Banker-Farmer Plan

An article in Farmers' Circular is of interest to bankers, as it makes the following point: banks and farmers are not as far apart in their interests as you might think. According to the article, banks and farmers have some common interests, such as the need for financial stability, the need for efficient credit, and the need for improved methods of production. The article suggests that banks and farmers can work together to achieve these common goals. It also points out that banks and farmers have some different interests, such as the need for higher interest rates for farmers and the need for lower interest rates for banks. The article suggests that these differences can be reconciled by finding common ground on issues that are important to both farmers and banks.

Bargain Days for Foods

Now is the time to buy canned goods, as two years from now, as the market, and the farmer grow scarce of food and oil and the people of saving.

Canned foods will probably vary from 5 to 25 cents a pound, depending on demand. In 1930 the demand for canned foods was so large that the only way to obtain them was in limited quantities.

Canned foods for Babies

In the simple foods especially those who believe in no more than the best for their children, have been proven most effective in the treatment of infantile cases. Canned foods are used for the treatment of infantile cases with great regularity.

Canned Foods for Babies

This is the reason why many women are unable to keep the children weaned to the milk of their foremothers.

After thorough inspection and testing of the products of the canned food factories, these foods are placed on the market and are sold under the superintendence of reputable manufacturers. Some of these foods are made on farms under the superintendence of reputable men.

The same care is given to these products as are given to the products of the canning factories. All foods are packed in the best possible manner and are given a thorough inspection and testing before they are placed on the market.

Canned foods for Babies

These products, along with the foods of the canning factories, are packed in the best possible manner and are given a thorough inspection and testing before they are placed on the market.

The same care is given to these products as are given to the products of the canning factories. All foods are packed in the best possible manner and are given a thorough inspection and testing before they are placed on the market.
