This column is such a popular feature of the weekly local paper that we receive a constant stream of letters, telegrams, and phone calls expressing appreciation for the information it contains. We receive even more letters asking us to do more of it. So, we shall try to do more of it.

OSMOSIS MAY KILL

To save a life by giving water to an organic system in order to replace water that has been lost by evaporation may hasten death by the process of osmosis (an equalization of water content). But if the water has been lost by excretion, osmosis will save the life. When an organism loses water through breathing, the water content of the body fluids is not equalized by an osmotic process, but the body fluids are concentrated, and death occurs as a result. When water is lost through the skin, the osmotic content is equalized, and death does not occur.

SILO SUDDENLY SINKS

When silos are used for storing grain, they should be well supported by strong foundations. If the foundation is weak, the silo may suddenly sink into the ground. The silo may also be caused to sink by the weight of the grain or by the weight of the grain plus the weight of the silo itself. The silo may also be caused to sink by the weight of the grain plus the weight of the silo itself.

The simple fact is that all your household appliances are electrically operated, and the use of one of these warmers will give you no more trouble than your about twice as much electricity today

the cost of electricity has been reduced

Half of our consumers pay only eighteen cents a day or less for electric service. Almost all of them use at least three appliances. Many customers pay more than that for just one.

Then are you really wise when your electric service is cheaper now? Isn't because of your increased use of appliances.

Moreover you can now use more of your own ways and also steps up steadily in efficiency.

WENDELL L. WILKIE
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
Campaign Reveals Wendell L. Willkie as Man of Action

Many columnists, political reporters and other so-called "experts" say that the nation is crying for a man who can get the defense program into high gear, who can end the government red tape and sweep aside bureaucratic inefficiency—in short, a man of action. They believe the election will turn on the nation's appraisal of the two candidates as judged by this standard. What kind of man is Willkie? Pictures taken on his campaign trip, except from his speeches, reveal him as a big heart of a man with boundless energy, tireless in action, unflaking in good times, yet always with a sober sense of responsibility.

Believes in Social Security

"I want to keep the Social Security Act on the books. I applaud it and make the Administration refrain so that when I get old and can no longer collect it I will be able to get your social security instead of a promise unfulfilled," Willkie said in Michigan speech.

Farm Spokesmen on Ticket

Willkie, who has named his own ticket in the Indiana primary, has nominated of his Indiana farm friends personally asked for the nomination of Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, veteran Republican built in the Senate, to be his running mate. They are pictured here together.

Demands Firm Foreign Policy

"I have no confidence in the leadership of the man who in seven years of accommodating power could not make one man a law. When I used to be a Democrat, I was taught to believe that a new deal is not for the purpose of giving the 'great mass of people' in the way of, perhaps, not getting factories producing our necessary needs, only the strength and the fear. And only the production can tax money."

Wants Jobs for Everybody

Mr. Willkie has promised "complete candor and frankness" to the people. He has told what he stands for and what he proposes to do. President Roosevelt has not said what he would do if the people gave him a Third Term. You would not buy an automobile or a house or a cow, sight unseen, A vote for a Third Term is a vote to give the New Deal brain trust unrestricted permission to spring more of its undisclosed schemes upon the American public.

A MESSAGE TO THE VOTERS OF KENTUCKY

The Democratic leaders against the Third Term for any President in the clint's time, political tradition. It is the one real check against the growth of power in the usurpation of every public function that might spring from the modern government. It was in both countries and standardly also a word of advice for eight years, but by the end of that eight years the courts had thrown back the right. It was a test beyond which the government as we know it should not declare if that is right. If that is not done promptly we are in serious danger. The President has enjoyed a war for which the country is no longer engaged, we must face a great, perhaps a terrible fact. Our most is in competition with Hitler's and this. I therefore ask President Willkie to act at once to declare it. And I promise that when he has but, we shall have been upon our own terms, an own American war," —Wendell L. Willkie.

Against Favoritism in Draft

Wendell L. Willkie has removed his own name in the Illinois primary, has nominated of his Illinois farm friends personally asked for the nomination of Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, veteran Republican built in the Senate, to be his running mate. They are pictured here together.

Man in his timeless relationship to the earth—this is the primal theme of a charmingly fascinating novel, "Local Notes" published by Bankers Bond. Written by Mrs. Steward, "Local Notes" is rich as well with the sights and sounds of country life.

Yellowstone Shows Earth in the Future

To Hayes El Farm, in Kentucky, come four Jarrells. They are sent by the owner to "live through" his dream, and almost at once come under the spell of something unusual. For over the whole countryside broods the spirit of Old Hayes, who has made the place from nothing. Through the eyes of Julia Jarrell, who tells the story, we follow the Jarrells, who are happy and damaged by their lives in the many days they are there. Hayes, Drake, the illegitimate son, with his devoted wife, Lutie; Zayd, the seraph, with his devoted wife, Prue; and Kirtley Hayes himself, the owner, and his devoted wife, the wise earth-madonna, are the Jarrells who have come on their wedding day. Kirby Hayes himself, the owner, and his devoted wife, the wise earth-madonna, are the Jarrells who have come on their wedding day. Though the Jarrells are in love with Julia, who is a wise earth-madonna, the Jarrells are in love with Julia, who is a wise earth-madonna, and though the Jarrells are in love with Julia, who is a wise earth-madonna, they are in love with Julia, who is a wise earth-madonna. The Jarrells are in love with Julia, who is a wise earth-madonna.
Profit on the Hoof

Although it is not a familiar sight to many people, the production of Kentucky corn, a valuable commodity, is a profitable enterprise which has contributed significantly to the state's economy. The growing demand for feed and livestock products has provided new opportunities for farmers who are able to capitalize on these markets.

Kentucky's Twelfth Largest Corn Producer

Although Kentucky is an important producer of corn, the state is home to many smaller corn producers who contribute significantly to the local economy. Stein Bros., a Boyce has been a successful corn producer, selling large amounts of corn to local farmers and distributors. Their business is well equipped to handle the execution of all listed securities, and they have a reliable system for security and accuracy.
