Fascism, Nazism and Fifth Columnists who are seeking to undermine our democratic form of government like they have war-torn Europe. Turnout and strife have occurred in various cities throughout the nation as the result of the C. I. O., and the people are awakening to the fact that its methods are repulsive.

Just this week workers for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America were in Fulton and endeavoring to bring about local disturbances at the Siegel factory here. Such efforts have been made in other nearby towns like Mayfield, Union City, Martin, etc. In larger metropolitan areas these C. I. O. groups have been able to secure a foothold where there are radicals and foreigners. But the South wants none of their disturbances and pollygnot.

Citizens of Fulton worked hard to get a factory here and now several hundred persons are employed who had no employment before. Every effort is being made to increase the payroll and wages as circumstances and income will permit. Agitation here can only mean loss of time and income for the workers.

I am speaking by the experience of friends whom I have in Detroit and St. Louis, who have gone through strikes and labor troubles, and have had to have their income drained by union dues and other expenses brought on by such. I am deeply interested in employees of the local factory getting fair and equitable wages, but I am positively opposed to disruptions due to outsiders who have no interest other than the salaries they draw from their efforts to herd workers under their banner and dictate what they shall do. Yes, even decrease how they shall vote.

I was among those who started the movement to obtain the local factory, and helped to raise funds among local citizens to see that the building was enlarged so that more people could be employed. I cannot conscientiously sit idly by and let outsiders come in and bring unwarranted troubles and suffering on families who are peacefully employed. May Fulton never know the sorrows and discord of labor groups such as the C. I. O.

KENTUCKY FARMERS TALK FERTILIZER PRICES

Fertilizer prices lower than other commodities which farmers buy.

"Do you think the price you paid for that last purchase you made is too high?" Ask that of any man or woman any time and get about the same answer as if you asked, "Are taxes too high?" Nevertheless, in a recent survey made in Kentucky and 34 other States, over 32,000 farmers were asked point blank, "Do you think fertilizer prices are high?" Kentucky farmers replied as follows: "Yes, they are high," said 29.1 per cent. "They are low," said 11.3 per cent. The remainder, 59.6 per cent, replied that prices were average.

Now the Department of Agriculture releases a statement which answers the same question. "Since 1932 fertilizer prices have been fairly stable at a little below the 1910-1914 average," says the report. "Fertilizer prices, as a percentage of the 1910-1914 average, are considerably lower than prices of most commodities bought by farmers. In fact, all commodities are 16 per cent higher than the average, while fertilizer prices are 5 per cent lower."

The report continues: "New developments in science and technology, such as the production of synthetic nitrogen, have reduced production costs and prices."

important. Flag Day, 1940, will have attained its fullest meaning if we retain the spirit we display at that time in our every waking moment, every day of the year.

Truth in the movies got a boost recently when a lecturer was made to stop showing a fake travel film, depicting the home of an African cannibal. The "cannibal" had made complaint that he had not been paid for starring in the role. He also disclosed that he was a Harlem janitor who had never been outside of Greater New York.

FLAG OF OUR COUNTRY

A few weeks ago, Americans celebrated Flag Day.

It is an occasion that has been duly observed ever since 1895, but we doubt whether, in the 45 years of its existence, the day has taken on a deeper meaning than it did this time. Events in Europe have brought about a new awakening of our national consciousness. Inevitably, therefore, the flag has again attained its true proportions as a symbol of America—America, something more than a mere name on the face of the globe; America, a single word that embraces the concepts of material welfare, spiritual dignity, and human freedom, ideals nearly extinct in so many other lands and in so many other human souls.

It is only natural in these troubled times that the average citizen of this country should pay particular reverence to the nation's flag. But it would be wise, too, if we remembered during all the other days of the year that this emblem of our security and our welfare is just as

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

President Roosevelt's action in appointing Republicans Stimson and Knox to the vital War and Navy cabinet posts was the meatiest piece of domestic news in a long time. It threw a bombshell into the Republican party, which was gathering in Philadelphia at the time on the eve of its nominating convention. There was rumor some time ago that the President had decided on a coalition cabinet—but it was generally believed that the idea had been dropped, one theory being that big-shot Republicans had refused to agree to it.

From the political point of view, the appointments were a clever bit of strategy. Mr. Stimson was Secretary of War under Taft and Secretary of State under Hoover, and has behind him a good record of public service. Colonel Knox has never held important public office, but he was the GOP vice-presidential candidate last time, and is an able and forthright newspaper publisher. It is a known fact that some GOP insiders have felt that important political capital could be made out of criticizing the administration of the War and Navy departments—the Navy secretaryship has been vacant some time, and the experts never regarded War Secretary Woodring as an asset to the cabinet. Now, with Knox and Stimson in key posts, it will be exceedingly difficult for the GOP to make such criticism telling. The Roosevelt cabinet still has some bad weak spots, in the view of most authorities, but it has been greatly strengthened.

Looking at the appointments from the view of foreign policy, they square with the President's recent position. It is obvious that Mr. Roosevelt has been moving from a policy of neutrality to one of non-belligerency. In other words, our position in regard to the Allies is much the same as was Italy's in regard to Germany before she took the plunge into war. Mr. Stimson has been extremely outspoken in favor of the Allied cause, and some think him an actual interventionist. Colonel Knox holds similar views. It will be remembered that it was Mr. Stimson, when he was in the Hoover cabinet, who took a strong anti-Japanese line when Far Eastern troubles were developing.

These appointments have already stirred up some dissension within the Democratic party, to say nothing of the Republican. The opposition comes from those, such as Senator Wheeler, who feel that the President wishes to guide us step by step into war. That will undoubtedly form the basis for Republican campaign attacks on this Administration, and the GOP will have plenty of evidence to draw on. All favor the defense program, in general—but there is a definite cleavage between those who insist that it must be for defense alone, and those who believe that, once we are ready, we must go to war in Europe.

The military experts now say it will take 12 to 15 months to equip and mechanize an army of 1,000,000 men, even if the arms program swings into high gear at once. And the arms program is not doing that. There is a shortage of skilled labor, and also of apprentices in certain extremely important crafts. This is creating a bottleneck which is worrying those in charge of the program.

A sweeping bill for compulsory military service has been introduced by Senator Burke. Under it, all men between 18 and 65 would be forced to register, and could be called by the President for any and all defense purposes, whether we were at war or not. There is plenty of political dynamite in this, and Congress will do a lot of talking and thinking before approving any draft measure. At the same time, sentiment in favor of compulsory service of some kind has grown, judging by the polls. Newspapers and periodicals ranging from far right to far left have endorsed it, on the grounds that it is extremely distasteful but unavoidable. And so the seed for another red-hot political issue is being sown.

As was widely expected, the French government agreed to Hitler's harsh peace terms, but a considerable segment of French opinion has disavowed the government's action. French troops in the colonies will fight on—but the capitulation of the mother country, and the surrender of French industrial areas to the Reich, has terribly weakened Allied strength. Yet all the military authorities have not given up the British cause as lost. Taking the British Isles is obviously far more difficult than taking France. The British fleet still rules the waves—and England has close to 2,000,000 men under arms.

It came as something of a relief to observers here to find that, under the terms of the German-French armistice, the French fleet is not to be used against England, but is to be interned for the duration of hostilities. However, as past experience had grimly proven, German promises must be taken with many grains of salt. And there is a joker in the peace agreement—the last article says if France does not live up to the bargain she has made, Germany will be free to consider the treaty a dead letter. Germany is to be the judge of whether France respects it. So few authorities would be greatly surprised if German-manned French warships sailed against England.

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

It's a wise idea to buy that new automobile right now.

Higher automobile prices seem inevitable. The manufacturers have not even hinted that the prices of the 1941 models will be boosted, but there is a sound basis for a price rise.

For some time skilled labor has been very scarce. This means that manufacturers have had to pay high wages which add to the total cost of the car. Other costs such as steel, tires, fabrics, taxes, etc., have gone up also. Under ordinary circumstances these factors would call for a boost in prices.

But now in addition along comes the government with its vast armament program, and it is bidding for skilled labor, for tools, dies, and all types of materials which go into new cars.

At this time of the year automobile plants are usually operating at a low level as most factories are being retooled and put in order for the new models. But this year, although the 1940 model production season is nearing its close, the assembly of new cars is only slightly below that of a month ago.

Many analysts believe the steady consumer demand for 1940 models is due to fears of a general price increase with the introduction of the 1941 models. If there is no price boost in the models this fall, it is difficult to see how the rise can be avoided on later models, because almost every cost is now trending upward.

Unless the war comes to an unexpected halt, which would likely tumble prices, I say again: this seems like a good time to buy a car and save money.

1940-41 COTTON MARKETING QUOTA REGULATIONS ANNOUNCED

Cotton marketing quota regulations for the 1940-41 season, practically identical with those in effect for the past two years, were recently announced by the AAA.

Marketing quotas on cotton for this season were approved in a National referendum last December, when producers voted by more than 91 percent in favor of the quota plan. The cotton marketing quota for each farm is the normal or actual production of cotton on the farm's allotted acreage, whichever is greater, plus the amount of any carryover of penalty-free cotton.

In accordance with the Farm Act, the regulations provide for collection of a penalty of 3 cents a pound on 1940 cotton sold in excess of the farm marketing quota. Penalties will also be collected on cotton produced in 1938 or 1939 which would have been subject to penalty if marketed in those years, provided this cannot be marketed within the 1940 quota. The penalty is 2 cents a pound on 1938 cotton, and 3 cents on 1939 cotton.

Penalties are collected by the buyer of the cotton, who is required to report each transaction, including the purchase of seed cotton. Ginners also are required to report on all cotton ginned and on all seed cotton purchased, in order that yields, marketing quotas, and penalties may be correctly determined. The marketing quota provisions of the Act do not apply to cotton having a staple length of 1 1/2 inches or longer, and the regulations provide a means of identifying such cotton as being penalty-free.

PROFESSIONAL DISTRESS

NERVE STRAIN—
MENTAL ANGUISH

Doctors and their social duties sometimes have a hard time making connections, and often are the despair of their family and friends.

It may not be generally thought that the modern Doctor takes the case of the patient as much to heart as the old family physician, but those who live close to Doctors will tell you a different story. The Physician who tries to divert his mind, or fulfill social obligations, with a seriously ill patient in his thoughts, is a very absent-minded theatre companion or bridge partner.

The Doctor expecting a momentary summons, is not free from mental strain or wakeful nights. When he finds the case beyond human or scientific help, only the immediate family grieves more than the Doctor. Of course it is up to the Doctor not to show distress, and to keep nerve strain under leash, but modern Physicians take their profession seriously, and want just as sincerely to make and keep you well as the old-fashioned general practitioner.

SUPERVISORS START CHECK ON 1940 CROPS

The checking of compliance of the 1940 crops under the Agricultural Conservation Program began this week. Mr. Ralph Fischer, from the state office, was in Fulton last week to train the local supervisors. They are as follows: Harold Hutchison, Hugh Garrigan, Jr., Floyd Putman, Arlie Batts, Samuel E. Holly, Hamer Weatherspoon, Edward B. Wiley, Geo. M. Davis, Eugene Douglas, James G. Browder, Avery McIntyre and J. C. Bondurant.

S. V. Foy, county agent, said, "Good cooperation of the farmers will make checking compliance much quicker and with more satisfaction. Be sure that some one that is familiar with the farm and divisions of the crops go with the supervisor so that the exact information concerning the crops division may be learned. See that the supervisor goes to all parts of the farm and see the boundary line of all fields on the farm. This will help to prevent errors."
