NUMBER THIRTY-FIVE.

JACKSON WINS KITTY LEAGUE PLAY-OFF

The Bowling Green Barons cut loose with an 18-hit attack Thursday night to defeat the Jackson Generals 14 to 3 in the Kitty League playoff series. George Longazel, pitching for the Barons, limited the Generals to eight hits, which he kept well scattered, and led the Barons' hitting attack with four hits.

A six-hit pitching job by Carl Gaiser kept the Generals in the series as he turned back the Barons 7 to 4 Friday night. Merkel and Parker furnished most of Jackson's fireworks, each hitting a homer with a mate on base. Haas, pitching for the Barons, was relieved in the third by Lee after giving up 7 hits and 5 runs.

Returning to Jackson Sunday afternoon for the sixth game of the series, the Generals evened the score by defeating the Barons 4 to 1. Kinder, pitching for the Generals, allowing only four hits, struck out eight and walked only two.

Carl Gaiser went the route for the Generals in the final game Monday night, taking his second victory of the series, as the Barons went down in defeat 4 to 2. Bowling Green used two pitchers and two pinch hitters in a desperate attempt for victory, but they were unable to push across runs in the pinches. The Barons out-hit the Generals 8 to 5.

Dr. Hawkins Speaks At Lions Club

Dr. Don P. Hawkins, who is leaving next week end to begin his ministry at the First Christian Church in Dyersburg, was the guest speaker at the Lion's Club Meeting last Friday. He was introduced by Sandolph Cohn, program leader.

Dr. Hawkins spoke on "The Other Fellow," and stated that in order to live a religion one's kindness must reach out to other people.

Harry Barry of Hickman, employed in public health service, was present and asked the cooperation of the club in getting work done on the ditch in Carr's Park. A committee was appointed to investigate this project. Dr. Weaver, who will be associated with Dr. Hawkins in his new clinic, was a guest. For the past two years Dr. Weaver has been connected with the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit.

S. FULTON FOOTBALL SEASON BEGINS TODAY

About forty candidates are out for positions on the South Fulton high school six-man football squad, and Coach Jess Haynes has been working hard to round the squad into shape for the opening game to be played in Sharon today.

Graduation reduced the ranks of the 1939 stars but ten letter men are returning and the team will be built around these lads who have had experience in the game. Returning for this year's grid war are Buchanan and Parham, two of the toughest lads in the game.

Color will be added to the game this year by a twenty piece band under the direction of Obion County Director of Bands William Schwalb. The band will make all trips with the team. All home games of the Red Devils will be played at night on the South Fulton school athletic field.

The Red Devils have four open dates which they expect to fill in the next week or so. Games scheduled so far are:

Sept. 20—Sharon, there
Sept. 27—Sharon, here.
Oct. 4—Obion, there.
Oct. 11—Obion, here.
Oct. 24—Mounds, here.
Nov. 15—Mounds, there.

October 16 Is Draft Registration Date

The new draft act was signed Monday by President Roosevelt and October 16 has been fixed as registration day for 16,500,000 young Americans, who are now subject to compulsory military training. The President said that registration on that date would be between the hours of 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. (local time), and that every male citizen between 21 and 35, inclusive, will be expected to report to a neighborhood precinct to fill out a registration card and a registration certificate. The certificate will be kept by him and the card will be sent to the local selection service board.

The registrant will be placed in one of four classes as follows: class one, those who are available for immediate service; class two, those who are deferred because of essential character of the service they are rendering in their present occupations; class three, those individuals who should be deferred because of individuals dependent upon them for support; class four, those specially deferred by terms of the act.

The first contingent of 75,000 to be called up under the measure will go into uniform about a month after the 16,500,000 are registered. Subsequent quotas will be called in blocks of 100,000 or 125,000 to a total of 400,000 about January 1, and 900,000 in the spring of 1941.

The men drafted will receive initially 12 months of training. They will be liable for service anywhere in the Western Hemisphere, in United States possessions outside the hemisphere and in the Philippine Islands. They will get the Regular Army pay, which the measure raises from $21 to $30 a month for privates.

All between 18 to 35, inclusive, will be offered an opportunity to volunteer for a one-year period of service and training and those who offer themselves—provided they are suitable—are to be accepted before any others are selected.

Important To Community

(An Editorial)

First we wish to call your attention to topics discussed in The Forum this week. But here let us discuss community growth and betterment.

To have a healthy measure of community development we must have unity of purpose and action in all things that work toward the general upbuilding of this territory. It takes a lot of hard, conscientious work to build a community, and only a few untoward acts to do it a lot more harm.

We all must be interested in the general welfare of one another, for whatever is detrimental to one is also harmful to the community. Each being an integral part of the community, therefore it is not for our own good. Every citizen, property owner and business operator in Fulton must bear his share of taxes, contributions, improvements, support of our schools, churches and other institutions. Each in turn realizes individual benefit for the part he plays in the community life.

Every dollar spent locally stays here to remain in circulation and to benefit the community over and over. In this modern age of fast transportation and transient peddlers, some of us in our desire to practice economy, spend in channels which in the long run lead to only false economy. Let us always bear in mind that money kept in our own locality finds its way back to our own pockets. In the circuit it may pay the grocer, doctor, buy clothing, hire labor, furnish the home, give some one a job, or perform any one of a dozen different services.

The local business man is called upon to make contributions needed to put over worthy causes in the community; he will respond because of his civic spirit. By carefully analyzing the real and actual value back of any purchase made, you will find that the local merchant is prepared to serve you economically, and he is always ready to cooperate when civic duty calls. You cannot obtain this selfsame service, value and heartfelt interest by trading away from home. These firms who support the community deserve the support of its citizens.

Johnson of Bowling Green, former State President of the Kentucky Homemakers' Federation and State Delegate to the meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World in London, England, June, 1939, will be the Guest Speaker.

A review of the year's work done by the Fulton County Homemakers' Association will be given by the County Project Leaders.

Lunch will be served by the Missionary Society of the First Christian Church.

Haws Clinic Opened Here This Week

The new Haws Clinic and Hospital, which has been under construction for several months, is nearing completion and occupants of the first floor moved in this week. Dr. M. W. The upstairs, which will be completed soon, will have about 15 rooms and will be used as a hospital.

The new building is of brick veneer, backed up by hollow tile, and has floors of asphalt tile. Glass bricks were used in the operating room and in the entrance to insure the maximum of light.

Bulldogs Lose To Martin 13-12

The Fulton Bulldogs lost their first game of the season 13 to 12 Friday night in Martin. White and Winstead scored the two touchdowns for the Bulldogs and both came in the third period. FULTON GETS NICE RADIO PROGRAM

Fulton recently got a nice send-off in a radio program sponsored by The Fulton County News over station WCKY at Cincinnati, Ohio. This program was heard by many radio listeners in this community, as well as by radio fans throughout the United States.

The announcer said, "WCKY tonight salutes Fulton, Ky., hub of highways and railroads, and the playground of West Kentucky and Northwest Tennessee. This program is sponsored under the auspices of the Fulton News, which circulates in the Ken-Tenn Territory, which comprises Fulton county, portions of Hickman, Graves counties in Kentucky, and parts of Obion and Weakley counties in Tennessee.

"Fulton proper is located in Kentucky, while the sister city of South Fulton is in Tennessee. This community has two municipal governments and two distinct school systems. Each school has its own band which participate in many outstanding events of this area.

"These twin-cities of Fulton and South Fulton have a combined population of nearly 7,000 citizens. Fulton was named after Robert Fulton, famed steamboat inventor, and got its start as a community well before the Civil War. In 1862 Fulton received its first postoffice. Then came the expansion of railroads and by 1898, Fulton had become the axis of railroads operating between St. Louis, Chicago, Memphis, New Orleans and other points north and south.

"Surrounded by fine farming land the community continued to thrive, until today more than $9,000,000 worth of livestock, poultry and farm products are marketed through local channels. The Illinois Central Railroad, having five routes out of Fulton, and Highways 45, 51 and 94, leading to large city markets like Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, are used extensively for freights and passenger traffic.

"Swift & Company, Armour & Company have produce and cream plants here. Browder Milling Company buys and wholesales grain, manufacturing flour, meal and feeds. The Siegel garment factory employs three hundred workers with a nice payroll. Such civic organizations as the Young Men's Business Club, Chamber of Commerce, Woman's Club, Lions Club, Rotary Club and other organizations, strive for community betterment.

"It is through the efforts of Mr. Bushart, editor of The Fulton News, that this program is brought to you. It is regretted that he was unable to appear personally on the program. Mr. Bushart established THE NEWS at Fulton in 1933, and since that time has made steady progress with the paper, and he has participated in many civic programs looking toward the progress of the community. During the past month he served on a committee of the Young Men's Business Club which sponsored the Ken-Tenn Livestock and Poultry Exposition, which attracted thousands of people during the three-day event.

"Fulton is noted as a mecca of entertainment, and is visited weekly by thousands of people who stop and seek amusement. Nine miles west of Fulton is Cayce, home of "Casey" Jones, famed railroad engineer, who was killed while risking his life to save passengers on his train. Everyone has heard the song, "Casey Jones," but few know that a person by that name ever lived.

"There are many other attractive and interesting spots nearby like Reelfoot Lake, located on the border line between Kentucky and Tennessee; Columbus Belmont Park with its Civil War history; Mills Point (Hickman) with its unusual early pioneer history; the site of old Fort Jefferson on the Mississippi, and the Ancient Buried City at the mouth of the Ohio river.

Wait 'til the Porter Looks for Towels

THE Canadian National Railroad, which makes a practice of opening new highways through the timbers and getting back into the mountains, broke a roadbed through a farming district and began to develop passenger traffic.

Among the settlers was a Scotchman who had been so long off the avenues of civilization that he had no knowledge of how to proceed when he hit the lavatory for his morning's shave. Somehow or other he got the water taps working, but when it came to the soap he looked around with the air of bewilderment.

"Wot is a mon to do for a bit o' suds?" he enquired.

"Push that plunger down on the left-hand faucet," volunteered a stranger, "and you can get all the liquid soap you need."

"Is it free, or do you pay?"

"It don't cost a cent; help yourself."

"A weel, mon, this is a fair surprise to me, and I shall take advantage o' it immediately."

With that remark he drew a flask from his pocket, tossed off the remaining slug in its bottom, filled the empty receptacle with a pint of liquid soap and returned to his seat in the Pullman car uttering high recommendations for modern railway facilities.

THE FORUM

By J. PAUL BUSHART, Editor

A column conducted for news, views and comments, in which readers of The News are invited to participate. Mail contributions care of THE FORUM, this newspaper.

In traveling around and about, I have observed that many sections of the country are realizing good income from tourists and visitors who come to their vicinity to see beauty and historic spots, as well as to enjoy a vacation from the workaday world at home.

I don't believe that the people of this section have thoroughly awakened to the profits that may be realized from catering to tourists. We have a lot of interesting spots in this locality, which we are so accustomed to ourselves, that we fail to appreciate their real appeal to others from the outside.

For instance, everyone knows about Reelfoot Lake, and how it draws thousands of visitors each year. There is a lot of historic background to the Ancient Buried City at Wickliffe. Right here in Fulton county, we have the birthplace of Casey Jones, railroad engineer who became famous in song. This could be developed into bigger things. A park could be established, and a museum erected, housing papers, relics, etc., about railroads.

Incidentally, we might tie-in something about steamboats, too, for after all, Fulton county was named after Robert Fulton, famed steamboat inventor. Then over in Hickman county, we have the Columbus-Belmont Park, which has an interesting Civil War background.

A little further up the river, we have the site of Old Fort Jefferson, which George Rogers Clark established. This old fort should be reconstructed, and all its history put on exhibition for tourists. There are scores of other interesting places in this territory, if only they are played up to an advantage, and good showmanship and publicity is used. I'd like very much to see some organization get interested, and do something about the possibilities along this line. For years I have been digging into the history of the Jackson Purchase, and I found many things of interest. For instance, there are people who never heard that the capital of the United States was plotted for a site near Columbus at one time. Just think of that. We might have been living in the District of Columbia today, if Dame Fortune had smiled in favor of this movement.

America is making steady headway in its production program for national defense. After months of planning and specialization, manufacturers are swinging swiftly into action and before many months will have reached a new high.

Months of careful study and engineering go into perfecting final blueprints for the new products. Only then can the needed tools and machinery be determined and ordered. Likewise, procurement and processing of materials, rearrangement or reconstruction of plant facilities, and establishment of production technique all must await completion of this earlier work.

Thousands of planes, army tanks, trucks, guns, ammunition, battle-ships and other war equipment will be needed in the preparedness program, and Uncle Sam will demonstrate to the world what mass production means. This country is noted for producing the most of any given item in the least time. All this production is going to employ many thousands of craftsmen, and the effort to raise the standing army to 900,000 men will absorb a lot more not employed now.

All in all, it looks like this country is in for a period of activity that is certain to bring economic improvement, at least for the next few years. Nobody knows how long the European struggle will continue, but regardless, when it is over there is the tremendous job of reconstruction. All of this country can preserve its resources, it will be more able to help in this work. Let's build America for America, and protect it by uniting our efforts for the development of our country and keeping it democratic.

Fulton has been talking about an airport for some time now, and we understand that a suitable field is available after the first of the year. But in the meantime, plans should be perfected for placing this field in condition, arranging for a hangar, and getting ready for the day when it can be officially opened.

Aviation is yet in its infancy. Tremendous strides will be made in this field, both militarily and commercially in the next few years. A wider interest is being manifested in aeroplanes today by the general public than ever before. The next decade or so, these planes will be almost as thick as cars.

Fulton is logically located for a good airport, and no delay should be brooked in getting ready for this new mode of transportation that is swiftly coming into its own.

When we get all those thousands of aeroplanes that the defense program calls for, where are we going to "set them down?" The War and Navy Departments and the Civil Aeronautics board have been working on this, as a result legislation embracing a nation-wide airport development program, to cost more than $200,000,000 will be presented to Congress. A survey by the aronautics board showed that aviation requirements, present and immediate future, demanded immediate start on expanding or building a chain of 3,500 airports. About half of these would be brand new fields, the remainder existing fields but subject to expansion and improvement. No dope is available on where these will be spotted, but you can be sure there'll be a fine scramble among cities to sell themselves as logical sites.

Fulton should have had a new school building to replace the old Carr Institute building, but by continually putting off what should have been done today until tomorrow, no move was made soon enough to get in on the PWA program, and save the taxpayers, in the long run.

many thousands of dollars. Sooner or later (and it'll be much sooner than you'd expect) another school building will have to be erected. Then we'll pay all the bill without any aid from the federal government. I never have believed in all this federal spending, but if we're going to have it any way, I see no reason why we should not have taken advantage of it like every other city in the country did. But that is water over the fall now. What I'm driving at, is that immediate action be taken to put Fulton on the future air map of the country, by doing something about it today.

Everyone should be vitally interested in the causes of traffic accidents in his community. Too many times people inquire "How did this happen?" They should ask, "What caused it?"

Accidents do not happen—accidents are caused.

Proper accident investigation and reporting are the very essence of traffic safety. Our streets and highways will never and can never be safe until the causes of accidents are known and are understood by the authorities responsible for traffic safety. Causes of accidents should be analyzed, not in generalities, but definitely, specifically, and in detail.

Once the cause is known, definite steps should be taken to prevent a recurrence of such an accident by correcting the hazard.

Know the cause; then develop the cure.

TO HONOR ILLINOIS CENTRAL CHIEF

As evidence of the esteem in which he is held by his associates, J. L. Beven, president of the Illinois Central System, will be honored in Chicago Wednesday, September 25, with a dinner given by officers of the railroad upon the fortieth anniversary of his entering the service. General chairman of eighteen railway labor organizations and president of fifty-two service clubs on the railroad will also be present.

Sharing the spotlight with the president will be J. W. Cousins of New Orleans, retired superintendent, who hired young Beven as the messenger boy who was later to become president of the road.

Mr. Beven is the first president whose entire career has been with the Illinois Central. Also he is the first Southern to hold this position. He was born in McComb, Miss., the son of an Illinois Central locomotive engineer. He became president in December, 1938, succeeding the late L. A. Downs.

Money Talks

By Frederick Stamm, Economist, Director of Adult Education, UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

With war all around us it is necessary for us to begin wartime defense preparations. I say "defense preparations" because we are led to believe that the U. S. will wage no offensive war.

Last week I discussed the beneficial economic aspects of this program and the fact that a large munitions program may be the stimulus for better business generally. Some experts say it may aid greatly in bringing back prosperity. I say it may create a boom in business, but I doubt if a vast armament program will ever create lasting prosperity.

The character of the armament industry unfortunately is not a constructive force in the life of any nation. It turns our manufacturing energies and our manpower from productive to destructive channels. Careful estimates indicate we will spend 36 million dollars during the next five years on defense preparations. And then it will cost us from three to five billion each year to operate this gigantic war machine.

The building of armaments is usually associated with the lowering of the standard of living of a nation. Much of the 36 billion we will spend will contribute nothing to the permanent welfare of our people. How much better off we would be if we could spend this money on hospitals, schools and libraries; on roads, flood walls and reforestation; on automobiles, radios and even food and clothing. These things contribute to the well-fare of a people and raise the standard of living. Airplanes, submarines, munitions are instruments of destruction.

Who will pay the bill? You and I and every other American will pay it in heavier taxes. And we must remember taxes paid so the government can purchase munitions simply takes money out of our pockets which we could use for other purposes.

This is a frank statement, but I believe every American should know what is going on and who must "foot the bill."

Unfortunately we are living in a world partially dominated by war lords. We must build up our defenses against the possibility of war. But above all, we must realize war or even the preparation for a war of defense must lower our standard of living.

Modern Tourist Cabins Serve Many Travelers

The Lucia Tourist Park, three miles north of Fulton, on Highway 51, is a popular stopping place for tourists who are traveling through this section. Back in July, 1936, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Lucia took over these tourist cabins, and since that time many improvements have been made in the property.

Today there are three double cabins, six single cabins, well ventilated and modernly arranged. Driveways have been made through the tourist court, the grounds have been landscaped and beautified. At present Mr. Lucia is building a trailer park, arranged with lights and water facilities, to accommodate eight trailers.

The cabins are conveniently arranged, with running water, bath, lights and gas for heating and cooking; with clean, comfortable beds and attractive rest rooms. Lucia's Cabins are recommended by the Inter-State Tourist Association and the American Tourist Association. Of more than 45,000 so called "tourist camps" in the United States only slightly more than 10 per cent are recognized as such and recommended by these associations.

During the past summer season, with Americans seeing America first more than ever before due to the European conflict, tourist travel through this section has been heavier than usual. Lucia's Cabins have been well filled nights by these travelers who stop overnight.

Mr. Lucia is making preparations for a bigger season next spring and summer, and expects to inaugurate more improvements during the winter months. Located on a main highway, with several interesting points nearby these cabins enjoy nice patronage from tourists from practically every state in the union. Nearby are such interesting places as Reelfoot Lake, Columbus-Belmont Park, Ancient Buried City, birthplace of Casey Jones, famed railroad engineer, the Woolridge Monuments, and Mills Point, once the local transportation point of West Kentucky when steamboating was in its prime.

WINTER COVER CROP PLAN IS PUSHED

Through a lot of complicated research agricultural experts have deduced that it takes Mother Nature hundreds of years to produce one inch of soil from parent rock, but almost any Kentucky farmer can figure out that hard winter rains will carry off more than that in one year.

To prove this to his satisfaction all the farmer has to do is to look around his own or a nearby farm for a field that has been torn up for a row crop—such as tobacco, corn or cotton—for a few years and left bare to the elements during the winters. If the abused field is level he will notice the soil is thin and poor, and if it is a hill field he will notice yawning gulches and red clay banks.

That is bad enough, but take it from the agronomists of the University of Kentucky Extension Service, there is even a sadder story than meets the eye. Besides the loss of topsoil, what is left of the field also will show disastrous loss of plant food through leaching. Loss of nitrogen alone, one of the most expensive plant foods, will be 25 times what it would have been if the soil had been protected.

In an effort to prevent such losses to soil fertility—which, it is estimated, takes $35,000,000 annually out of the pockets of Kentucky farmers—the Agricultural Adjustment Administration aided by the Extension Service, has launched a drive to induce farmers to use protective cover crops.

William C. Johnstone, agronomy field agent, describes a cover crop as a crop grown during the fall and winter to provide a protective covering to land which otherwise would be bare. Included in this category are wheat, rye, ryegrass, barley, vetch, winter oats and crimson clover.

To date, according to Johnstone's estimate, more than 1,000,000 acres of Kentucky land have been so badly eroded as to render them unfit for farming, and another 1,000,000 are reaching the same state rapidly. Failure of Kentuckians to use cover crops, he points out, has been the major factor in this soil destruction.

Reports compiled by Johnstone show that 3,100,000 acres of land in this State normally are used for cultivation of crops that leave the land bare in winter. Of this acreage, 2,400,000, or 78 per cent, are left unprotected through the winter.

Besides conserving and building soil, cover crops benefit the farmer in other ways, the agronomist states. All such crops, he says, when properly handled, furnish a large amount of early spring pasture, and the cereals, when seeded early, furnish fall pasture which often may be used throughout the winter.

Winter cover crops should not be used as the sole feed of livestock, Johnstone explains, but should be considered valuable supplements to a grain and roughage ration. Small grains may be pastured to a moderate extent and then harvested for grain with little or no lowering of yield, or they may be used as winter pasture and allowed to mature for feeding down with livestock.

When turned under, the agronomist points out, cover crops add organic matter to the soil and thus increase the amount of water the soil can absorb. Legume cover crops, such as vetch and crimson clover, add considerable nitrogen to the soil when used for green manure, Johnstone explains. Also, cover crops turned under before 15 inches high usually increase greatly the yield of crops which follow them.

"One of the principal uses of winter-grain cover crops is as nurse crops for grasses and legumes in changing a field from cultivated to sod crops. In this case, the grasses except, perhaps, orchard grass, should be sowed in the fall, on the cover crop, and the legumes in the early spring," the agronomist said. Johnstone emphasizes that cover crops, to be most effective require proper care. The Extension Service has found that on soil experiment fields in Kentucky, outside the Central Bluegrass region, and on hundreds of ordinary farms, the application of liming materials and superphosphate profitably increase growth of cover crops. He also points out that cover crops alone will not do the conservation job, but should be used along with other essentials of good soil management.

To enlist cooperation of farmers in the Triple-A cover crop program, inform them of aid the government will provide, and to explain the 1941 program changes, a series of district meetings recently have been held throughout the State. Extension service agronomists gave talks on cover crops and Triple-A field men and State AAA Committeemen discussed the 1941 Agricultural Conservation Program with county and community committeemen.

OUR DEMOCRACY — by Mat

Washington Snapshots by JAMES PRESTON

It is tragic but true that in these days when Washington is acting on extremely important matters, many of its legislators are thinking only of politics—and thus becoming victims of political catch-lines and slogans.

There is much talk, for instance, about how "if we're going to conscript men we've got to conscript industry and wealth."

Some thinking legislators see beyond the words, however, and translate "wealth conscription" into common language. This is the way one of them says it would work:

A government agent would approach a farmer or home-owner or small businessman, and the conversation would go like this:

Government Agent: "How much are you worth?"

Farmer: "Honest, I don't know what my house and land and farm animals and tools are worth."

G. A.: "Well, I'll have to estimate it then."

After a brief survey, the government agent comes back and says: "I find you're worth $500. Therefore, you'll have to buy $500 in government bonds."

Farmer: "But I haven't got $500."

G. A.: "That's all right; we'll lend you $500 at 4 per cent interest and you can use that to buy the bonds."

Farmer: "What interest will I get on the bonds I buy?"

G. A.: "Oh, 1 or 2 per cent."

That's what "wealth conscription" means.

The tax bill offers another sample of what a slogan will do. It was presented as a measure to "take the profits out of war." So most members felt they had to vote for it or be accused of favoring war profiteering.

Nobody wants to profiteer out of the war. The National Association of Manufacturers even advocated that the excess profits taxes apply to all of 1940 income although eight months of the year have passed and the big national defense expenditures have not yet begun to flow.

But court suits are still being fought over the World War excess profits tax because, like all such taxes, it can never be fair to everybody. The trouble, again, is the catch-line—"take the profits out of war." Because of that catch-line, legislators vote for the bill without understanding it and without knowing what it really would do to business.

Take the comment made privately by one man who has been a member of the House of Representatives for 17 years, elected by his constituents nine times. During debate on the excess profits tax bill, he wandered into a room just off the House floor and said to a colleague: "I can't even ask an intelligent question about that bill, so I guess I'll just go off and sit still until the time comes to vote for it."

COUNTY AGENT

Twenty-seven men and women interested in Poultry Production attended an all day poultry meeting in Crutchfield, Tuesday, September 17th. The meeting started with a trip through the Swift Produce Plant in Fulton, and observed their methods of killing and dressing poultry. Also, through the creamery and ice cream departments.

They then met at Mr. and Mrs. Paul Williams' at Crutchfield and had picnic lunch. Splendid lunch was served and all enjoyed the noon hour very much.

Following that a discussion meeting was conducted under the direction of the County Agent and assisted by C. E. Harris, College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, and A. C. Rose, R. E. Mulford, and Mrs. Madge Gerling assisting. A very profitable and interesting discussion was given.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Clark, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sams, Mr. and Mrs. Bob McCullum, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Lunsford, Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Jeffress, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Bransford, and daughter, Mrs. Frank Stroud, Mrs. John Dawes, Mrs. Paul Davis, Mr. L. A. Watkins, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Williams and son.

The County Agent insists that each farmer growing hybrid corn know the exact results of his yield and make comparison of his hybrid corn with the favorable open pollinated variety that he has grown. This can be easily and quickly done by measuring off 1-70th of an acre of each variety of corn, shuck and weigh. The number of pounds obtained on 1-70th acre will equal the number of bushels per acre as corn at this time weighs 70 pounds per bushel.

To obtain 1-70th of an acre measure 155 ft. for the rows of 4 ft. apart; 162 ft. when the rows are 3 ft. 10 inches apart; 170 feet when the rows are 3 ft. 8 inches apart; 173 ft. when the rows are 3 ft. 6 inches apart. This table will be found accurate if followed by the above instructions.

The County Agent will gladly assist any farmer in making a check of his corn yield and would be glad to have his report if he makes the test himself.

THE PASSING OF UNCLE

Nothing has impressed me more within the last several years than the passing of the dignified old Negro retainer whom we all called "Uncle." When you consider that the Civil War ended seventy-five years ago, it is easy to see why there are so few Negroes left who once knew what slavery was like.

All of us of my generation knew the type well; even the younger people can see this faithful old servant in the literary interpretations of Southern writers. Nearly always Uncle was really old, at least so to us younger people. He could remember when our parents were babies; he had carried them on his back or made whistles or whips for them; he grew up with our grand-parents and probably stayed around the house during the war to protect the family while Old Marse and Marse Bob were out in Ferginny fighting with Marse Robert E. Lee. Whatever other faults he may have had, he was loyal to his white folks and believed that no other family was ever quite so brave or had so many pretty women-folks.

Uncles were numerous in my childhood, as I have said in an earlier article. There was garrulous Uncle Charlie, always the hero of his endless yarns, who could remember everything that had happened and plenty that had not, if we were to believe his white folks after he had gone away. He talked right on, like Mark Antony, a "plain, blunt man," whether any one listened or not. Somehow I listened to him, regardless of the distractions around the country store; I wish I could remember accurately all the yarns I have heard him spin. Then there was Uncle Pompey, dignified and pompous, as if he knew the Latin meaning of his great name. Uncle Ed was the caterer of the neighborhood down the creek from us; he was called in to cook elegant big dinners when company came. He told me that abolition was a mistake, that the Negroes were better off under the old system. And Uncle Matt, short of stature but full of dignity, strutted on Sunday in his frock coat, the tails of which almost touched the ground. All of them knew the value of the families to which they had belonged and had not strayed far away from them after Marse Abe Lincoln freed the slaves.

There has grown up a fine loyalty among many of the younger Negroes, particularly the ones whose parents have kept in touch with the white folks, but there is lacking something in the air of these younger ones, though some of them are not actually young in years any more. Better educational facilities, travel, participation in elections and farm programs have given many of this type in our state a bearing quite different from the Uncle whom we delight to honor. The Negro who has learned a trade has developed an independence that contrasts with the servility and worshipfulness of the older type. While I personally like the Negro who has been able to sustain himself and his family in our rather difficult times, I somehow long for the quaint manners and talk of the old retainers who loved to defend the traditions and pretensions of the big house.

ANNIVERSARY OF OUR CONSTITUTION THIS WEEK

Tuesday, September 17, was the anniversary of the Constitution of the United States, representative of the largest remaining democracy in the world today. It was 153 years ago that our forefathers satisfied this country's greatest document: The Constitution of the United States of America. That was on September 17, 1787 at a convention of delegates from several states held in Philadelphia.

Back when this country was in its infancy, the colonies aroused by the oppressive actions of the home government, met in New York in 1765 to form a program of resistance. Another meeting was held at Philadelphia in 1774, which called itself the Continental Congress. The second Congress and a third in which all the colonies were represented, were held as war developed between the colonies and the mother country. In 1776 this congress declared the independence of the colonies and in 1777 framed the Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union.

At a convention held at Philadelphia in May, 1787, seven colonies being represented, George Washington was elected president. This assembly of fifty-five delegates sat nearly five months and after considerable work, patience and persistence, wrote the Constitution. On this document, the government of "the people, by the people, and for the people" has operated all these years.

A shrewd detective emptied the steaming coffee pot in Henry Derin's home in Boston and found a diamond ring that Derin had stolen.

ADVERTISING ENTERS TWENTY-FIRST YEAR

With the appearance of the current message from J. L. Beven, president of the Illinois Central System, the railroad enters the twenty-first consecutive year of institutional advertising in newspapers on its lines. The first of these monthly advertisements appeared in September, 1920.

This form of advertising has been published in nearly 500 daily and weekly newspapers in the fourteen states in which the railroad operates. It is estimated that space equivalent to thirty-five full pages in each newspaper on the railroad has been consumed in the twenty years.

For the last ten years the strictly factual, or report style, message which was used during the first decade has been alternated with discussions that reflect, by illustration and word, the human side of railroading. The September, 1940, advertisement, for instance, projects a conversation between two jects who love to eat in dining cars and ride on trains. The comment of President Beven is:

"Young people today have surprisingly practical ideas about things. We might be better off if we paid more attention to them. Ask any typical boy if he likes to travel by train, and he'll not only answer 'yes' but tell you why."

TURNING THEORY INTO PRACTICE

The plans made by the railroads, in cooperation with the War Department, to meet the unusual demands of the national defense program have been well publicized of late. And recently, due to the army maneuvers that have been held in various parts of the country, the lines have had a chance to show what they can do.

In a War Department office in Washington there is a new sort of "war map." Dotted with various colored pins, arrows and tags, it tells the complete story of how America's largest troop movement since the World War was handled to the complete satisfaction of the army heads. As hundreds of special trains moved toward the maneuver areas of the four armies, the map changed constantly. Progress telegrams came in at the rate of one a minute, and the information was immediately recorded. During the days of the heaviest troop movement, men worked day and night with the map, keeping it up to the minute. The War Department knew precisely where every train was, from the moment is started until it reached its destination.

During much of that time, the weather was unfavorable. There was excessive heat in some sections, and torrential rains and winds of hurricane proportions in others. Yet, practically all trains involved kept to their schedules. A number came in ahead of time. There was practically no delay, no confusion—even though this was the biggest piece of transportation planning ever undertaken by the War Department and the railroads in time of peace. In fact, at its three-day peak, the movement of troops surpassed anything carried out during the World War. And during all these troop movements, regular transportation for the public was carried on as usual, which is further evidence of the marvelous coordination of the American railroad system.

That was the test of railroad efficiency—and the lines came through 100 per cent. Theory was turned into practice without a hitch. And that's big news for the country. It means that whatever the future may bring, the railroads will be instantly ready to do whatever job is necessary to help insure the safety and security of this nation.
