Hitler Asserts Germany Is Free To Make War On U.S., Blames Russian Defeats On Bad Weather

Tells His People Of Huge Submarines Loses United States

Fails To Set Date For Ultimate Victory In His Speech

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Hitler in his first broadcast since the United States declared war against Italy, and his troops march into Russia, said today that Germany was free to make war on the United States and that the Russian defeats were due to the bad weather.

"We are free to make war on the United States," Hitler said in his broadcast, which was carried by the German radio. "We have the right to make war on the United States, and the Russian defeats are due to the bad weather."

The broadcast was made by Hitler in the town of Berlin, where he is believed to be located. It was the first time that Hitler has spoken to the American people since the United States declared war against Italy.

Hitler also said that the Russian army had been "substantially reduced" by the German advances in Russia, and that the Russian army was "in danger of being destroyed." He added that the Russian army was "not capable of defending itself against the German army."

Bulldogs Whip Hickman In Tight Game Last Night In Overtime

In one of the closest and most spectacular games ever played on the floor of Science Hall, the Bulldogs whipped the Wildcats in regulation play 12 to 7. It was a five minute overtime period that witnessed the final decision being made.

The game was a thriller all the way through, with Hickman getting the early lead and then fighting hard to hold it. In the regular game, the Wildcats won the first half 12 to 7, while the Bulldogs won the second half, 7 to 5.
