DEMOCRATS TO HAVE MOTORCADE MONDAY

A thousand Democrats of the eight counties of the Jackson Purchase are expected to ride in a gigantic motorcade through the counties on Monday, Nov. 4, to conclude the presidential and district campaigns. Senator Alben W. Barkley will be the principal speaker at all stops and will be backed up by Congressman Noble J. Gregory, Highway Commissioner J. Lyter Donaldson and Former Commissioner Robert Humphreys.

The motorcade will be started from Paducah at eight o'clock Monday morning from near the home of Senator Barkley on the Paducah-Blandville road.

The cavalcade of Democrats in 200 cars from all counties will be under the direction of Bob White, Fulton, Ky., business man and political leader. Many other cars are expected to join the procession as it travels. A band will precede the motorcade to announce its arrival in each town and local bands will start the program in most of the towns of the eight counties before the motorcade arrives.

Democratic representatives from the eight counties, meeting in Mayfield last Saturday night, October 26, made plans for the motorcade and named W. H. Crowder, Jr., county judge of Graves county and president of the Young Men's Democratic club of Kentucky, and Robert E. Webb, railroad commissioner, chairman of the organization to direct the motorcade.

Payments Will Be "Gifts" Not Wages

Payments made by employers to their workers with respect to periods of training under the Selective Service and Training Act, to supplement their military pay are considered as "gifts" and not wages upon which contributions under the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Law are required, Robert B. Hensley, chief legal counsel, today announced.

Only in those cases where such payments may be legally due or required under the terms of an employment contract will they be construed as wages, Hensley added.

The ruling applies not only to those employers who have indicated their intention to continue, in full or in part, the wages of their employees who participated in the recent summer military maneuvers, Hensley said.

Employers who may have already submitted their contributions and reports for the third calendar quarter of 1940 in which such payments were listed as wages may receive an adjustment upon their fourth quarter reports, it was stated. It will be necessary, however, that such employers write the Commission requesting the adjustment, and accompany their request with a detailed explanation of such payments.

SAFETYGRAMS

This column is very much in favor of driver training courses. Every high school in the country ought to have a well-organized program of classroom instruction as well as "behind the wheel" instruction. It is very important that people become familiar with traffic conditions and know the right and wrong about automobile driving.

Individual responsibility must be definitely stressed in these instructions. If the individual persists in taking chances, accidents will result in spite of a well-planned course of instruction. Chance taking must be eliminated from our driving habits.

Your community should have driver training courses for young and old. Because we have been driving an automobile for a number of years does not mean that we are experts in handling a car. Learn the right way and drive carefully.

FULTON DEFEATED HERE FRIDAY

The Russellville Panthers won over the Fulton Bulldogs 14 to 12 here Friday night in the last home game scheduled for the Bulldogs. After the first half passed without a score for either team, Russellville opened the scoring in the third when Chapman took the kickoff on his 5-yard line, fumbled, recovered it on the goal line and raced the entire length of the field for a touchdown. His kick for the extra point was good.

Fulton then staged a series of gaining line plays and scored when White plunged over the goal line from the 8-yard stripe. The Bulldogs scored again in the 4th quarter when a pass from Willingham to White was good for 40 yards and a touchdown. Both attempts at extra points failed.

With four minutes remaining, Russellville took to the air, Sears heaving to Davis. After the Panthers covered the length of the field in six completed passes, Kinslow plunged over from the 1-yard line to give Russellville the game. Chapman kicked the extra point with 30 seconds of playing time left.

Some people feel that their electric bills run too high. Perhaps you feel that way too.

Because you are doing business with us practically every hour of the day and night we think we should discuss the point.

The simple fact is that of all your household bills electricity is one of the few that gives you more for your money today than formerly!

Your dollar buys less food today. It buys less clothing. It buys less shelter than it used to.

It buys twice as much electricity. During the past ten years the average cost of electricity has been reduced about 50% per unit. Your bill has probably not come down, because most of our customers are using about twice as much electricity today as they used ten years ago.

Half of our customers pay only eight cents a day or less for electric service. Almost all of them use at least three appliances. Many customers who use five or more appliances pay no more than ten cents a day.

There are two reasons why electric service is cheaper now. First, because of our operating economies. Second, because of your increased use of electricity.

Moreover you can automatically cut your own rate. Under our modern rates, the more you let electricity lighten your burden of housework the lower the price becomes.

We of the electric company are proud of these accomplishments. We sincerely feel that we are making available to you a service which not only steps down steadily in cost, but also steps up steadily in efficiency.

Says Retonga Had A Real Test In Her Case

Regained Eleven Pounds; Does Own Housework Now, States Mrs. Banton. Gives Facts

Every day more grateful public statements praising Retonga pour in. Quite often men and women in the very prime of life, have found themselves victims of distressing symptoms due to sluggish elimination, and an insufficient flow of gastric juices in the stomach, such symptoms as indigestion, loss of weight, lack of strength, toxic poisoning, muscular pains, and other similar harassing distress. For instance Mrs. Duke Banton, well known home owner and church worker, of 812 East 19th St., Hopkinsville, recently stated: "Retonga was a god-send to me. My appetite was gone, and I suffered such distress from my food that I was afraid to eat. As a consequence I lost weight and felt so nervous and weak I could not keep up my housework. Sluggish elimination added to my distress, and I Myer Drug Co.

suffered from toxic poisoning and aches and pains from this trouble. "Retonga brought me prompt and splendid relief. Its laxative effect was splendid. I feel good again, eat plenty and have regained eleven pounds. My friends tell me I look lots better. Retonga surely had a real test in my case, and I want others to know about the grand relief it brought me." Retonga wins the grateful praise of such well known men and women as Mrs. Banton day after day. Get genuine Retonga today at De-

W. M. U. IN MEETING MONDAY

The Woman's Missionary Union of the First Baptist Church held the October meeting at the church Monday afternoon. The meeting was opened with the song, "How Firm A Foundation," followed with prayer by Mrs. Dan Horton.

The president, Mrs. Earl Taylor, presided over the business session. The Union voted to have the Mission Study book given by Mrs. Carl Hastings on November 12 at which time names will be drawn for the circles for 1941. The new circles will be seated at respective tables where lunch will be served and they will make plans for work for the coming year.

The president announced the Quarterly Association Meeting of W. M. U., which will be held at the Clinton Baptist church on November 19, and she urged as many as possible to attend this meeting. Members voted for the Union to send silk hose as Thanksgiving remembrances to the Girls' Training School in Louisville.

An interesting and inspirational letter to this Union from Mrs. Florence Mills Appleby, missionary to South America, was read by Mrs. Taylor. Mrs. Appleby is a sister of Mr. J. S. Mills of this city.

The devotional message was given by Mrs. Guy Duley and the topic was "God's Unchanging Plan of Stewardship." The theme of the program was the same as that of the devotional and was given by Mrs. Norman Frey. The message stressing God's ownership, stewardship to God and stewardship of prayer, was very interesting and an inspiration to all those present.

The closing prayer was led by Mrs. L. M. Bratcher.

SOUTH FULTON

P. T. A. MET THURSDAY

The South Fulton Parent-Teachers Association met last Thursday at the school building, with sixty-three members present. The sixth grade was in charge of the program and presented the following numbers:

Scripture—Orvin Moore.
Vocal Solo—Dorothy Nannay.
Piano Solo—Yvonne Moore.
Piano Solo—Susie Lee Clements.

Mr. Moore, principal of the school, then gave an interesting sketch of the history of Obion County. The county was established in 1823 but was not organized until 1824. Elizabeth Parker was the first settler. Population of the county is now 35,000 and 20,000 of these are farmers. Mr. Moore stated that Obion county was one of the four counties selected in the "Study of Life."

The president of the P. T. A., Mrs. Leon Hutchens, then conducted a lengthy business session. She was assisted by Mrs. Will Cravens, acting as secretary in the absence of Mrs. I. M. Jones, and Mrs. Karl Kimberlin, treasurer. Mrs. Hutchens announced the 13th District P. T. A. meeting, held in Trenton, October 25, and urged all members to attend. Reports were given by Mrs. Elbert Lowery, Membership chairman, and Mrs. Bill Smith on plans for the Halloween Carnival. Mrs. Cravens, W. P. A. kitchen chairman, reported that 1,486 children are now fed daily in the school kitchen. 322 are underprivileged children, 575 are paid, and 89 make donations.

Mrs. J. C. Sugg, Sr. and Mrs. S. E. Bondurant sang a duet, "Our Best." Mrs. C. R. Burnette led the Panel Discussion, assisted by Mrs. Della Lawson. They gave a very interesting and instructive outline of the work of Stewardship and the Great Commission. A map explanation was then given on the work by Mrs. Clyde Burnette.

Campaign Reveals Wendell L. Willkie as Man of Action

Many columnists, political reporters and other so-called "experts" say that the nation is crying for a man who can get the defense program into high gear, who can cut away government red tape and sweep aside bureaucratic inefficiency—in short, a man of action. They believe the election will turn on the nation's appraisal of the two candidates as judged by this standard. What kind of man is Willkie? Pictures taken on his campaign trip, excerpts from his speeches, reveal him as a big bear of a man with boundless energy, tireless in action, unfailing in good humor, yet always with a sober sense of responsibility.

ROBBERS New Deal "Inner Circle"

ing huge New Deal bureaucracy and "brain trusters" in his Cof-Kansas speech, Willkie pleads: "To that vast, mistaken, deluded nt of ours in Washington, I say: Give our country back to us. it. We love it. We should like to share the burden of it amongst We should like if necessary, to suffer for it, so that we may pass t to other generations."

Against Favoritism in Draft

I can not ask the 3 people to put their faith in me without recording my conviction 2 form of selective service is the only democratic way in which to e trained and competent man-power we need for national de-

Farm Spokesmen on Ticket

Willkie, who has invested his own savings in five Indiana farms in the neighborhood of his Elwood birthplace, personally asked for the nomination of Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, veteran Republican farm leader in the Senate, to be his running mate. They are pictured here together. Willkie says that "the Federal Government has a responsibility to equalize the lot of the farmer with that of the manufacturer." He has announced that he would not change the present farm program "until a better one is devised."

Demands Firm Foreign Policy

"Walk softly and carry a big stick," was the motto of Theodore Roosevelt. It is the great American doctrine. I should threaten foreign governments only when our country was threatened by them and when I was ready to act. Under the present administration the country has been placed in the false position of shouting threats and not even beginning to prepare to take the consequences. The first task of our country in its international affairs is to become strong at home. We must regain prosperity, restore the independence of our people, and protect our defensive forces. If that is not done promptly we are in constant danger. The President has courted a war for which the country is hopelessly unprepared. We must face a brutal, perhaps a terrible fact. Our way of life is in competition with Hitler's way of life. I promise to outdistance Hitler in any contest he chooses in 1940 or after. And I promise that when we beat him, we shall beat him upon our own terms, in our own American way."—Wendell L. Willkie.

Believes in Social Security

"I want to keep the Social Security Act on the books, to spread it, and make the Government solvent so that when you get old and come to collect it you'll be able to get your social security instead of a promise unfulfilled," Willkie said in Michigan speech.

Wants Jobs for Everybody

"I have no confidence in the leadership of the man who, in seven years of accumulating power, could not make one man a job. When I read of blood and destruction in Europe I am frightened to think that our only shelter is—not airplanes and tanks—but a man who in seven years of peace could not get factories producing our peacetime needs. Only the strong can be free. And only the productive can be strong."

A MESSAGE TO THE VOTERS OF KENTUCKY

The American tradition against the Third Term for any President is the nation's clearest political tradition. It is the one final check against the growth of personal power or the perpetuation of any powerful influence that might entrench itself in the national government. It says to both reactionaries and radicals that "you may rule if you can for eight years, but at the end of that time you must turn the government back to the people." Wendell L. Willkie says that this tradition must not be broken by any claim that "we are in the middle of the stream." He asks, "Why did you get us into the middle of the stream in the first place?" Mr. Willkie and others are asking, "For what will this Third Term be a 'mandate'?" Four years ago, President Roosevelt interpreted his re-election as a "mandate" to "pack" the Supreme Court. What undisclosed schemes would be sprung upon the people if the Third Term should be approved? That is a question which many people are asking. It is a question that may easily decide the outcome of the election. Mr. Willkie has promised "complete candor and frankness" to the people. He has told what he stands for and what he proposes to do. President Roosevelt has not yet said what he would do if the people gave him a Third Term. You would not buy an automobile or a house or a cow, sight unseen. A vote for a Third Term is a vote to give the New Deal brain trust unrestricted permission to spring more of its undisclosed schemes upon the American public.

America's Great Gift to the World

Unknown by the nations of the old world prior to the discovery of America, tobacco is now used by the human family more than any other article except tea, sugar or salt. Starting from a small beginning its cultivation has extended until the world's production exceeds 3,000,000,000 pounds of this popular plant. Today tobacco is one of the most important crops that enter into the commerce of nations. It is used in every country from the most savage to the most civilized.

Tobacco, being a highly specialized crop, requires an experienced hand and a wide knowledge of its nature for successful production. From the moment the tiny seeds are sown, until the golden leaf is placed upon the market it must be given extensive and intelligent care.

Its successful cultivation is dependent on a number of important factors. Foremost of these is a soil adapted to its culture and a climate suited to its growth, with the best seed to be had.

EARLY HISTORY OF TOBACCO (From Industrial History of the United States by Albert S. Bolles.)

When Columbus landed in 1492, he saw natives breathing out smoke from their nostrils, and he was offered a roll of a fragrant narcotic weed, in the form of a cigar, that he might do likewise. This was the first civilized world ever knew of tobacco. The Spaniards and Portuguese soon made Europe acquainted with the plant and its uses. In 1560 the agent of King of France in Portugal, named Jean Nicot, obtained from a Dutchman some seed of the plant from Florida; thus it was introduced into France, where it was known as the Nicotine weed. Tobacco, the Indian name, appears to have been applied originally to pipes wherein the Caribbees smoked the dried leaves. In 1586 Sir Walter Raleigh and his colleagues, who had been unsuccessful in founding a colony in America, brought back to England the custom of using tobacco; but until 1607, when Jamestown Colony was planted, England obtained the little tobacco which it used, indirectly, through Spaniards from the West Indies.

Yet the use of the weed—which the American Indians smoked as a solace to care, a cheer to idleness, and a token of fidelity around the council fire and at peace negotiations—soon became popular in Europe, and thus spread all over the old world into Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, Persia, the Indies, and China. More than any other product of the soil, tobacco has an unquestioned title exclusively to American origin.

The culture of tobacco was undertaken almost immediately by the first settlers in Virginia, and it is recorded, that in 1615, not only the gardens and fields, but also the streets of Jamestown, were planted therewith. It quickly became the staple crop of the colony.

Prior to the Revolutionary war planters had discovered that their lands were deteriorating; from 1738, when Virginia exported 75,000 hogsheads, there was a falling-off for a number of years in the amount raised on the original plantations. The acreage increased, however, extending into new States, notably Georgia and Kentucky.

THE FUTURE OF AMERICA

Right now, as this is being written, the future of America is taking shape!

If you know where to look, if you know whom to watch, you can see the future of America being made right before your eyes!

Where is the future of America being made? In the White House? In Congress? In the present political campaign? Or, in Europe?

NO! The future of America is not being made in any of those places! There are powerful influences in all of them, of course—but no one of them, not all of them combined, can make the future of America.

The future of America can only be made in one place—and that is in the minds and hearts of the men and women of America! What they THINK, will shape its destiny. What they DO, will make its future.

No force on this earth can equal the united WILL of the American people. When the pulses of the American people begin to beat in unison, the war will be heard around the world! And woe unto any foreign power which does not give it heed! In the minds and hearts of the men and women of America is rising a united determination which will shape the destiny of this nation—and which will guarantee to coming generations a future America solidly built upon the traditions and ideals which have made this nation the greatest nation in the world. And will keep it so.

Our fate lies not in our stars . . . but in OURSELVES!

IN THE calm stillness of a starlit night, a man and a woman look up through the deep, clear darkness at tiny points of light . . . stars. And, they wonder about the future of America . . . their future . . . and yours.

Even as they look . . . the destiny of this nation is taking shape. Not in the stars, as they continue their ageless march across the skies—but in the minds and hearts of the men and women of America. The PEOPLE of America, themselves, will determine its fate. What they THINK—will shape its destiny. What they DO—will make its future.

"Our fate lies not in our stars . . . but in OURSELVES." That applies, not only to nations, but to individuals as well. Your life is what YOU make it. If you want to be happy—live CHEERFULLY! Do cheerful things. And, include in your daily pleasures the cheerful refreshment of Oertel's '92 Beer.

A 25 per cent increase in production at Taylor and Williams Distilleries indicates the optimistic view of the future, held by the makers of this famous old brand of Kentucky Bourbon. Mr. M. J. Dant, president, now on an extended trip through the west, reports an ever increasing preference for Yellowstone throughout the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast territories.

Tobacco—Kentucky's Big Crop

Although Kentucky's tobacco crop occupies only a comparatively small acreage, it produces approximately 62% of all farm income in the state. It has been estimated that our 1940 tobacco will bring to Kentucky farmers well over 100 million dollars. Kentucky produces well over one-fourth of all Burley Tobacco raised in the United States and the reputation of Kentucky burley is known and envied the world over. Our gently rolling limestone land produces a quality of tobacco for which there is a steady demand. On many of our bluegrass area farms tobacco is the only cultivated crop, the rest of the farm being used for livestock grazing. This prevents the erosion of soil which is so costly in many sections of the country.

Tobacco growers of dark tobacco recently had their hopes raised when the Commodity Credit Corporation announced that the price of the different types of dark tobacco would be pegged. Since the European War, the dark tobacco producers have had cause for alarm as 65% of this crop is exported. The State Department of Agriculture has estimated a yield of approximately 60 million pounds from Kentucky farms.

ORIGIN OF KELLEY TOBACCO

More than a half century ago, when growing of tobacco in central Kentucky, was in the experimental stage, BEN L. KELLEY, of Garrard County, who died Nov. 7, 1901, aged 88 years and 21 days, began its culture with the view of perfecting a finer smoking tobacco. He gave to this his full attention and after years of patient labor and study succeeded, by applying the principles of cross breeding—successfully used by Luther Burbank—in producing what is now universally known throughout the burley area of this and other states, as "KELLEY TOBACCO."

During all this time while seeking to improve the smoking qualities of burley tobacco, he studied every angle of production, best methods of handling from seed bed to marketing, of handling the seed pods to secure the highest germination, of various soils, fertilization, insecticides; in fact everything needed to produce highest type of smoking and cigarette burley, to meet the ever increasing demand, bringing to perfection "KELLEY TOBACCO," the high standard it has attained.

SEED BED

The site is the first thing to consider. An open spot in the farm where there is no shade, an old fence row or a fertile spot in a clover or bluegrass field should be given first consideration in locating the bed. A southern or eastern exposure is the most desirable. It warms up earlier.

A bed nine feet wide is desirable. It should run with steepest slope of the hill. A bed of above width and twenty-five feet long should easily set one acre at one pulling. After the location has been made, all brush, briars and leaves should be removed. Then the surface should be plowed shallow or dug up with a heavy hoe. Poles are then laid down end to end, 2' out three feet apart over the whole area. Brush, poles or split logs are then placed thereon to a sufficient depth to produce a hot fire, and thereby kill all weed and grass seed and fungus spores that may be lodged in the top four inches of soil. This operation can also be done effectively by steam sterilization, where the grower has the necessary equipment.

LET the EARTH SPEAK

by ANN STEWARD

Man in his timeless relationship to the earth—this is the primal theme of a strangely fascinating novel, which introduces a new writer of fresh, highly individual powers.

To Hayes El Farm, in Kentucky, come four Jarrells, all unhappy and damaged by life. They are sent by the owner to "live through" a year there, and almost at once come under the spell of something unworldly. For over the whole countryside broods the spirit of Old Hayes, who has made the place from nothing.

Through the eyes of Julia Jarrell, who tells the story, we follow the ardent emotional conflicts, the loves and hates in the many destinies still linked with Old Hayes. Drake, the illegitimate son, with his devoted wife, Lottie; Zayda, the servant, a wise earth-madonna; Prue, the amazon, abandoned on her wedding day; Kirtley Hayes himself, the owner, who returns home from England to fall in love with Julia Jarrell—all come to abundant life here. In the end, the Jarrells too find themselves drawn in, healed by their contact with the land, and having begun to feel a kinship with the great house and its surrounding acres.

Mrs. Steward writes of these people with intensity and poetic power; her book is rich as well with the sights and sounds of country life. The sheep, the harvest, the horses, the great river flowing near by—all are as vital as the human actors in this magnificent drama of earth's nobility.

The surface is then pulverized with a hoe or harrow and "leveled" and "smoothed" with a garden rake. Tobacco seeds do not germinate and grow well among clods.

A bed nine feet wide and twenty-five feet long should have one level teaspoonful of the best seed to be had sown on it.

It is necessary to mix the seed with sifted wood ashes or fertilizer to sow uniformly and thereby get a uniform stand. The bed should be sown both the long and the short way. Rake in lightly and pack the ground while dry. Keep all weeds from the bed. See that no insects get in, if they do, use an insecticide putting it on plants with a bellows or sprayer. Canvas the bed as soon as possible.

Profit on the Hoof

Although it is now a familiar sight to see large herds of black Angus and white faced Herefords peacefully grazing in Kentucky's green valleys it has been only in recent years that the Kentucky farmer has recognized the profitable use to which he could put his pasture land. By means of a broad educational program the Department of Agriculture and its affiliated agencies have brought to Kentucky an ever increasing livestock and grazing program. Now, cattle, beef and dairy, bring to Kentucky farmers over $37,000,000 each year. When this figure is combined with the income received from sheep, hogs, and other livestock it produces an aggregate income second only to tobacco.

Wheat Provides Vital Winter Cover

Experience has taught the Kentucky farmer that our rolling land must be covered in winter to prevent very serious and costly erosion. In addition to "keeping our soil at home," wheat provides a large cash income. It is our second largest grain crop, ranking next to corn. For the past decade, Kentucky has produced approximately five million bushels per year. Mr. Wm. G. Harris, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture, in a recent speech before the association of Master Farmers of Kentucky, stated that the prospects for a good wheat and oat crop for 1940-41 were better than they have been in twenty years. A marked increase in price is expected.

Kentucky Twelfth Largest Corn Producer

Although Kentucky is an important producer of but one grain and that is corn, it stands high in the production of that crop. Our farmers annually cultivate 3 million acres for production of corn and harvest from 75 to 100 million bushels. This year nature has smiled kindly upon the Kentucky corn growers and our farmers look forward to bountiful yields and a steadily rising market. The widespread drought that resulted in only a partial crop in her neighboring states spared the large portion of Kentucky's corn land and the expected demand plus a large crop will mean added dollars in our farmers' pockets. Corn plays an important role in the scheme of Kentucky Agriculture as the cash sale of this crop represents a substantial part of our annual farm income. The ever increasing use of hybrid seed corn is doing much to provide larger yields and profits.

Poultry a Profitable Enterprise

Although it is not generally recognized, the income to Kentucky farmers from poultry and poultry products totals well over 20 million dollars a year. Figures recently released by Commissioner of Agriculture, Wm. H. May, indicate that 90% of our farmers keep a flock of from 50 to 75 layers. Increased attention is being given to poultry by the cooperating state agencies since the need for higher production and disease-free fowls has been recognized.

A little known, though very important fact is that Kentucky ranks eighth in the production of turkeys. Although turkey raising in the past has largely been a side line it has for several years produced over one million annually. During the past few years producers, near large industrial centers, have specialized in production of flocks for commercial sale and this has resulted in increased profits and higher quality. Kentucky has rapidly earned a reputation for high-quality "Thanksgiving Birds."

THE CHOICE OF A CANDIDATE

The New York Times, America's leading newspaper, which has supported the Democratic nominee for President in every election since 1908 with but two exceptions, recently announced its decision to support Willkie in the following editorial:

The New York Times supported Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Presidency in 1932 and again in 1936. In 1940 it will support Wendell Willkie.

It has made its choice, as all Americans must make their choice, in one of the great crises of this Nation's history. The liberties of the American people are in danger. A hostile Power, openly proclaiming its hatred of the democratic way of life, has swept across Europe and is now battering at the gates of England, seeking to grasp the Eastern approaches to that Atlantic world in which our own democracy has lived and prospered.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie understand the critical nature of this threat to the United States. Both are citizens of the world. Both know that it is impossible to isolate ourselves from the consequences of a world revolution. Both know that we must take sides morally or count for nothing. Both are opposed to actual intervention in the war, but short of war both favor every possible aid that can be given to the one democracy in Europe that still stands in Hitler's path.

This agreement between the two Presidential candidates on the fundamentals of a foreign policy is a deeply fortunate fact for the American people. Without it we might now be involved in a bitter controversy which would wreck our unity. As matters stand, the choice before us has been narrowed to this question: In whose hands, Mr. Roosevelt's or Mr. Willkie's, is the safety of the American people likely to be more secure during the critical test that lies ahead?

We give our own support to Mr. Willkie primarily for these reasons: Because we believe that he is better equipped than Mr. Roosevelt to provide this country with an adequate national defense; because we believe he is a practical liberal who understands the need of increased production; because we believe that the fiscal policies of Mr. Roosevelt have failed disastrously; because we believe that at a time when the traditional safeguards of democracy are failing everywhere it is particularly important to honor and preserve the American tradition against vesting the enormous powers of the Presidency in the hands of any man for three consecutive terms of office.

Our readers are entitled to a statement of the reasons which, upon mature consideration, have led us to these opinions.

I. Defense of the United States

In the field of national defense we recognize that Mr. Roosevelt has taken a number of necessary steps, all of which have had our whole-hearted endorsement, both before he was ready to take them and later, when he had acted. He has re-created the Defense Advisory Commission and called some able men to Washington. He has recommended that Congress appropriate large funds for defense equipment. He has succeeded in negotiating leases for new naval and air bases which are of great potential importance to the defense of the whole North American continent. He strongly urged Congress to adopt a system of compulsory selective military service.

But there are a number of other equally important steps which Mr. Roosevelt has not taken. He has withheld power from the Advisory Commission and made it a mere consultative agency, unable on its own authority to cut the endless red tape in Washington. He has kept power for himself, tried to be his own defense administrator and retained in his own hands control over too many details of a defense program which still lacks central planning. He has seemed to regard the whole business of defense as a sideshow to the ordinary activities of the country, requiring no fundamental change in the habits of the American people and no revision of any of the policies of his Administration. We find Mr. Willkie's early call for sacrifice, for hard work, "sweat and toil," more reassuring than Mr. Roosevelt's cheerful confidence that we need not let ourselves become "discombobulated" by the task that lies before us.

But all these points, important as they are, only touch the surface of the matter. At bottom adequate national defense means much more than airplanes, tanks and cannon, even when all of these are actually on hand and not just "on order." It means a nation strong in its economic health and power, with a thriving industry, full employment, both of manpower and of money, new capital flowing vigorously into new channels of production. It means, in short, a nation with gigantic industrial force behind its army and its navy.

The record shows that Mr. Roosevelt has achieved least success in the solution of this very problem. He has failed to create the conditions for a confident and expanding business. It is a reasonable assumption that this same problem can be managed better by a man who understands business, who has the confidence of business, who has himself been a part of business, whose interest in business problems has been firsthand and continuous rather than casual and intermittent, and whose experience includes a successful personal record in stimulating business and expanding industrial production.

In this field Mr. Willkie is the professional and Mr. Roosevelt is the amateur.

II. Liberalism and Reform

In the field of domestic policy this newspaper has recognized the need of the sound social and economic reforms of the two Roosevelt Administrations. It has given its support to these reforms. Specifically, it has endorsed the purpose and the principle of the Social Security Act, the National Housing Act of 1934, the Slum Clearance Act of 1936, the Wagner Housing Act of 1937, the Soil Conservation Act, the Securities Act of 1933, the regulation of the Stock Exchanges, the supervision of investment trusts. The reforms at which every one of these measures aimed were long overdue.

Mr. Willkie has affirmed his own belief in the necessity of reform and his own support of the major reforms of the Roosevelt Administrations. Because of this he has been attacked by the President's friends as a mere plagiarist who is now attempting to steal the New Deal's thunder, and an imposter who is trying to run "on the President's own program." This is a curious attitude for the President's friends to take. It is a curious attitude, because it suggests a belief that the New Deal has a monopoly on reform and wants nobody else to share in it. But the truth is that no faction and no party has a monopoly on reform in the United States; many men have shared in it and will continue to share in it. "Plagiarism" is beside the point. For seven years Mr. Roosevelt himself has been making daily use of important reforms introduced by Republican Administrations—among them the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the Pure Food and Drug Act, the Children's Bureau, the executive budget, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

For ourselves, we welcome the fact that Mr. Willkie stands pledged to conserve rather than to destroy what is best in Mr. Roosevelt's reforms. We believe that these reforms would be safe in Mr. Willkie's hands, not only because Mr. Willkie is a man of goodwill, but because his approach to the problems now before us shows him to be a liberal. He is enough of a student and enough of a realist to know that we are living in a changing time and that it is both necessary and desirable that the Government should take an increasingly active part in policing the financial markets, in safeguarding labor's right to bargain collectively and in achieving social justice for underprivileged people.

More than this, we believe that Mr. Willkie could be relied upon not to make some of the mistakes and not to take some of the risks which Mr. Roosevelt has made and taken. For we believe that while Mr. Roosevelt has helped enormously to awaken the social conscience of this country, and that while he deserves lasting credit for this leadership, Mr. Roosevelt has also put his own reforms in peril. He has put them in peril by ignoring or by failing to understand the fundamental problem of increased production; by encouraging great numbers of Americans to believe that it is possible to grow richer by working less and producing less; by fostering the idea that there exists somewhere a great fund of wealth which has only to be divided more equitably in order to make everybody prosperous; by permitting important members of his Administration to preach the doctrines of class jealousy and class hatred.

Mr. Willkie stated the case accurately when he said that "American liberalism does not consist merely in reforming things; it consists also in making things." It consists in expanding the production of the necessities and the good things of life. Wealth is only another word for production; and in the long run there is no other way to achieve a higher standard of living for the whole people of a nation than to produce in abundance.

We believe that Mr. Willkie understands this crucial point better than Mr. Roosevelt, and that he would be more likely to succeed in putting this principle into practice.

III. "The Road to Bankruptcy"

In the field of fiscal policy our dissent from the course pursued by Mr. Roosevelt dates from his first year in office. We expressed this dissent in 1936, even while supporting him for reelection, and ventured then to express the hope that he would pursue a more responsible fiscal policy during his second term in office. Unfortunately, his course during his second term has become still more reckless.

We cite evidence at three points to support this statement.

(1) The fantastic silver policy of the Roosevelt Administration, scarcely begun in 1936, has now grown to almost incredible proportions. More than two billion ounces of a metal for which our Government has no earthly use—approximately a hundred times as much silver as all the silver mines in the United States produced in the year before this policy began—have been bought by the Treasury at overvalued prices in an artificial market. This policy makes no sense, except as a political maneuver to win the support of the so-called "silver bloc." Otherwise its only visible results have been to drive off the silver standard the one important country which had previously been on it and to take from other nations useless silver in exchange for our own good wheat and oil and motor cars and other exports. There is only one way to describe such a policy as this. It leads over the hills to the poorhouse.

(2) The national budget, which was originally to be balanced so courageously, has been continuously out of balance since Mr. Roosevelt entered office. The national debt has more than doubled in seven years. It is true that the new defense program has now made a balanced budget hopeless at the moment. But even before this program was proposed the Administration was operating under a gigantic deficit and spending far more money annually than had ever been raised by taxation in any year in the whole history of the United States. Moreover, the problem of the budget is not less serious, but far more serious, because of the new difficulties presented by the defense program. For the sake of conserving the national credit in a time of danger, expenditures other than those for defense ought now to be cut to a point at which they balance tax yields. But the Administration, with whom borrowing has become a habit, has not proposed a single important economy as an offset against its huge defense spending.

(3) The fundamental trouble is that the Administration has thrown overboard the central fiscal theory in which it professed to believe, even as late as 1936. It has abandoned the idea that the best contribution it could make to re-employment and recovery is to put its own fiscal house in order. It now believes, and the President frankly says this in his budget messages, that when business is lagging the Government ought to go in debt deliberately in order to "create purchasing power" and "energize private enterprise." This is the perfect Politician's Paradise—a paradise in which public money is spent on a gigantic scale without any responsibility of raising an equivalent amount of money by taxation.

We believe that the results of a continuation of this policy will be precisely what Mr. Roosevelt himself said they would be in 1932—"If, like a spendthrift, a nation throws discretion to the winds and is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending . . . it is on the road to bankruptcy." We believe that there is no real possibility whatever of checking the present trend toward bankruptcy so long as Mr. Roosevelt remains in office. It will be a desperately hard task at best. The only present hope lies in a change of Administrations.

IV. The Third Term Issue

We come, finally, to the choice before us, to an issue which has been defined by more than a hundred years of American history, by the deliberate decision of some of our greatest Presidents and by the reluctance of many Americans today to surrender what they believe to be a safeguard of the democratic system—the issue of the third term.

From Mr. Roosevelt's own statement in his radio acceptance speech to the Democratic National Convention the country knows that even as late as a year ago he had no intention of challenging the tradition against a third term: "Last September it was still my intention to announce clearly and simply at an early date that under no conditions would I accept re-election." This announcement was never made; when the President finally declared his intentions regarding the third term he did not say that "under no conditions would he accept re-election," but merely that he "had no wish to be a candidate again"—a very different statement. The practical effect of the postponement was to lessen greatly the chance of any other Democrat to receive his party's nomination. The practical effect of the change in the character of the President's announcement was to encourage the "draft," which some of the highest officials of his own Administration had long favored and long worked to bring about. From these facts it seems to us that only one conclusion can be drawn. As the situation created by the war developed, the President came to regard his own personal leadership as indispensable and to believe that there was no other member of his party, however trusted, however close to him, however deeply in accord with his own convictions about the war or about domestic issues, who could safely take his place.

The doctrine of one man's indispensability is a new doctrine for this country. It is a doctrine which less scrupulous men in Europe have used to root themselves in power. It is a doctrine which we in the United States have good reason to question, particularly when we consider how the powers of the Presidency have grown, what immense patronage, what gigantic expenditures, what enormous power to perpetuate himself in office is now within the grasp of any President of the United States.

These considerations are especially relevant when the particular President who now chooses to remain in office for a third term is the same President who has never surrendered voluntarily a single one of the vast "emergency" powers which Congress has given him. He is the same President who has shown himself so impatient of constitutional restraints that he was willing to circumvent the Supreme Court itself by adding enough members to it to give his own opinions a majority.

In the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt and the election of Mr. Willkie there is an opportunity to safeguard a tradition with the wisdom of long experience behind it.

These are our primary reasons for supporting Mr. Willkie and for strongly urging his election.

In supporting him we do not intend to lose that independence upon which we have always put chief emphasis or to compromise our own convictions. We shall continue to support such of Mr. Roosevelt's views and acts as we find deserving of support. We shall criticize and oppose any of Mr. Willkie's views if they seem to us to lack merit. Above all, we shall do our best to keep our own part in this campaign free of personal controversy and focused on the great issues now before the country. In a time of danger the clearest duty of every good American is to help conserve that national unity which is our richest heritage.
