NUMBER THIRTY-EIGHT

OBION COUNTY AGENT TO BE REPLACED SOON

Franklin Yates, county agent for Obion County for the past six years, will probably be replaced by a new man on January 1. An agricultural committee, said to be anti-Yates, was elected by the Obion County Court at its regular quarterly session, held recently. This committee is expected to meet within the next few weeks to name a county agent, and a home demonstration agent. Miss Erin Tice now holds the latter position.

The so-called anti-Yates committee was elected over a pro-Yates committee by a vote of 25 to 14. The new committee consists of Luke Latimer, Harry Smith, G. W. Robey, Herbert Via, Mrs. Horace Yates, Mrs. W. C. Stovall and Mrs. Reuben Dickey.

Members of the defeated committee were Mrs. Frank Sellars, Fenner Heathcock, Mrs. Tom Wall, B. V. Jerningham, Woody Cunningham, Mrs. J. L. Bingham and Guy Upton.

Obion County has been paying $1,000 of the county agent's salary, and the University of Tennessee has been paying the remainder, $2,000.

Local Elks Attend District Convention

The district meeting of the Kentucky State Elks Association was held Saturday night at Hopkinsville, Ky., with F. A. Honora, exalted ruler of the Fulton lodge and second vice-president of the association; J. E. Hannephin, district deputy, and R. L. Crockett, local secretary, attending from Fulton.

A banquet was given at 7:00 p.m., after which the meeting was opened by Dr. Frank Bassett, exalted ruler of the Hopkinsville lodge. He turned the meeting over to Phillip Stevens, state president, who introduced Rodes K. Myers, of Bowling Green, and Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky, who delivered the principal address.

Mr. Myers told of the work being done by the Hazelwood sanitarium for tuberculosis patients. This hospital is owned and operated by the state, supported by the Elks clubs of Kentucky. The legislature recently appropriated $80,000 for operation of the sanitarium, which has an addition of 60 rooms.

Mr. Myers also spoke on democracy and Americanism. Sylvester Grove, of Louisville, state trustee, made an interesting talk. Arnold Westermann, secretary of the state association, also discussed important topics.

Ten Elk lodges composed the district association, and eight of these lodges were represented at the meeting Saturday, namely: Fulton, Louisville, Owensboro, Henderson, Paducah, Bowling Green, Hopkinsville, Princeton, with Hickman and Madisonville not being represented.

Fear of Naziism Becomes A Joke When Hitler's Head Is Saved Off!

At least one answer to what might happen to the great international figure, Adolph Hitler, if America is ever forced to defend herself from his present attempt to spread Nazism to all parts of the world, is offered by Elbert Calvert, noted star of stage and screen, in his current stage production "Egyptian Follies," playing at the Orpheum Theatre, Fulton, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

This unusual stage presentation features Hitler II, an imitator of the Fuehrer whose striking resemblance in size, appearance, mannerism and speech to the present German leader is said to be amazing.

As the Fuehrer gets "wound up to high-C" in a highly dramatized speech before the footlights, he is seized by a group of Marines, over-

The Fulton car collided with a Ballard county car, also occupied by negroes on the Mayfield-Paducah road, about three and one-half miles out of Lone Oak. KITTY LEAGUE WILL CONTINUE NEXT YEAR

The Kitty League officials held their regular fall meeting at the Irvin Cobb Hotel in Paducah Sunday afternoon and decided to continue the league next year. A suggestion had been made to take a year's rest because of the draft bill, but the club owners decided that the organization would not be affected.

Shelby Reace of Hopkinsville, has been vice-president of the league for the past two years and is one of Western Kentucky's leading sportsmen, was elected president. Allen Clow, Mayfield, was elected vice-president. President Peace will name the secretary.

All eight clubs indicated that they would remain in the league next year. Hopkinsville has a new set of directors and they hope to put the team in the winning brackets next year. Holland Bryan, Paducah owner, stated that the Indians would play under new ownership next season.

The directors voted to divide the money in the treasury among the clubs.

The president appointed a committee to study some proposed changes in the league by-laws. The committee was ordered to make provisions for replacing players within the last 20 days of the campaign if he is conscripted. The league will probably operate the annual all-star game next year.

INDUSTRIAL MOBILIZATION

"In modern warfare and in preparation to meet warlike aggression," wrote Albert W. Atwood recently, "industrial mobilization has become of paramount importance. In other words, the organization of industrial resources is now the limiting and in a sense the primary factor in national defense. But this is only another way of saying that the whole economic system must be geared to a national purpose."

"Perhaps more than any other institution the bank is the clearing house of our economic system, touching it in almost countless ways and sooner or later reflecting its every direction and purpose. Thus it is natural for the banker to take a peculiar interest in the Government's plan for industrial mobilization and in all the effects which a great armament program is bound to have."

A little thought will show anyone how vital a role banking will play in defense. Before we can have guns and planes there must be factories to make them. Banking will be called upon to make tremendous loans to build the production facilities we lack.

It is expected that government loans for defense purposes will be made only when private funds are not available, or when the project is such a temporary character that a bank would not be justified in risking its depositors' funds. In other words, private financing will be given first consideration. Let us hope that expectation proves true, for it represents the foundation of democracy, which the defense program is to preserve.

This week we will discuss some more of the acts leading up to the Second World War.

The Ethiopian war created an opportunity for a rich batch of treaty breaking. Imperialist moves against Ethiopia, after the First World War, was launched by joint Anglo-Italian action in 1925, when these powers proposed developments in Ethiopia at the risk of the loss of the latter's independence. But in 1928 Italy reassured Ethiopia by making a treaty in which both countries pledged themselves not to take any action detrimental to the independence of the other and to submit all disputes to arbitration. In conquering Ethiopia in 1935-36, Italy violated the 1928 treaty, the Kellogg pact, and the League of Nations.

The Italian aggression against Ethiopia was prepared for and safeguarded through a peculiarly contemptible act of treachery against Great Britain, Ethiopia and the League by French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, a man often accused in his own country as pro-Fascist sympathizer. In an agreement with Mussolini, early in January, 1935, Laval assured Il Duce that France would not interfere with the latter's plan to mop up Ethiopia. England didn't like it, but sat by and let Ethiopia be the goat.

Il Duce, desiring to isolate Soviet Russia, proposed in 1933, that Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain cooperate for ten years to reconstruct Europe. His proposal was not accepted until 1938—then for only a few months. Mussolini got worried about the Fuehrer's intention to Nazify Austria, so he proposed that England, France and Italy join forces to keep Hitler within bounds. Then he about-faced to run into Hitler's arms, and the Rome-Berlin axis was inaugurated in September, 1936.

Thereafter, Mussolini played ball with Hitler until September, 1939, acquiescing in the absorption of Austria and Czechoslovakia and in the presence of Nazi battalions at the Brennes Pass.

Mussolini very probably did not disappoint Hitler by declaring war in September, 1939. For the Nazis could get along much better without Italy than with her openly in the war on Germany's side. The British and French would have liked nothing better than the opportunity to stage a dramatic conquest of Italy on land and sea, and then strike at Germany through the Brenner and the Tyrol. There is every reason to doubt that Il Duce was ever ready to desert Hitler for Great Britain and France.

Then in the Spanish Civil War a Non-Intervention Plan was engineered by the Tory British government. No arms or ammunition was to be sent either side. Mussolini and Hitler yessed the agreement, but brazenly sent great masses of ammunition and men to aid Franco.

The guiding line of Chamberlain diplomacy, from the fall of 1935 until the autumn of 1939, made any previous double dealing in history seem childish and trivial. When in the autumn of 1935, Great Britain discovered that she could not use the League of Nations effectively to keep Mussolini out of Ethiopia, she altered the whole course of her diplomacy and entered upon the most audacious diplomatic gamble of all time. She decided to strengthen the Fascist powers, especially Germany, to the utmost of her ability, and to induce them to attack the Soviet Union. In such a mutually destructive conflict the two major threats to the British Empire would eliminate themselves.

Far from being opposed to the German domination of Czechoslovakia, and far from thinking of going to war over the matter in September, 1938, Britain had consented in principle by late March, 1938. When Hitler took threatening steps in May the Czechs mobilized, and it was apparent that he could not succeed without Franco-British collaboration. A maneuver was made by Britain to get the Czechs to consent to Hitler's proposal but this move was unsuccessful. So the Czechs were intimidated.

Hitler, Mussolini, Daladier and Chamberlain knew that there was not the slightest prospect of war—unless the Czechs upset the applecart. But they had to go through the motions in order to convince liberal and radical circles at home that Czechoslovakia had been sacrificed only as the alternative to a worse disaster—a general European war.

But the whole plan failed because Chamberlain had dealt with a player for keeps even more ruthless than himself. Hitler announced in October, 1938, that the Sudetan area represented the last territorial addition he wished on the continent of Europe; all oppressed Germany had been restored to the Fatherland. But in March, 1939, in complete defiance of his solemn promise at Munich, he blandly annexed most of what remained of Czechoslovakia and gave the rest to Hungary. On September 1, 1939, he invaded Poland. The expected great Nazi-Soviet war had failed to come off. Instead Hitler and Stalin got together, and Stalin stepped into the role which Chamberlain had hoped to occupy, holding the balance of power and playing off one group of power against another. Unless the British Tories could line up the United States again, they were indeed on the spot.

Since Poland was one of the outstanding victims of the era of deceptive diplomacy, it is timely and interesting to be reminded that Poland was no piker at the game herself. Poland started out her revived existence by being a diplomatic and military satellite of France. In 1921, she even signed a treaty of military alliance, and remained faithful to this arrangement until 1933, since down to that time France dominated the Continent. When Hitler came to power in January, 1933, Marshal Pilsudski sensed the threat to Poland and proposed to France that they wage a preventive war on Germany to nip the Nazi menace in the bud. France refused. Pilsudski tried to protect Poland by signing a non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia; and also a ten year non-aggression treaty with Germany. When Czechoslovakia was carved up in 1938-39 Poland claimed a share and got it. Right down to the beginning of 1939 the Polish rulers played ball with Nazi Germany.

The Second World War was ushered in by appropriate double-crossing. Great Britain, which had rejected Russian aid in September, 1938, when it might have stopped Hitler, became alarmed because Hitler did not act according to plan and invade Russia. So she launched negotiations with Russia in the spring of 1939. But the real aim was not alliance. The Russian negotiations were a gesture to frighten Hitler into a satisfactory agreement. The terms Great Britain demanded of Russia were lopsided and impossible of acceptance by any state alert to its own interests and safety.

from June, 1939, a non-aggression treaty which the Germans offered to the Kremlin. By late August, he seems to have believed that Germany had more to offer than Great Britain. So he signed on the dotted line held out by Joachim von Ribbentrop.

A Loophole

By IRVIN S. COBB

A FIREMAN on duty behind the scenes of one of the big New York theatres and charged with the responsibility of seeing to it that the regulations were strictly obeyed backstage, suffered a profound shock as he came around from behind a stack of scenery, just before the evening performance. Standing in the opposite wings was a salesman for an East Side cloak and suit concern, who had procured entrance via the stage door for the purpose of soliciting orders for his wares among the young ladies of the chorus. This person was vehemently puffing on a large, long, black, malignant-looking cigar. In three jumps the scandalized fireman had the violator by the arm. "Say," he demanded, "what the hell do you mean, comin' in here with that torch burnin' in your face? Don't you see that sign right up over your head?"

The trespasser's eyes turned where the fireman's finger pointed. "Sure, mister," he said, "I see it."

"Well, can't you read?" demanded the fireman.

"Sure I can read," admitted the other calmly.

"Then read what it says there. Don't you see what it says in big letters? It says—'No Smoking!'"

"Yes," agreed the East Sider with a winning smile, "but it don't say 'Positively!'"

FLOWING CHAIR

Not long ago I was visiting at the home of my brother and saw a chair that reminded me of some of my earliest experiences. The front legs of this little chair, though originally round, were flat and pretty thin. I was told that this flatness had come about through the chair's use for three quarters of a century as a plover for children. It had come to Kentucky in a covered wagon from North Carolina, a plain little home-made chair. All the way over on the six-week's trip a little boy who was later to be the uncle of my brother's children had ridden, a sore of seat perilous, I suspect, on many of the mountain trails. That generation of children had plowed the chair across the floor while they were learning to walk and had also ridden it down slopes when sleet or snow covered the ground. It was passed on to the next generation and did equally well there, though meantime its legs were wearing thin. It gives one a sort of poetic glimpse to think how many people learned to walk while pushing this little chair along and how many slightly larger children experienced thrills and spills as they whizzed down the slope by the henhouse or the barn.

Chairs were useful to the imagination of the child in other times. Walkers for small tots were not yet in style; even perambulators had come into only a restricted use. Little boys who had to stay indoors on cold winter days could turn down some chairs and make a train or could plow them in the style of toddlers, if Mother did not object too seriously. On one occasion I went into a home on a cold winter day when all the chairs on the place had been converted into coaches for an imaginary train; the mother of the family spent a good portion of my visit with her apology, which was unnecessary, for my sympathy was with the youngster who had done this.

After we got to be good-sized, we felt sorry for the little boy who had to ride on a chair down a snow-covered hill. Meanwhile in our growing up we had learned how to build a sled, or, rather, a slide, which seemed much more masculine. On some occasions, when the ice-crust was very strong, we made a good sled merely by using a wide plank. I was riding on one of this sort the day I tore most of the tail off my overcoat. I should have been sorry for this, but the garment was merely one I had inherited as it had been passed down the line of boys to me. I honestly believe that this disaster made it necessary for me to have a new overcoat, one actually bought for me.

Many communities have been sending their police officers to universities to improve their knowledge of the handling of traffic. This innovation at first met with plenty of sarcasm, and such headlines as "Traffic Cop Goes to College" made many readers smile.

However, many cities now have their officers receive special training, and the schools at Northwestern University, Harvard, and Yale have been very helpful in the accident prevention problem by teaching these men just what to do and how to do it.

IN MEMORIAM

BE IT RESOLVED that the following Memorial, read in Open Court on the 1 day of October, 1940 be spread upon the order book of the Fulton Circuit Court.

This MEMORIAL is presented upon the death of The Honorable Steve Wiley, until his death May 18, 1940 a member of the local Bar of Fulton, Kentucky.

Well known, admired and respected by all Attorneys in Western Kentucky and northwestern Tennessee, Steve Wiley's death removed from our midst an able and astute practitioner in the Law.

At death he was 38 years of age and at the peak of a promising career, seemingly destined, to the time of his death, to become an outstanding Lawyer.

His practice was not limited to his home community, where he had practiced for 13 years, but was interested in many important cases over Western Kentucky and Tennessee. A keen student of the Law and it's ramifications, he was an opponent and colleague to be respected, added to that a ready wit and good humor and a natural ability and desire to make friends reflects his disposition and personality, which drew a multitude of friends to him.

These resolutions cannot be made solely upon the loss to the Bar and are with some knowledge of the loss to others.

He was a man loved and respected in his Community life, energetic and faithful to his Civic, Business, religious and domestic duties and we all share in the loss.

He leaves surviving him his wife, Mrs. Doris Wiley, to whom he has been married 8 years and two children, these composed his immediate family to which he was very devoted, together with a widowed mother whom he had supported throughout his years of preparation and practice.

He assumed the responsibilities placed upon him with energy and vigor and secured his education and position despite financial difficulties.

At the time of his death he was City Attorney for the City of Fulton, which office he had filled and the duties skillfully performed for 6 years.

Upon the loss to the Bar we offer this memorial of the death of a friend, a tenacious, astute and honorable opponent, a respected and beloved colleague. Upon the loss to the Civic and Community life, and the loss to his church, the First Baptist Church of Fulton, which he had served in various capacities throughout his practice; to his myriad friends and business associates, and especially to his family, and to ourselves we offer these inadequate expressions. To our friend, Rest in Peace, your life Ipsa Loquitur.

D. Fred Worth,
Frank Carr,
Resolutions Committee.

SUPT. WILLIAMS PRESENTS MEDALS

During the early part of 1939 the management of the Illinois Central System adopted the policy of recognizing meritorious services rendered by the public, as well as its own employees, in reporting conditions that might result in interruption of train operation, damage to property or possible injury or accident. It was felt that recognition on part of the railroad should be in lasting form and that a token of appreciation should be awarded to serve as a reminder that the railroad is ever grateful for unsolicited assistance in overcoming conditions that might endanger the lives of its employees or result in damage to property.

In line with the above policy, Supt. T. K. Williams, of the Mississippi division, presented bronze medals to Novell Moss and Kenneth Earl Hastings, about 18 or 19 years old, at McConnell, Tenn., Wednesday morning October 9th, in company with Supervisor W. H. Purcell, of Fulton, for reporting tree blown across tracks about one half mile north of McConnell on afternoon of August 9th, 1940 after which the two young men went with Mr. Purcell and section laborer, Paul Midyett, of Martin and assisted them in removing the tree from the tracks. Mr. Williams expressed the appreciation of the Management for the services rendered and the prompt action taken by the two young men, stating that the Railroad was grateful for the interest manifested in the protection of its property.

FORMALLY OPEN STATE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN

Thousands of representatives of Kentucky's one hundred twenty counties are expected to attend a monster rally opening the Republican campaign in Kentucky. The meeting will take place Saturday, October 12th in Somerset.

Several speakers of national reputation as well as the various state and local officials and candidates, will address the crowds.

This mammoth rally will launch the formal statewide Republican drive for the election of Wendell L. Willkie and Charles McNary. Also on the Republican State ticket are Walter B. Smith, candidate for Senator, as well as seven candidates in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth Congressional Districts. Besides these there are Republican candidates for judicial seats throughout Kentucky.

It is expected that each of Kentucky's one hundred twenty counties will be well represented at the rally as well as all of the neighboring states.

The Republican Party in Kentucky feels that this is a crucial time and that all efforts must be directed toward the one aim of displacing the New Deal with a sound business-like administration, which will stabilize the state and the nation.

Never in the history of the Party in Kentucky have there been as many vital issues as there are in 1940. Outstanding among these issues are the wasteful spending policy of the New Deal and the attempt to perpetuate one regime in power in the United States through the medium of a third term for a president.

The candidate's idea of political economy is getting the most votes for the least money.

THE WORLD'S MOST SENSITIVEN FINGER

COUNTY AGENT

A series of meetings on Soil Building practices for 1941 has been completed. Six meetings have been held with an average of 30 attending each meeting. This is a very small percent of farmers that have had a chance to discuss the changes in Soil Building Practices at the community meetings.

Farmers should be more interested in earning their soil building payments because farmers in Fulton County are badly in need of Soil Conservation Practices before it becomes too late. It is much easier to carry out a soil conservation program before our land erodes to the last degree and then it will become necessary for us to restore it.

It is more economical and more practical to adopt a soil conservation practice on farms than it is to do land reservation, which farmers will be thrown to do in the near future, if land erosion continues as it is.

There are some changes in soil-building practices that each farmer in the county should know and the 800 farmers which have work sheets should have a clear understanding, rather than the 180 that have been reached through community meetings.

The program is offering Hairy Vetch as a grant-of-aid material, which a farmer can get through their soil building practices in the program to sow as a winter cover crop.

Hairy vetch should be seeded with small grain sometime between now and November 1. It is a legume, furnishes a splendid spring pasture, especially good for hogs, but it is more outstanding as a soil builder to be turned under in the spring. From 15 to 20 pounds of seed should be planted per acre. Your payment is $1.50 per acre for seeding and deduction will be $1.50 for the seed furnished through the program.

Come to the county agents office and let him explain fully the use of vetch and how it should be used. Make plans to sow cover crops on all the fields you cultivated this fall. Keep something green on your land this winter.

Three St. Louis men were arrested under a seldom-used ordinance for making false reports of robberies.

The idea that the fittest survive no doubt originated with a survivor.

TENNESSEE FARMERS GET $1,829,432 FOR SOIL BUILDING

Tennessee farmers cooperating in the 1940 AAA Program earned a total of $1,829,432 in soil building practices through Grants of aid, according to F. W. Colby, State AAA Executive Officer. These grants of aid cover liming materials, including basic and calcium silicate slag; triple superphosphate and 20 percent phosphate, and shipments received of Austrian winter peas.

In volume, the use of liming materials constituted the bulk of materials, but triple superphosphate deliveries, spread under provisions of the AAA Program, reached a valuation just under $1,000,000 and thus was the largest item in cost.

COTTON GROWERS TO VOTE ON MARKETING QUOTA DEC. 7

Cotton growers of Tennessee and the nation will decide in a referendum December 7 whether or not they want marketing quotas on the 1941 crop.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard has announced that the national cotton marketing quota for the marketing year beginning August 1, 1941 will be the same as the one in effect for the past three years. With normal yields, it will make possible the marketing of approximately 12 million bales of cotton, produced on an acreage near that of the 1940 season. In 1940 cotton acreage allotments totaled 27,900,000 acres, while farmers planted about 25,100,000 acres.

Marketing quotas for 1941 will not, however, become effective unless approved by two-thirds of the eligible cotton growers who vote in a referendum to be held Saturday, December 7.

The 1940 quota was approved by 91.2 percent of the producers who voted in the referendum held December 9, 1939. Similarly, the quota programs for the 1938 and 1939 crops were approved by a large majority of the producers voting in the two referendums.

Regardless of the outcome of the December 7 referendum, the conservation phases of the AAA Farm Program will be in effect in 1941. Marketing quotas are designed to supplement the conservation part of the program by assuring farmers who plant within their acreage allotments that their efforts to advance supplies will not be nullified by non-cooperators. Farmers who plant within their acreage allotments under the conservation program will be able to market all of the cotton grown on their allotted acreage without penalty. If marketing quotas are in effect, producers who market in excess of their quotas will be required to pay a penalty of three cents a pound on all cotton sold in excess of marketing quotas set up for their farms. With quotas in effect, cotton loans may be made as authorized by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

Need For Program

"Cotton farmers have need of marketing quotas for the 1941 marketing year more than ever before," Secretary Wickard said. "War conditions have decreased, rather than increased, our foreign outlets for cotton. Although the position of cotton in world trade is difficult, we find satisfaction in the fact that we are increasing the use of cotton in our own country through such programs as mattress-making and other new uses. Domestic use of cotton is now at a high level, due largely to increased business activity which can be partially ascribed to the national defense program."

"With marketing quotas in effect, cotton farmers will have all phases of the AAA Farm Program to help hold their income nearer a fair level while working toward adjustment necessary as a result of developments in the cotton situation in recent years. In the program they have acreage allotments to help adjust supplies to demand, cotton loans that will place a floor under prices, and marketing quotas to place their commodity on the market in an orderly fashion. At present our domestic cotton price is far above the world price, principally due to these factors," he states.

Flash! Common horse sense is beginning to make itself felt against emotional hysteria in some Congressional quarters!

That's news. It means that if the trend away from emotionalism and toward logic continues, the nation may yet be able to arm itself for satisfactory defense.

Legislative debate over conscription of men led to pure hysteria in which some solons talked unthinkingly of conscripting wealth and industry. Now, they are beginning to realize that conscription of industry and wealth would mean conscription of the whole nation.

The sounder thinkers are now convinced that only the unwilling industries and dollars should be confiscated. They realize that if "wealth" is conscripted it means forcing everybody to buy government bonds even if they have to borrow the money to do it. And, they say, they can get the unwilling dollars through taxation.

Thus charges that industry is "sabotaging" national defense are boomeranging against the accusers. The President, the National Defense Advisory Commission, the Secretary of War, Secretary of Navy, and so on down the line, insist that industry is doing its part. That should satisfy the most violent critics.

As a matter of fact, an increasing number of legislators is becoming convinced that the hurrying of such charges against industry in its amounts to sabotage. Because it simply creates doubt and uncertainty in industry at a time when it should be allowed to produce national defense without having to defend its unquestioned patriotism.

In this connection, some legislators have been brought suddenly up against the realization that they are now passing their tenth tax bill in the last nine years. As one of them put it, "we've been following a let's-tax-this-tax-that theory until we don't know what we are taxing."

He points out that out of these ten tax bills, eight have been passed as late as June and only two earlier in the year. That means that industries which would like in December to plan their activities and program for the next full year can't do so because they won't find out until June or later what taxes they will have to pay for the year.

Incidentally, newspapermen who follow tax legislation are usually pretty sound judges of the wisdom of tax bills. In a recent press gallery discussion, a group of them suggested an amendment to the so-called "excess profits" bill. It was this: Strike out everything and insert: "Excess profits is stuff that if the government says you got any, whether you understand it or not, it will tax'em—and heavy!"

The tax bill may be (at last count it was 105 pages) but the defense job is bigger. In a recent address, H. W. Prentiss, Jr., President of the National Association of Manufacturers, emphasized this. He reminded that building a two-ocean navy is a tremendous job because it means increasing the size of the navy 100 per cent. But the Army is to be increased 1,000 per cent.

In addition, he said, the original 100 per cent has to be modified to meet modern warfare requirements. He said, too, that another example of the size of the job is the fact that in the construction of a single Martin bomber, 400 to 600 sub-contractors are involved.

American industry knows that the only road to continued progress is through keeping awake and looking for new ideas. Many millions of dollars of profits are re-invested each year in this country in research activities to find new products or improve existing ones. One dramatic example on record is that of a company which spent $40,000,000 on new factories and experiments before earning a single cent on the dyes it eventually produced!

SPEAKING CAMPAIGN TO OPEN OCTOBER 19

It has been definitely decided at State headquarters that the formal speaking campaign will get under way on Saturday, October 19, with rallies being scheduled in every district except the third. Sites of the speakings and the time will be announced next week.

Kentuckians will rejoice that they will hear the voices of U. S. Senators Aiken W. Barkley and A. B. "Happy" Chandler as well as Gov. error Keen Johnson and all of the Democratic Congress men.

Senator Barkley's speaking engagements in the state will likely not be as numerous as those of Chandler, as his service will be required by the National committee in other states but "Happy" is certain to make numerous personal appearances in the state as he has a considerable "stake" in this election as he is up for election to fill the unexpired term of former Senator M. M. Logan.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

What history may prove to be one of the most important Presidential campaigns in decades is at last in high gear. The period of peace and quiet which followed the nominations seems to be definitely over.

During that period, there can be no question but what the Willkie candidacy suffered a slight let-down—his friends admit it, even. Mr. Willkie was swept into the Republican nomination on the crest of a wave of almost unprecedented enthusiasm, similar to that which gave Mr. Roosevelt the Democratic nomination eight years ago. No one experienced in politics believes that enthusiasm could have been maintained undimmed from nomination day to election day. Willkie strategists deliberately planned the let-down, knowing that it had to come some time, and that the earlier it came the better off his candidacy would be. History is studded with dismal examples of candidates who brought their campaign to maximum pitch too long before November—and, as a result, seemed to the voters as stale as yesterday's beer by election time.

On top of that, the Willkie campaign called for super-careful planning. Ordinary issues are of little moment today, with the national attention focused on war in Europe and defense at home. Mr. Willkie is not an "a-ginner." He endorses many New Deal policies in principle, even as he denounces many New Deal methods. And so, almost inevitably, it looks as if this campaign will focus down to two issues—one tangible, the other more or less intangible but of immense potential importance.

The tangible issue is that of administration. Willkie backers believe that he could get more for each defense dollar than could the present White House group. They believe he could steer a course which would be fairer to all diverse interests in this country today—worker and capitalist, farmer and manufacturer, little business-man, reliever, etc. And only the blindest supporters of the New Deal fail to see that it has made many grave mistakes in the administrative field, even as it has made great advances in bringing before the people problems which must eventually be solved.

The intangible issue is that of the third term—of one man's indispensability. Mr. Willkie has been hitting that issue hard, and some of the experts believe that it may turn out to be the decisive issue of the campaign. No man, says Mr. Willkie, is vital to the country—and once the idea gets around that one man is indispensable, it will be just a matter of time before dictatorship follows. To Mr. Willkie, there is no personal fight in this—he doesn't charge the President with dictatorial ambitions. He simply points out that once the precedent is established—or, putting it another way, the old anti-third-term precedent is demolished—we will have, in principle, accepted a government of men as against a government of laws.

That was the theme which dominated Mr. Willkie's Coffeyville address, opening gun of his campaign. And it has dominated his other prepared addresses made since, even as it has dominated the little two-minute off-hand talks he has made in dozens of towns.

Mr. Roosevelt bases his candidacy on his record—on what he regards as great New Deal attainments. His answer to the third-term argument is that there can be no dictatorship here so long as the people possess the ballot. His recent speeches have been moderate in tone, and have been generally well received. They are not driving speeches—apparently he thinks there would be no point in his making a campaign tour, inasmuch as he and what he stands for are so well known to the country. On one point, all are agreed—the President was never in finer form when it comes to his radio presence and delivery.

Who will win? One of the weekly picture magazines recently asked a group of well known Washington correspondents and commentators that question, and but a few hedged. Too much can happen between now and November, they said, to make a safe prediction possible. They were about evenly divided in giving the edge at present to either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie.

Latest published polls give the President a substantial lead. But these polls were taken during the Willkie let-down period and so may not mean much. From now on, the polls should be more significant and accurate. Hope of Willkie backers is that his rating will come slowly but steadily up, reaching top before November 5.

Some are wondering just how accurate the modern "scientific sampling" polls will prove to be if the election is close. These polls didn't come into existence until the 'thirties and have covered two presidential contests where the victor won with record breaking ease. In a really nip-and-tuck campaign

BUSY DAYS ARE HERE

The vacation days of Summer have gone, and Autumn's busy days are here again. There are children to get off to school, summer clothes to be stored, and woollens to be retrieved from the moth balls. Which means errands to be run, dry cleaning to be done, shopping trips to be made and a hundred and one other things that add to the cares of the busy housewife.

Well, there's one sure way to relieve a lot of this hurry-worry. Let the telephone run the errands while you take it easy.

If you already have telephone service but only one telephone, you probably lose a lot of time running downstairs or from one room to another to answer or place calls. A handy extension telephone upstairs or in some other much-frequented part of the house would put an end to most of this tiresome leg work.

Prepare now for the busy days ahead. Call the telephone office today and let us tell you how little it costs to enjoy all the benefits which telephone service or an extension can give you. — Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, Incorporated.

Money Talks

Last week I advised you to buy and save. This week I want to re-emphasize that statement.

Several important facts point the way to higher prices. Scrap iron and copper prices jumped this past week and remember these commodities are essential in most of our industry. Coal prices are due for an increase as a result of the Bituminous Coal Commission's price policy. Prices for 1941 automobiles will, in most cases, be higher. This was predicted several months ago. Price increases do not come suddenly and in large amounts. They gradually creep upward; before long you are paying from 10 per cent to 15 per cent more than you were a year ago.

Although Washington has warned that it would not tolerate runaway prices, I think a 10 per cent to 20 per cent advance could easily take place before Washington would step in. The government is committed to a policy of restoring prosperity and we have never had prosperity when prices were low. Likewise, the government policy for the past seven years has been to stimulate prices, especially farm products and raw materials. And government officials know, as do you and I, that if the price of wheat, cotton, corn, iron and steel, lumber, etc., goes up we will be paying more for our bread, suits and dresses, our automobiles and radios and other essentials.

Washington is likewise committed to a high wage policy and we all know that high wages, under present conditions, mean higher costs and prices. What does all this mean to you? To me it adds up to just one thing—HIGHER PRICES.

If Fire Comes, Property Values Are Destroyed, Human Lives Endangered

NATIONAL FIRE PREVENTION WEEK, OCT. 6-12, POINTS THE WAY TO HOME SAFETY

All Farm home owners and residents are urged to join in a Fire Prevention Week campaign to make their homes safer places in which to live.

Follow This Guide to Home Safety

Chimneys and Flues cause most fires in farm homes. The best type of chimney is built from ground on solid foundation with brick laid flat and lined with flue tile. This type of chimney saves many fire losses. Examine chimneys carefully from top to bottom before winter fires are started each year. Look for cracks and openings caused by loosened mortar. Examine most closely where hidden from view as in closets and attic. A trip through the attic may save your home.

Other than flat brick chimneys require extra precaution. Brick on edge chimneys cannot be trusted. They should be inspected carefully and often. If repairs are needed employ a competent and experienced workman.

Clay or cement tile chimneys or pipes through roof are dangerous and should be avoided.

BESURE THAT YOUR CHIMNEYS ARE SAFE

Sparks on Roof come second as the cause of fires in farm homes.

Old fuzzy shingle roofs are dangerous. Replace now or as soon as possible with a roofing material that will not burn.

Where shingle roof is not replaced, protect with a spark arrester on the top of each chimney.

To reduce the spark hazard where soft coal or wood are used, clean the soot from chimneys at least once each year.

Gasoline and Kerosene cause many fires as well as loss of life on farms.

Do not use either of them to start or quicken fires.

This practice has proved fatal in hundreds of cases.

Do not fill the reservoir of stove, lamp, or lantern by artificial light, but by daylight or electric flashlight.

Gasoline or similar products, if kept in storage on the farm, should be confined to a small building for this purpose only, and detached 75 feet or more from other buildings.

A few gallons of gasoline, not exceeding 5 gallons, may be kept in dwelling if in a tight or safety can free from leaks and if confined to a back room or rear porch away from all open fire.

Furnaces, Stoves and Fireplaces are hazards which need to be guarded. Fire is a great blessing when kept under control. Appliances for heating and cooking should be so maintained as to insure their safety.

Furnace room floor and space above furnace should be kept clean and free of combustible material.

Furnace pipes should be examined before winter fires are started. They often rust from within and rust holes generally appear on the under side.

Top of furnace and pipe to chimney should be no less than 18" from floor above or metal shield should protect floor.

Stoves on wooden floors should have a metal floor covering extending 18 inches in front of feed door.

Stoves should be a safe distance from walls and woodwork. Do not keep woodbox directly behind and close to stove.

Stove doors should close securely so they will not fly open under pressure.

Open fires in fireplaces should be enclosed by screens with wings and hood and standing on incense "tile hearth."

Stovepipes should be cleaned each year. Do not securely wired to chimney; should have safety tumbler if passing through floor or partition; should not enter chimney in attic or unoccupied room.

Do not deposit hot coals and ashes where they might start a fire.

Keep matches in glass, earthenware or metal container out of reach of children.

Lighting Equipment which illuminates through the medium of an open flame, whether from gasoline, kerosene, or gas, requires careful supervision.

Keep lamps at a safe distance from curtains or other highly combustible material.

Gasoline lamps and lanterns produce intense heat and should not be placed where anything above them could be ignited.

Electric lights are comparatively safe if properly installed. Avoid installation by novices or handymen.

Wiring should be done by a competent and experienced contractor in conformity with the rules of the Rural Electrification Administration or other approved code. If present wiring was not so installed, have it checked by a competent electrical inspector.

There Are Other less important hazards which threaten your home. Watch for them and BE CAREFUL ALWAYS.

Check Up on your own home by following this guide to safety and keep these instructions for future reference.

Your Cooperation is urged by the Agricultural Committee of the National Fire Waste Council, 410 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, and by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, 83 John Street, New York. You may obtain further information on fire prevention by addressing either of these organizations.

HIGH PRODUCING COWS MEAN GREATER PROFIT

How production per cow is closely related to profit in dairy farming is brought out in a report of a study which economists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture made in Shelby, Spencer and Henry counties.

Where production per cow averaged less than 7,000 pounds of milk in a year farmers made an average of $1,396. Where the production ranged from 7,000 to 8,000 pounds, the average profit was $1,570, and where the cows produced more than 8,000 pounds of milk in a year, earnings jumped to $2,033. The average number of cows milking was 21. Receipts averaged $2,558, and net earnings $1,679. None of the farmers lost money. Grade "B" whole milk was sold. The farms averaged 200 acres and ranged from 102 to 445 acres.

Here are suggestions the economist say dairy farmers might consider:

The substitution of high producing cows for poorer ones through careful culling and selection; the production of more legume hays; the use of better cropping systems, including the use of limestone and fertilizer to increase crop yields and improve pastures; keeping the land adequately protected by cover crops in winter; and providing the dairy cows with adequate well balanced economical rations to insure high milk production per cow, are some of the ways in which farmers on small farms may increase their income.

A. J. Richardson, auto dealer of Lubbock, Tex., canceled a $900 debt owed him by 21 of his friends, explaining: "I don't like to see them dodging around corners when they see me."

"The place to practice on a saxophone is the prairies," ruled Judge Malden of Chicago when a neighbor complained about the noise made by Charles Horton.

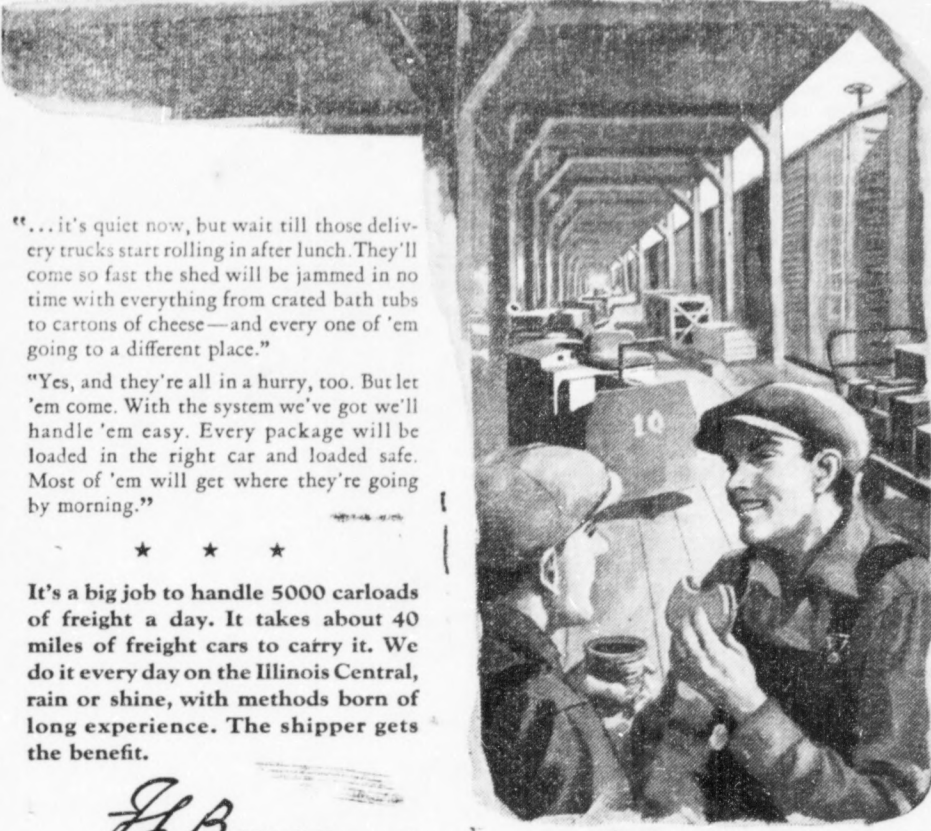

Trying to duplicate a vaudeville stunt of shooting ashes off a cigar field in another's mouth, Johnny Ricks of Batavia, N. Y., shot out several teeth of his friend, Clyde Randel.

Relief At Last For Your Cough

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

"...it's quiet now, but wait till those delivery trucks start rolling in after lunch. They'll come so fast the shed will be jammed in no time with everything from crated bath tubs to cartons of cheese—and every one of 'em going to a different place."

"Yes, and they're all in a hurry, too. But let 'em come. With the system we've got we'll handle 'em easy. Every package will be loaded in the right car and loaded safe. Most of 'em will get where they're going by morning."

It's a big job to handle 5000 carloads of freight a day. It takes about 40 miles of freight cars to carry it. We do it every day on the Illinois Central, rain or shine, with methods born of long experience. The shipper gets the benefit.
