Not since the unveiling of the Latham monument to the Confederate dead, on May 19, 1887, has such a crowd assembled around it as that which Thursday gathered there to do honor to the nameless and unknown war heroes who rest beneath that granite shaft. It was the sixth anniversary of the most memorable day in Hopewille's history. The success of demonsstration and its attendant ceremonies attest the loyalty and love which the men and women of today bear for those who were of yore. It was a grand response to a lofty sentiment and proves that the valor of the dead is still the admiration of the living; that the heroism and sacrifice of those who died for their convictions are not forgotten, even though the cause for which they took up arms is but a memory.

The ladies of the Confederate Memorial Association have every reason to congratulate themselves upon the successful issue of their noble purpose. The response of the citizens to their requests and the outpouring of the people to witness and partici-

At two o'clock the procession formed on Ninth street in front of the Armory. The police force, mounted, preceded the vehicles in which the Mayor and Councilmen rode. These were followed by the band which discontinued martial strains as the procession moved through the streets in the direction of the cemetery. Following behind were the Legion

When the band came across National City Guards moving with the steady step of veterans, their bright bayonets gleaming in the sunlight. Evergreen Division Knights of Pythias, in full regiments, brought up the rear of the column. The military procession was under command of Col. Joutet Henry, who looked the ideal cavalry officer, mounted upon a gray charger.

Upon reaching the monument the military was formed around the triangular base beneath which the remains of the Confederates slept.

Dr. W. L. Nourse offered a beautiful and touching prayer, after which "Peace," "History," "Valor" "Patriotism," represented by young la-

Children attired in costumes in keeping with those sentiments, passed around the shaft over the graves of the dead and deposited wreaths and garlands at the foot of the monument. Then came little girls clad in white, to each representing a State of the Confederacy, bearing baskets of flowers which were scattered over the grass that grows above the remains of the sleeping soldiers.

Dr. W. G. Wheeler then delivered a brief address and introduced Mr. W. W. Clarke who spoke twenty minutes, dwelling upon the patriotism that inspired and the lofty courage sustained the Southern soldiers during the civil conflict. There was as selected by the band, after which Dr. Wheeler introduced Mr. Glimmer M. Bell who paid a tribute to the private soldier of the Confederate army and the sentiment which prompted the ladies to decorate the graves of these unknown dead. The speeches were all listened to with close attention, and were eloquent efforts and well received.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bell's address Rev. C. T. Nash delivered a prayer, and the Latham Light Guards fired three salutes over the graves. This concluded the official program, but a large part of the crowd adjourned with the Latham Light Guards to the grave of Gen. Jackson in the Southwestern portion of the cemetery where a beautiful wreath of flowers sent by Mr. W. T. Blackmore from New Orleans was placed above his remains and the company fired a salute in honor of the memory of as gallant a soldier as ever met death.

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some faint smudges and discoloration, characteristic of old paper. The left edge of the page shows the binding of the book, with visible stitching and the inner cover material. The overall tone is a warm, off-white or light cream.
