Following this part of the program, pictures of various operators and mechanics of this territory, taken by Thomas Shankle, were shown. These pictures provided a lot of interest among those present and indicated that much hard work had been done by Mr. Shankle in taking and assembling these reels.

Red Devils Defeat Sharon 26-12

The South Fulton Red Devils defeated the Sharon High Bulldogs, 26-12, last Thursday in Sharon. The Sharon team came to South Fulton last night for a second game.

The six-man game is faster and easier to watch as there is less confusion in the line than the eleven man game. A center and two ends compose the line, a quarterback, halfback and fullback complete the team. Forward and lateral passing is used more than half of the time in a six-man game, with speedy backs, once they get around the end, being led down the field by deadly blockers to an opening to the goal.

This is the second year of six-man football for Sharon and South Fulton high schools, which schools introduced the game to West Tennessee.

PEP SQUAD HELD CARNIVAL WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The Pep Squad, recently organized at Fulton High School, sponsored a carnival Wednesday night at the Science Hall. Proceeds from the entertainment will be used to buy jackets for members of the club.

The first home game of the football season will be played tonight (Friday) at Fairfield Park, beginning at 8 o'clock, against the Union City Golden Tornadoes and much enthusiasm is being shown for this occasion. The high school band has been practicing for the game and will give a performance between halves.

Today is "potato day" at the school, sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association for the free lunch fund, and every one interested in the school is urged to donate some potatoes to this cause.

The entire school system had a good opening this year and affairs of the school are now going along at top speed, according to statement by Supt. J. O. Lewis this week. "The children seem to be in earnest about their studies, he said, "and there are no difficulties in connection with the school." The new teachers are progressing nicely in their work. They are Miss Augusta Ray and Herschel Giles, high school; Miss June Dixon, Carr Institute; and Miss Ruby Boyd Alexander, Terry Norman.

The First District Educational Association will meet in Murray on Friday and Saturday, October 11-12. School will be dismissed on Friday and all teachers of the city schools will attend the meeting.

$2,600 DAMAGES ARE SOUGHT IN COURT

Seeking damages of $2,500 because of personal injuries, and an additional $100 to meet cost of repairs to his car, Marvin Hayes of Obion county has filed suit in the Obion County Circuit court against J. T. Wiley, his son, Randall Wiley, both of Fulton.

The suit grew out of an automobile accident occurring on the Union City-Fulton highway about a mile and a half southwest of Fulton on August 19, last.

According to the complaint, Randall Wiley, was driving a car owned by his father, J. T. Wiley. The plaintiff avers that he was driving southwestward toward Union City, and that, as he started to pass the Wiley car also going southwestward the driver, without giving a signal of any kind, turned to his left to enter a farm driveway.

In the collision, the plaintiff asserts that he received injuries from which he still suffers much pain, and that his car was damaged about $100.

Service on the suit was obtained through the office of the secretary of state. The defendants have been summoned to appear in the court during the January term.

Letter to the Editor

Even though the parking system of our town is, of course, a great improvement over the old system—there are yet many improvements that can be made. One of the worst faults in the present plans, is the method of the center panel for parking—I have noticed on busy days and Saturdays especially, how most men and practically all women fail to get into this margin; they usually get disgusted after a few trials unsuccessfully and go off either home or to locate elsewhere, often on the railroad tracks.

What has been so surprising to us is that nothing has yet been done nor said about this inconvenience when it could be corrected.

I notice that Martin, Union City, Mayfield and other towns, use the opposite method of placing cars in the center space. This can be changed only by city authorities having the lines changed. If one has failed to notice the trouble and inconvenience it causes just do as I did; watch traffic for a while next Saturday. If lines were made crosswise everyone could get in and out much easier.

Since I am a subscriber of Fulton County News, since you have stood for so many improvements and accomplished them, and since this paper is widely read, I hope you will devote a paragraph to this question soon, and see if you can't get a movement in interest of a change in the parking situation. The public would appreciate it.

YMBC HELD ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The Young Men's Business Club met in regular bi-monthly session Tuesday night at the Rainbow Room, when the semi-annual election of officers was held.

A discussion was held concerning the Paducah-Fulton football game, which the Y. M. B. C. will sponsor here on Friday, October 4. Robert Burrow is in charge of advance sale tickets. President Wright spoke briefly on the Bulldogs team and their chances for a successful season. THE FORUM

By J. PAUL BUSHART, Editor

A column conducted for news, views and comments, in which readers of The News are invited to participate. Mail contributions care of THE FORUM, this newspaper.

For the past year I have been reading up on the history, moral and political background of the countries of Europe. No one can understand the Second World War unless he fully comprehends the moral and political atmosphere in which it was born. This war has been the inevitable product of a generation of diplomatic blundering and duplicity beyond precedent in the experience of mankind.

The tragic results of international double-crossing from 1890 to 1918 might have taught the world some lessons and should have encouraged a trend towards integrity and fair dealing, after the Armistice of November 11, 1918. But sad to say, it didn't. Instead there was a steady decline of probity until by 1935, duplicity and intrigue unequaled since the days of the Borgias prevailed.

One of the outstanding examples of sham since 1919 was the series of disarmament conferences which strung along from 1921 until 1933, after which time not even diplomats could continue these farces. Substantial steps were taken to reduce armaments, but the whole show was engineered by the British Empire and the United States to make them preponderant in the Pacific. The ships regarding such an agreement as to limitation or scrapping were reached were either obsolete or obsolescent. No decision was reached as to the limitation of light cruisers, destroyers, submarines, or aircraft. The two dominant powers at Washington were, however, able to force Japan to accept a 5:5:3 ratio with Britain and the United States as to capital ships.

Paul D. Cravath summarized the results of the Washington conference when he said: "What happened at Washington was that the United States reached an understanding and a basis of co-operation with Great Britain which gave the two powers control of a combined fleet in the Pacific which is large enough to dominate Japan." Yet later, Great Britain declined to stand with the United States in using this fleet to check Japanese aggression, thus leaving us out on a dangerous and humiliating diplomatic limb.

At the Geneva disarmament conference in 1927, no progress was made because Great Britain refused to extend the 5:5:3 ratio to the light cruisers which she needed to police her vast empire. Neither did the conference of 1920-30 at London accomplish any real reduction. Then in 1932, efforts were made at a conference at Geneva, to reduce both land and sea armaments. This last failure was of critical importance because it was here that the Germans, just before the rise of Hitler, proposed that all powers disarm to the German level. It was the last chance for real disarmament. Hitler came to power five months after the conference was disbanded and any possibility of securing disarmament was then ended.

The League of Nations might have made the first steps towards a new world state which would really curb war. But it was used by Great Britain, and France, especially the latter, as an instrument for enforcing the Versailles treaty, continuing the French hegemony in Europe, and suppressing Germany and Soviet Russia. The League was never operated as a significant force for world peace or disarmament.

The Kellogg Pact to renounce war, signed in 1928, proved to be one of the most colossal frauds of all history. M. Briand proposed a treaty between the United States and France. His real motive was to tie the hands of the United States so that it could not interfere with any moves France wished to make in continuing her domination over Europe. Senators Brand, Capper and others, saw through the plan, and sprung M. Briand's trap on the Frenchman himself and proposed a general war-renunciation agreement which would curb France as well.

Unable to wriggle out of a mess he had started, Briand accepted the proposal on the face of it, but before France and Great Britain would sign they insisted upon little-known reservations which completely nullified the Pact. Really making it a war-promoting rather than a war-reducing pact. It is no wonder that this Pact did not stop a single war, or that during the first ten years of its operation some 3,500,000 persons lost their lives in war.

Fascism, which is the major menace of our day, especially since Stalin has been accused of having abandoned Communism and turned Fascist, has always been conceived in double-crossing and is dedicated to it from birth. In the case of Mussolini, it was a double double-cross. At the outset Mussolini offered the services of his Black Shirts to the Italian radicals, with the aim in mind of imitating the Russian revolution in Italy. When the radicals lacked the nerve to accept his bold plan, Mussolini then turned to the great landlords and the factory owners for his support. But he even double-crossed the latter, after having earlier double-crossed the workers, by his state-socialist measures, applied alike to agriculture and industry and trade.

Hitler and his followers made a public appeal to the downtrodden workers and peasants, promising them a better day; while privately seeking support from the Junkers and the great industrial and banking moguls, assuring them in turn that National Socialism would actually curb radicalism on the land and in the factory. Then Hitler proceeded to double-cross them both by regimenting all kinds of labor and by subjecting agriculture, industry, trade, and banking to rigorous political control under the Four Year Plans.

In the Far East, a notorious double-cross took place early in 1932. The British, alarmed somewhat over the Japanese aggression in Manchuria, hinted quietly to the Secretary of State at Washington, Henry L. Stimson, that something should be done, in order to preserve democracy and the sanctity of treaties. Mr. Stimson, without proper assurances from Great Britain, stuck out his neck. On January 7, 1932, he announced in identical notes to China and Japan what has come to be known as the "Stimson Doctrine" on the Far Eastern question. He informed Japan that the United States would not recognize any act, treaty or agreement or situation contrary to the obligations of the Kellogg Pact of 1928.

But the British speaking through Foreign Minister Sir John Simon, refused to support Mr. Stimson, and left him out on a limb; instead he took the Japanese side at Geneva. This same Sir John Simon in 1940 is one of the Big Five in the British Cabinet.

This case was of crucial importance for the future of the world. Had the Japanese been checked it might have been a warning to the dictators of Europe that the law-abiding nations would defend international obligations.

The Republican Campaign leaders said that everything would be different after Wendell Willkie took the stump. The Gallup poll shows that after one week of his speeches, the electoral vote switched to 453 votes for Roosevelt and 78 for Willkie. At this rate, if Mr. Willkie keeps on speaking, the result will be unanimous.

As long as the farmers of Kentucky are not under the Hatch Act, President Roosevelt need not worry about what the State of Kentucky will do.

Most of those, who are so violently opposed to a third term, were not for Franklin D. Roosevelt for a first term.

Every time Mr. Willkie has declared he is in favor of a proposal in Congress, most of the Republican members have voted against it.

OWING to the introduction of the telephone throughout the civilized world, mankind has benefited in the rapidity with which an interchange of human thought is accomplished. Distance and time are annihilated and a conversation can take place as though the two speakers were face to face. The surest thing you know. For instance, get this one from Scotland:

"Are you McTavish?" asked the first voice traveling over the wire.
"Aye."
"Donald McTavish?"
"Aye, Donald McTavish."
"Donald McTavish of Edinburgh?"
"The same."
"The mon wi' the gude thirst?"
"Aye. All of that."
"This is McCarthy."
"Well?"
"Donald McTavish, you owe me eight shillings!"

THE DONATION PARTY

Preachers in other times preached pretty largely for joy, I suppose, for what they made of this world's goods would hardly hold soul and body together. Their churches, if they were Methodist circuit riders, were often far apart and practically inaccessible in winter weather. It seems to me now that I never heard of a circuit rider in those days who was paid all he was supposed to get. Just how they lived through this trying ordeal is more than I know. Some sort of memorial should be erected to the preacher as a financial manager who could live on practically nothing; it would be better to have the monument to his wife, who had to manage the funds or lack of them.

We parishioners, with our farms and gardens and chickens, sometimes felt sorry for the poor preacher, who went here and there like Halley's Comet and had no chance to acquire anything except the bare necessities of clothes and furniture. Some community leader started collecting material things, for even preachers had to eat. From their abundance people gave canned goods, preserves, dried fruits, and other things, even quilts, brooms, and sometimes clothes. Those approached who could not draw on a home supply spent a few cents and bought some household article at the village store. By degrees a big pile of things was ready. Several couples would load up their buggies or a wagon or two and go across country to where the preacher lived. In addition to the staple articles they carried freshly-prepared foods in abundance, enough for a big meal for the well-wishers and the family and some to spare. The preacher and his family met the bringers of good things and blessed them genuinely, adding a wholesome religious service as a part of the celebration. Then, after a day with their preacher, the parishioners came away, feeling virtuous for their services to worthy people.

I fear that happenings of this character are now rare, not because they would not be welcome, but because we are a much more matter-of-fact people than we used to be. We have lost many of the principles of good neighborliness, even though we may be a little more prompt with our cash contributions to the church and its agencies. I wonder sometimes whether we are as close to our public servants of all sorts as we used to be or whether we just regard all of them as hired servants who do not need our neighborliness. Certainly there was in the old donation party a heart-warming experience, as I know from memory of the one I attended when I was teaching at a small village, farther west than Fidelity. To the best of my knowledge that one was the last time I ever heard of the traditional celebration; I do hope that there have been many since that time, more than thirty years ago.

Herbert Cottle of Providence, R. I., reported to police that three bicycles had been stolen from him. "When were they stolen?" asked the lieutenant. "About 15 years ago," replied Cottle.

Money Talks

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

The boom in the war industries is gaining momentum each day. The government awards contracts totaling millions each day to airplanes, tank, truck, ship-building and other war material factories.

One large automobile plant plans to turn out $33,000,000.00 worth of tanks for army use. Several others have large orders for airplane engines. One steel executive reported his plant had reached a new peak in employment and that many new men would be hired.

The national defense program is helping the railroads. The trucks as a rule, cannot carry the heavy goods, such as steel, iron, copper, bricks, and cement, used in the production of new plants, tanks, armament, etc. Eastern railroads are enjoying a brisk business in export freight movement. War goods are moving in large volume to eastern ports for shipment to British destination. In addition, large quantities of manufactured goods of all kinds for shipment to South America and Africa are moving into New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

But the entire picture is not rosy. The cotton, wheat and tobacco farmers do not have a bright outlook. Their foreign markets are dwindling, prices of their products are low and taxes and prices of goods they are buying are going up. Most reports indicate that many industries not directly affected by government war orders are not booming.

Spotty industrial and economic recovery is always evident in feverish war preparation. You seldom, if ever, find an even well sustained prosperity. That is why I have said, "War preparedness may bring a boom but not real lasting prosperity."

CORN VOTE NOT NECESSARY THIS YEAR WICKARD SAYS

No referendum on corn marketing quotas will be held this year in Fulton County, or in other commercial corn counties throughout the United States, it has been announced by Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture.

Largely because of the cooperation of farmers in the 1940 Agricultural Adjustment Administration program, corn supplies have held within the marketing quota level, although 1940 was the fourth consecutive year of above-average yields. The 1940 crop and carryover estimates indicate a total corn supply for the 1940-41 marketing year of 2,897,000,000 bushels, or 33,000,000 bushels under the 1940 marketing quota level of 2,930,000,000.

Kentucky's commercial corn counties include Ballard, Carlisle, Crittenden, Daviess, Fulton, Hancock, Henderson, Hickman, Livingston, McLean, Union and Webster.

If the 1940 crop, estimated at 2,297,000,000 bushels, added to the estimated carryover of 600,000,000 bushels, had exceeded the quota level a referendum would have been necessary to determine whether growers desire marketing quotas for the coming season.

The quota level was determined with regard to the probable effects of the International situation and to the "consumer safeguard" clause of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which provides that a food and fibre supply about equal to that of the 1920-29 period be maintained as a protection to consumers.

Total acreage planted to corn was about 88 millions, well within the 1940 AAA acreage goal of 88 to 90 million. By holding more than a normal amount of corn in the Ever Normal Granary under corn loans, farmers have been able to make this adjustment in acreage and production and devote larger acreages to soil conserving crops. At the same time, they have maintained supplies adequate to meet emergencies and have avoided the price-depressing effects of excess market supplies.

Behavior is a mirror in which every one shows his image.—Goethe.

"Buying Retonga Best Money I Ever Spent"

"It Helped My Wife So Much After All Other Medicines Failed I Took It, Too," Says Well-Known Farmer

Retonga wins greater acclaim daily from ever-growing hosts of relieved sufferers. Grateful public praise "for blessed relief Retonga brought him and his wife" comes from Mr. J. W. Riley, widely known farm-owner of Route 1, Kirksey, Ky., and a lifelong resident of Graves County.

"Retonga relieved my wife so remarkably I took Retonga, too," states Mr. Riley. "I suffered so from sluggish elimination and poor appetite I felt completely worn out. What little I ate gave me indigestion and I often felt sore and ached all over. Bad headaches tortured me, I was too nervous to sleep well and I got so weak I could hardly keep going. Buying Retonga is the best money I ever spent. It relieved my irregular elimination and I eat three hearty meals every day. My headaches, soreness and pains are relieved and I sleep like a baby. Eating plenty and sleeping well restored my strength, and I feel fine. Retonga is the best medicine I ever saw." Retonga is a purely herbal gastric tonic intended to increase the flow of gastric juices in the stomach and aid nature in removing toxic wastes from the bowels. Retonga may be obtained at DeMyer Drug Company.

Orders have been placed for two new streamlined trains for operation between Mobile and St. Louis on a much faster schedule than is now in effect, it was learned today when officials of the Mobile and Ohio and the Gulf, Mobile and Northern Railroads announced plans operation of the passenger service after the two companies are merged.

In an advertisement elsewhere in this paper, the Company which is to be known as the Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad, tells of a program of improvement which, in addition to the new streamlined trains will include operation of a connecting bus service between trains and downtown St. Louis and East St. Louis. This new and convenient service will be at no additional charge.

Under plans for the new city service into downtown East St. Louis and St. Louis, the Mobile and Ohio will cease to operate its trains into Union Station in St. Louis on and after August 20th, when all trains will be stopped at a new station to be inaugurated at Trendley Avenue in East St. Louis.

As downtown terminals the Mobile and Ohio, through special arrangements with Greyhound Lines, will use their depots in St. Louis and East St. Louis. Passengers on the Mobile and Ohio will be transferred in luxury motor coaches from Trendley Avenue Station, where the train will stop, to either of these two downtown bus terminals, or if they are going on another train, will be taken to Union Station.

Passengers leaving St. Louis or East St. Louis proper can go to either of these two downtown Greyhound Stations or to Trendley Avenue direct. If they go to either of the two Greyhound Stations they will be taken by motor coach, at no additional cost, to the train at Trendley Avenue in East St. Louis. Passengers who arrive on other trains in Union Station, will be transferred, free of charge, to Trendley Avenue Station in Yellow Cabs.

Officials said that the new streamliners would enter service upon their completion early in the fall. They are to be the latest in train equipment, and streamlined and airconditioned, are to be powered with 2,000 horse power Diesel motors.

LAST STEAMER EXCURSION THIS SEASON AT HICKMAN

The last gala excursion of the 1940 season will take place Friday night, September 27 when the Steamer Capitol, largest and finest sternwheel passenger steamer on the Mississippi, stops at Hickman for a moonlight dance trip. The local outing will be sponsored by Elks Lodge No. 1294 and the steamer will leave the wharf at 9:00 p. m.

With its cabin and cafeteria deck glass-enclosed and steam-heated, the Capitol affords comfortable dances in all weather. Music will be furnished by the Capitol's famous 12-piece band of New Orleans rhythm-makers, the "Louisiana Swing Masters", under the capable direction of Walter Fats Pichon, well-known to local dancers for his sweet-swing style of music. For this farewell-spring excursion, Pichon is presenting a special program of current hits, popular revivals and hilarious comedy novelties.

After leaving here, the Capitol will steam down the Mississippi for the winter excursion at New Orleans.

TOBACCO GROWERS TO VOTE ON QUOTAS NOVEMBER 23

Following recent meetings of tobacco growers in Burley and Dark-Fired States, held at Lexington and Hopkinsville, Kentucky, referendums on quotas for the 1941 crop, with an additional proposal to impose three year quotas, will be voted on November 23, it was announced by F. W. Colby, state AAA executive officer.

At the Lexington and Hopkinsville meetings, W. G. Finn, East Central Regional Director; J. B. Hutson, assistant to the National AAA Director; and others from Washington attended. Tobacco growers, county and state committeemen and county agents also were present, as well as warehousemen, representing each state in which Burley and Dark-Fired types are grown.

In the case of Burley, Colby said, growers engaged in production this year, will be eligible to vote. Two thirds majority will be necessary before either the three year or one year quota plan can be adopted.

Failure to ratify either plan by two thirds vote of all growers of the types involved, means the quota proposal would not be put into effect last year Burley growers voted in favor of quotas on the 1940 crop.

It was brought out at Lexington that should the one year quota plan be approved for the 1941 crop, it would be necessary to cut the existing quotas by approximately 10 percent, as a safeguard against future situations. However, it was pointed out, with three year quotas voted by growers, no cut in the 1941 quotas would be necessary.

PROFESSIONAL DISTRESS

NERVE STRAIN—MENTAL ANGUISH

Doctors and their social duties sometimes have a hard time making connections, and often are the despair of their family and friends.

It may not be generally thought that the modern Doctor takes the case of the patient as much to heart as the old family physician, but those who live close to Doctors will tell you a different story. The Physician who tries to divert his mind, or fulfill social obligations, with a seriously ill patient in his thoughts, is a very absent-minded theatre companion or bridge partner.

The Doctor expecting a momentary summons, is not free from mental strain or wakeful nights. When he finds the case beyond human or scientific help, only the immediate family grieves more than the Doctor. Of course it is up to the Doctor not to show distress, and to keep nerve strain under leash, but modern Physicians take their profession seriously, and want just as sincerely to make and keep you well as the old-fashioned general practitioner.

One of the most persistent advertisers in the history of success was Robinson Crusoe. He knew what he wanted—a ship—so he put up an ad for one. He flung up a shirt on a pole, at the top of his island. That, in the language of the sea, was plain to every seafaring man.

The circulation was small, there was no other medium but Crusoe kept at it, despite the fact that he got no inquiries for a long time. He changed his copy, as one garment after another was frayed, and in the end he got what he wanted.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

When the draft bill—officially called the selective military service act—came before Congress, it was known that the great majority of the American people favored it. So did all the leading commentators. So did most public men, including both President Roosevelt and Commander Willkie. The country looked in wondering amazement at what the totalitarian powers were doing to once-democratic Europe, and was grimly determined that every possible step should be taken to make sure that nothing of that kind would happen here at home. Under these circumstances, it would have been a reasonable forecast that the draft measure would go through on jig time.

But it didn't—Congress has seldom given more time to debating any measure. And there is a very good reason for that. Congress did not want the draft bill—the great majority of the Senators and Representatives voting for it did so with deep regrets. They supported it, in brief, because they felt that dire necessity demanded it. And they knew that, once the bill became law, great and as yet unrealized change would have come over the American scene.

This country has, always been dead set against compulsory military service in peacetime. It has always felt that forcing men to take up arms when we were not at war was in direct violation of the democratic process and the democratic tradition. It has looked with a mixture of pity and contempt on those European nations where for centuries every able-bodied man has been required to give a year or two of his life, war or no war, to learning something about the craft of arms. And yet, despite that, once the menace of dictatorship became clear, the country reversed its previous stand and decided that the peace-time draft was the lesser of the evils.

The mechanics of the law are simple enough. Next month every man in the nation between the ages of 21 and 35, inclusive, will go to a place of registration and fill out a blank. Some 16,500,000 men will be involved, and by early next year it is estimated the 900,000 of them will be called to the colors. The men chosen will serve for a year, and will be paid $30 dollars a month. There is nothing in the law granting deferment to men with dependents and families; deferment is specifically granted only to those who, in the opinion of the President, are filling important jobs in industries and callings which are essential to defense. It is believed certain, however, that men with dependents will not be called unless war comes.

What will be the effect of the draft on our economic order? Only time can answer that question fully but some of the results can be easily foreseen. The bulk of healthy, single men will be temporarily taken away from the society they are used to. They won't be marrying and building homes. They won't be earning good wages and spending them. Their places will be taken by older men, or by men whose physical status makes them unfit for military life. And when, the year's training over, these young men are released, another dislocation will take place. The draft law provides that every employer who is able to, must take the conscripts back, and put them in the same jobs at the same wages. That will mean that men taken on in the meantime to do the work must be discharged. In some cases, men who have spent a year in the army will be slow to get back again into the routine of their jobs, and that will involve loss of time and money. All in all, the draft law will unquestionably create many a problem for industry no less than the individual.

It doesn't make a pleasant picture. And certainly, a peace-time draft is, in principle, opposed to what this kind of a country and government stands for. But few oppose the action of Congress in adopting it. Ill-trained soldiers, in modern war, become easily slaughtered soldiers.

One exceedingly important change in the draft law was made by the House, after the Senate had passed its version. The change involved the industrial conscription clause. As originally stated, government could have taken over any business and no provision was made for ever returning it to private ownership. The clause was so generally worded as to make it possible to use the power to commandeer for political purposes—to punish political enemies and reward political friends.

The new clause is considered far better. Checks are provided against graft and political favoritism. A commandeered business must be returned to private ownership after five years. And no business can be seized until a number of high officials testify, with adequate proof that no other solution is possible.

Large share of the credit for this change must go to Wendell Willkie, who instantly pointed to the dangers in the first version of the industrial conscription clause. The House acted swiftly after Mr. Willkie spoke, and the Senate concurred.

DEMOCRATIC STOCK TAKES UPWARD TREND

Democratic stock took such an upward spurt last Friday morning with publication of the latest Gallup poll figures that workers in the Democratic State Headquarters at Louisville, expressed concern lest over-confidence impede organization work, launched last week, fearing this always dangerous bugaboo might act as a brake in enthusiasm necessary to getting out a record number of voters.

The Democratic plan for a short but high-gear campaign was put in motion this week throughout the state's 120 counties. With a little more than five weeks remaining, Chairman W. B. Ardery has sent out instructions for all Democrats to busy themselves now in an all-out effort. Response from party stalwarts has been highly encouraging.

Widespread planting of hybrid seed corn in the principal corn States last spring was one of the principal reasons why the corn shipped to market recently has been exceptionally high quality. Weather last fall was favorable for maturing and drying the corn, says the Agricultural Marketing Service, but a favorable season would not account for the fact that 99 percent of the commercial corn inspected on the markets last winter graded No. 3 or better, compared with 87 percent the previous year and with 5-year average of only 41 percent.

One of the outstanding merits of hybrid corn is the uniformity of the individual plants form a given lot of seed. The stalks and the ears will resemble each other very closely, and nearly every plant in a field will reach maturity at almost the same time. This means that, whatever the weather may be, the maturing and ripening will be uniform and there will be few if any moist and immature ears at the time when the majority of the ears are ready for harvest. In even the best of the open-pollinated corn there is likely to be considerable difference in the maturity of the ears. But with the even-maturing hybrid, whatever is the best treatment for most of the grain is best treatment for all of it. If some grain needs drying all needs drying, and this makes it more practical for farmers and elevators to handle the crop so as to get it to market in prime condition.

HESSIAN FLY

A Survey of Wheat Fields, in several Kentucky Counties, shows that in certain areas there are a high percentage of stems infested with Hessian Fly.

The best time to combat this pest is in the fall, and the way to do it is to observe the fly-free sowing date, says a statement from the Department of Entomology and Botany at the Agricultural Experiment Station, at Lexington, Kentucky. This date will vary with altitude, latitude, and other factors, and consequently will not be the same for the entire state.

A schedule of normal safety sowing date recently released by the College of Agriculture shows OCTOBER 12 to 14, to be normal safety-sowing date for Fulton county.

WAY FOUND TO BEAT TIME IN COUNTRY-CURING HAMS

A way to substitute electricity for time in country-curing hams has been developed by the Agricultural Engineering Development Division of the TVA, says M. M. Johns, U-T Agricultural Extension Rural Electrification engineer.

Good quality country hams, that formerly required one to three years to cure, are now possible in seven weeks with an electric meat aging cabinet. The cabinet, a simple box 24 x 30 x 38 inches, contains a 200-watt light bulb, set in a flue and regulated by a thermostat. This size box will hold from 14-18 hams depending upon their size.

The only cost of operation is for electric current used by the 200-watt lamp to maintain the required temperature. The temperature of the room in which the cabinet is located will have an influence upon the amount of current to vary from 100 to 250 k. w. h. in a seven-week period.

It is recommended that hams be given a salt or salt-sugar cure according to an approved formula at a temperature of 35-40 degrees F. for 3-4 weeks prior to aging. They may or may not be smoked, as preferred. Hams should be hung in the cabinet so they will not touch each other or the cabinet.

Two or three days should be taken to gradually bring the temperature in the cabinet to 110 degrees; then alternate the current on and off at intervals of 12 hours for the first week. After the first week, temperature may remain at 110 degrees. If hams tend to "puff" it indicates heat is being applied too rapidly and current should be disconnected intermittently for a few days.

For further information on building and operating meat aging cabinets, Johns urges those interested to consult their county agricultural agent.

GET READY TO PAY THE BILLS

As the armament program swings into gear, the biggest question facing this country is, "Where are we going to get the money?" The expenditures which have lately been authorized or considered dwarf anything in our history.

Close to $15,000,000,000 has been voted for national defense purposes, and the best estimates indicate that the figure will touch $25,000,000,000. And even that marks only the beginning. The vastly expanded army, navy and air forces must be maintained, and the cost of that alone will probably come to about $7,000,000,000 a year.

So far, Congress has almost completely side-stepped the financing problem. It has extended the $45,000,000,000 debt limit by authorizing the issuance of $4,000,000,000 of national defense bonds—a step which provides no permanent solution whatsoever. It has passed new tax measures which will produce about $1,000,000,000 a year in new revenue. And it is now considering an Excess Profits Tax which will raise in the neighbor of $200,000,000 a year if passed. All of that is simply a drop in the bucket. And, as hard statistics prove, it is impossible at this time to raise enough money by taxes to pay for current expenditures. For, if you took every dollar of net income made in this country, on the basis of 1933 figures, the total would be only $16,000,000,000.

What, then, is the answer? It is two-fold. First, it is no longer excusable for this country to spend $8,000,000,000 a year for "regular" government activities, along with the other billions required for defense. Many political projects and budgets and bureaus must be cut or eliminated. Our program of waste must be changed to a program of thrift, individually and nationally.

Second, the national income must be increased in order that we may retire our debt, just as we paid off most of the World War debt between 1920 and 1930. That means that we have to get rid of artificial, punitive restrictions on business—so that business may go to work and put the unemployed to work. A national income of $90,000,000,000 or $100,000,000,000 must be attained if we are to provide for today's gigantic expenditures without destroying our standard of living.

We can't dodge the issue and pass the buck any longer. We can't make this country secure until we have fixed, long-view policy and a definite plan for paying bills.

Giving is true having.—Spurgeon.

At a recent convention of police chiefs, sporadic enforcement of traffic laws was condemned. Experience records show that where enforcement is not given regular attention, accidents increase because of bad traffic habits.

Traffic regulations should not be enforced just for the purpose of arresting people; they should be enforced to produce a good accident record by correcting the bad driving habits of some motorists. Any enforcement program that assumes the nature of a campaign lasting for a few days or a few weeks, will bring about public criticism, which in some instances may be justified. Enforce your traffic regulations daily.

A prospective bridegroom of McAllen, Tex., unable to pay Justice G. C. Sewell his fee in a lump sum, turned over one dollar each week until the whole amount had been paid.

J. V. Coulven wrote to the traffic court in Chicago that he "regretted his inability to accept a summons for speeding."

Suing her brother because of injuries she received in an accident while riding in his car, Miss Germaine Faller of Tiffin, O., was awarded $2,000 damages.

Assigned to maintain order in a night club in Kansas City, Mo., Policeman Emmett Asbury was so far unable to cope with the situation that he lost his gun and badge.

A. J. Richardson, auto dealer of Lubbock, Tex., canceled a $900 debt owed him by 21 of his friends, explaining: "I don't like to see them dodging around corners when they see me."
