A MESSAGE FROM THE MORMON CHURCH

The majority of the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints are located in Utah and in the Mormon settlements, according to a D. A. Lyman, manager of the Church.

The Mormon settlements are particularly rich in raw materials, Mr. Lyman points out. They produce a variety of products, including coal, iron, copper, silver, gold, and other minerals. The Church also engages in agriculture and livestock farming.

The Church has a large number of adherents within the state, and it is a significant force in the local economy, providing employment and supporting various industries.

factories, homes, farms

Small men command the same efficiency power supply as large men when they are served by a widespread transmission system. The small factory and the household have access to power produced efficiently in large central generating plants, and distributed widely over the countryside by hard-wired transmission lines.

Today the same efficient power supply is being extended to the farms in ever-increasing numbers.

The Name in Her Mirror

By RUBY DOUGLAS

The woman who had wanted to go up to me.

The next day, when I saw her, she looked a little sad.

"I'm not sure I want to go up to me," she said. "I don't know if I really want to go up there."

"But it's such a beautiful place," I said. "You'll have so much fun."

"I know," she said. "But I'm not sure if I'm ready."

"Why not?" I asked. "You've been going to school, haven't you?"

"I have," she said. "But I just don't feel ready yet."

"I understand," I said. "Just take your time. When you're ready, you can go up there."

"Thank you," she said. "I appreciate it."

I walked away, feeling a little sad myself. For some reason, I didn't feel ready to go up there. I didn't know why, but I just didn't feel ready.

"If you need anything," she called after me. "Just let me know."

I nodded, feeling a little lost. I didn't know what to do. I didn't know if I was ready to go up there.

The next day, when I saw her, she looked a little happier.

"I think I'm ready now," she said. "I think I'm ready to go up there."

"I'm glad," I said. "I'm glad you're ready."

She smiled, feeling a little better. "I know," she said. "I'm ready now."

Use of Canned Foods Increases
As New Standards Are Enforced
Public Said to Be Responding to More Rigid Restrictions by Increasing Its Purchases

By Dr. P. R. DUNBAR
Assistant Chief, Food, Drug and Insecticide Administration, Department of Agriculture.

There is no doubt that the canners' bill, which was passed by Congress and signed by the President, has been of great advantage to the public. The measure was designed to improve the quality of canned foods, and it has already had a marked effect on the buying habits of the public.

According to information received by the Department of Agriculture, sales of canned foods have increased sharply since the new standards became effective. This is a most encouraging sign, for it indicates that the public is realizing the importance of purchasing foods that are properly processed and that meet the requirements of the new law.

The canners' bill set new standards for the quality of canned foods, and these standards have been enforced by the Food, Drug and Insecticide Administration. The result has been a marked improvement in the quality of canned foods, and this has been reflected in the increased sales of these products.

The new standards cover a wide range of products, including fruits, vegetables, meats, and dairy products. The standards are based on the principles of good factory practice, and they are designed to ensure that canned foods are processed under conditions that will preserve their quality and prevent contamination.

As a result of the new standards, the public has become more aware of the importance of purchasing canned foods that are properly processed. This has led to a greater demand for these products, and the canners have responded by increasing their production.

The canners' bill has been a great benefit to the public, and it is to be hoped that it will continue to be enforced with the same strictness. The Department of Agriculture will continue to monitor the quality of canned foods and to enforce the standards that have been set.
