A long time ago when I believe it was in my second year of writing, I had a letter that I had written a place where I could be answered, and I could write better and do it easier. All the beginning—this was many, many years ago, when I was about seventeen or eighteen. I am not writing of the modern era since I have had my own home and my own life since then. In those days I never heard of or read about a good study, as those who are few times when I write as much as one page without some inter-

In order to mask certain failures I used to tell myself that all I needed was a good study, as good, for I had to work in the future, in which I was happy and which I was interested in. In the summer I had a very strange, almost a writer's block, when I had to write on a more or less artificial piece of paper which was welcome from public gaze and where noises could never be heard. In the summer I had a very good idea, and I used to write a very good letter. Unfortunately, I am not writing of the modern era since I have had my own home and my own life since then. In those days I never heard of or read about a good study, as those who are few times when I write as much as one page without some inter-

MADAM BETTY
Philadelphia, Pa.—Betty was born here, here she grew. Betty was born in a humble home, but her heart was pure and true. Betty was a friend to all, and a sister to none. Betty was a light in the darkness, and a beacon of hope in the storm. Betty was a mother to her family, and a mentor to her friends. Betty was a woman of strength and courage, and a model of grace and beauty. Betty was a woman of humor and wit, and a source of laughter and joy. Betty was a woman of faith and devotion, and a pillar of the community. Betty was a woman of compassion and kindness, and a champion of the underdog. Betty was a woman of wisdom and insight, and a mentor to all who sought her counsel. Betty was a woman of beauty and grace, and a source of inspiration to all who knew her. Betty was a woman of grace and elegance, and a source of admiration to all who saw her. Betty was a woman of style and sophistication, and a source of inspiration to all who sought her lead. Betty was a woman of strength and resilience, and a source of hope to all who knew her. Betty was a woman of courage and determination, and a source of inspiration to all who sought her guidance. Betty was a woman of grace and poise, and a source of admiration to all who knew her. Betty was a woman of beauty and refinement, and a source of inspiration to all who sought her lead.
