NUMBER TWO.

APPLICANTS TO BE MADE FOR 'MATS'

Applications for the cotton mattresses will be taken by the mattress chairman Wednesday, February 5, from 8:30 until 3:30, at Sylvan Shade School, Graves School, Middleton's Store (Sassafraz Ridge), Hornsby's Store (Bondurant) and Extension Office (Post Office Building in Hickman.) On Thursday, February 6, applications will be taken at Loggston School, Cayce School, Crutchfield School, Palestine School, and Atkins' Insurance Office (Fulton.)

The ruling for the cotton mattress program has been changed slightly from that of last year. The income for the farm family can be as much as $600.00 for four people this year, with $50.00 added to the income for each additional person in the family.

Last year only farm families were allowed cotton mattresses. This year non-farm families are included, and any rural community, which according to the definition given by the United States Department says "any community under 2,500 population is considered a rural community," therefore making anyone residing out of the city limits of Fulton in Fulton county are eligible for a cotton mattress, provided their income does not exceed the amount stated above.

With each application that is taken up $1.00 will be deposited for each mattress wanted, to pay the expenses of constructing tables, buying needles, twines, tufts and other expenses of the project. The Federal Government furnishes for each mattress, 50 pounds of cotton and 10 yards of ticking. The farm family furnishes two days' labor for at least two people in the family.

If the committeemen can not approve the applicant's application, the $1.00 will be refunded. Anyone interested in making mattresses is urged to file an application at one of these centers so that the order may be placed for the cotton and the work on making the mattresses will start at least by the first of April.

The Chestnut Glade boys led the visitors 8 to 4 at the half in what seemed to be a defensive game, and in the last half the home team scored consistently, making 19 points to their opponents 6.

Burglars Raid Bank Of Woodland Mills

The Farmers' Bank of Woodland Mills was entered Monday night and a total amount of $2,400 in bills, gold and silver was stolen. Burglars used an acetylene torch to cut their way into the vault and an inner steel safe, probably damaged beyond repair the steel safe. Cashier J. V. Hefley estimated that damage to the door and safe probably will amount to $1,500. The entire loss is covered by insurance. F. B. I. agents arrived Tuesday and are conducting a thorough investigation.

The burglars used their torch to gain entrance to the vault and then to cut a hole through the top of the small steel safe. Wired inside the large steel door of the vault was a cylinder of tear gas. The burglars cut through the door at a point just below wires leading to the cylinder and the gas was not discharged.

Only evidence left by the thieves were three 10-gallon milk cans of water which they used to cool the metal of the vault and safe as they worked.

In July, 1932, Cashier Hefley was held up in the bank by men who stole $750. They were later captured near Memphis and confessed. An attempted burglary a few years ago was foiled when the tear gas cylinder on the inside of the vault exploded.

Omar Harding, 40, resident of Martin was shot to death in the Melntyre pool room in Martin Wednesday morning by Aubrey Kibler, 27, of Palmersville. Kibler fired five revolver shots into Harding's body and walked to the police station to surrender. The first two shots inflicted slight wounds in Harding's left arm and under the arm pit, as Harding faced Kibler. Witnesses said Harding then turned and ran toward the back of the room and Kibler shot him three times in the back.

Kibler claims that Harding and another Martin man recently swindled him out of $147 in a confidence game in Hayti, Mo. He said that he realized he had been cheated and threatened to kill Harding if his money was not returned. Harding promised to repay him Wednesday morning. When they met Wednesday in the pool room Kibler asked for his money, was refused and started shooting.

Harding is survived by his wife. During the last few years he had been arrested several times on charges of gambling and fighting.

City Will Be On New Air Route Soon

Fulton will be included with 90 or more towns in Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama, which will have a pickup air mail and express service. This announcement was made this week when the Southern Aviation Corporation was chartered by Tennessee with Lieut. Col. Herbert Fox of the Air Corps Reserve as president.

Many towns are on the route in West Tennessee, but Fulton and Hickman are to be the only two cities in Kentucky, connecting directly with Memphis. Martin is the nearest point where airport facilities are available, but stops will be made here also if an airport is established. For some time a local group has been interested in opening an airport here to keep in step with the swift developments now taking place in aviation. A plan has been proposed for the opening of an airport at the Bennett farm on the Fulton-Union City highway, but immediate action is needed on this movement, with the cooperation of civic groups and citizens.

The new air line, in addition to being licensed to transport passengers, mail and express, is authorized to train pilots and mechanics under its charter. Approximately 12 planes and 12 pilots are to be used at the outset of service by the firm, and its activities will be similar to those conducted by airlines in the East. The Schedule calls for about 3000 miles of flying daily by planes, with an early morning mail and express delivery service, and a late afternoon pickup service.

Operations planned by the corporation will service virtually every section of Tennessee and many points in Southern Kentucky and Northern Alabama. Each community will have an overnight air mail and express service to and from any section of the United States.

Behind the Scenes In American Business

BUSINESS—Looks as though we're rapidly approaching the time when we'll have to take down the "business as usual" sign over the doors of many of our industries. It's been contended for months that Uncle Sam couldn't go into the armament business—for himself and for nations elsewhere that are fighting what is often described as our battles—on the scale that now seems necessary, and still have the time, talent and materials necessary to carry on everything else at normal speed and in normal volume.

DISLOCATION appears just around the corner, with official acceptance of the above view. And it is beginning to appear, to economists studying the situation with an eye to the future, that along with passing of the "business as usual" status will come, to a noticeable extent, the passing of profits on some usual—that is, peacetime—businesses. Washington economists have arrived at the inescapable conclusion that, for example, if automobile production must be curtailed in order to provide needed steel for armament, other businesses which lean heavily on the auto industry will be greatly affected because of the curtailment of purchases by this top-notch peacetime customer of theirs.

COUNTERBALANCE—Next question is: Will the defense work make up for the normal business thus shoved aside? Consensus is that, in the over-all picture, it will more than do that; for most companies, such as aircraft, steel, shipbuilding, copper and aluminum, it assuredly will do so; that for others, notably motors, the answer is "probably," and that for some others, like building materials, agriculture, and household appliances, it's "probably not."

NO SHOW—Just what's going to happen with respect to the auto industry's production of cars and changes of models, in view of defense demands, is the question that gets most attention of the layman, outside of the question about how the defense drive itself is coming along. Indication that something will happen in this field, though, came last week when the Automobile Manufacturers Association cancelled the National Auto show booked for next October in New York. It was pointed out that this action will not control the course each company may follow in the matter of new models for '42.

TALK in automotive trade circles, though, has it that it's quite doubtful if many changes other than new colors and incidental accessories will be made in 1942 models. Changes involving only minor alterations in body or motor design naturally require new dies and tools. Therefore, to pass up such changes would release toolmakers and machine tools for defense production without seriously impairing the normal output of passenger cars upon which the nation's business and agriculture today are so vitally dependent, according to J. W. Frazer, president of Willys-Overland. It would also help to prevent recurrence of the situation of 1917-1918, when passenger car output was curtailed, demand increased tremendously, and cars sold at a terrific premium, said this modern pioneer in the low-cost, full-size cars.

ARBITRATION AWARD—Because business men engaged in international trade known that disputes with far-away customers put red ink on ledger books, there are many thousands who use arbitration to settle controversies out of court. With this in mind, C. V. Whitney, president of the American Arbitration Association, has just announced the creation of an annual award to the American business organization most effectively promoting the use of arbitration in foreign trade. Annual selection of the firm to receive the silver plaque will be made shortly by a jury of business men, educators and public officials. Donor is Eugene F. Sitterley, publisher of "Importers' Guide," an international trade publication. Incidentally, this journal is said to have the most complete collection of telephone directories in the world, with the books mounted on a huge revolving wheel for convenience in searching for names of business houses anywhere on earth.

BUSINESS—There seems to be no let-up, or even prospect of one, in the steady expansion of industrial activity. Biggest step-ups, naturally, are in defense goods industries, but the fact these call upon a wide range of industries furnishing the raw materials, has considerable effect in spreading the work of producing and moving goods. Backlogs of unfilled orders in aircraft, ship-building and the machine-tool industries, as well as in steel and textiles are increasing—which means there won't be any slackening of the pace for a long time to come. Private building contracts are at the highest level in weeks, reflecting the large volume of industrial construction as the feverish drive for additional plant capacity goes on. Housing projects are booming, too.

JUST HUMANS

"Nothin'. I Just Sold My Two Pigeons an' I'm Waitin' for Them to Come Back!"

STIMULATION—More work, larger payrolls, juicy overtime paychecks mean gains in consumer buying power. The month of January figures to at least match the performance of December in reflecting this situation, by producing the highest national total of department store sales, for that month, in 10 years. Auto owners, fearing eventual curtailment in production of new models, are rushing to get their '41 jobs tucked safely in the garage. Auto deliveries are running nearly 20 per cent above the near-record pace of a year ago, and well beyond the previous high-water mark, set in the same weeks of 1937. And the manufacturers, feeling the same way, are turning out cars at just about the fastest rate ever. During the middle two weeks of January the output reached an all-time high for any January period, and the outlook is for continued manufacturing volume at just about the present speed.

NEW FARM MARKET—The war has been costly for American farmers. Wheat shipments, for example, dropped from 61,165,000 bushels in the 10 months ending November 1, 1939, to 13,500,000 bushels in the same period last year. At the same time, however, some farmers specializing in native "old world" crops like limes, figs and lemons are enjoying expanded markets. Whereas 178,000 boxes of lemons were imported in 1932, practically none are now purchased abroad, and domestic production rose from 7,600,000 boxes in 1931 to more than 12,000,000 boxes last year. Grape growers, who benefited from a 60 wine consumption between 1935 and 1939, look for an even more per cent increase in American promising future with the entry into the field of firms with nationwide facilities. For example, Schenley Distillers, formerly large importers of European wines, have just purchased the famous Blanc winery at Livermore, Calif. According to Harry Caddow, secretary-mangaer of the Wine Institute, this trend will be of "immediate and lasting benefit to grape growers," and will make the public "even more appreciative of the fine quality of our American wines."

Because of the pressing need for naval officers, the 1941 class of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis will be graduated February 7, four months ahead of the usual June graduation date.

Money Talks

In talking about the farm problem last week I stated that the economy bloc in Congress hopes to cut materially Federal aid to farmers. They point out that prices are higher than a year ago for many agricultural products. Thus, they argue, the farmers do not need such large subsidies.

As a result of the loss of foreign markets, however, farmers of the U. S. will derive only about 3 per cent of their gross income from exports. This compares with 15 to 20 per cent during the 50-year period from 1880 to 1930 and with 8 to 10 per cent during the last decade.

All through the South, where cotton and tobacco are grown, the Great Plains, where wheat is the principal crop, and even into the Pacific Coast fruit-growing area, the loss of export markets is keenly felt.

The South is the hardest hit. Ordinarily, out of an annual production of 12,000,000 bales of cotton, 6,000,000 bales have been exported. This year, however, exports are running at the rate of only 1,500,000 bales. Although our domestic consumption is up around 2,000,000 bales, the carry-over of American cotton from previous years will be 15,000,000 bales—the greatest in all our history. How can prices go up in the face of this?

Tobacco is in a similar position. Exports have fallen from 450,000,000 pounds to about 180,000,000 pounds. The average price of burley on Kentucky markets has plunged below $14.00 for the first time in recent years. The outlook for higher prices is exceedingly dark.

How about the wheat farmer? The carry-over of old wheat from last summer was the largest in our history. Our exports have dwindled to practically zero. Canada alone will have old crop carry-over of 575,000,000 bushels or more than enough to supply the import demand of the entire world. This is not a very bright picture either.

Last week we presented the bright side; this week, the dark side. But you may rest assured the farmers of the South and West will not be content with a decline in farm aid. They control many votes and are strong in Congress. You may expect a battle over farm subsidies. What will Congress do?

Of the 26 states which levy a tax on cigarettes, only Alabama, Arizona, Kansas and Oklahoma tax by the package. In the other 22 states the tax is imposed according to the number of cigarettes or as a percentage of their value.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sumerlin of Biloxi, Miss., have been married 67 years, during which time they have not been separated a single day. Sumerlin is 92 years of age and his wife is 90, both being natives of Alabama.

Time magazine chose Winston Churchill, British prime minister as "man of the year" for 1940. It is generally conceded that Signor Benito Mussolini, Italian dictator, was the outstanding "flop of the year," and he is beginning 1941 with every prospect of holding on to that unenviable title.

The Rewards of Politics

By IRVIN S. COBB

WHEN the late Ollie James, United States Senator from Kentucky, first broke into politics in his native country of Crittenden he had occasion to try a case before a rural magistrate. After the trial ended the magistrate invited the young lawyer to go home to dinner with him. As they sat down at the table the old man said: "Ollie, it pains me mightily to see you messin' in with politics." "Why so?" inquired James. "Ollie, my son," said the magistrate, "politics ain't no fittin' pursuit for any young man. Look at me! I started in politics when I was young and hopeful, just like you are now. I have held mighty near all the positions of trust in the gift of the people of my home district—I have been school trustee, road supervisor, constable and justice of the peace. But now, as an old man, about all I've got to show for my years of ceaseless activity is a lot of warm enemies and cold friends."

DAIRYING PROFITS

Successful dairy farming depends upon proper feeding, breeding, herd management, expert marketing and judicious purchase of supplies. Needless to say, nutrition of the cow is vital. To produce plentifully the cow must be well fed.

Proteins are an essential nutrient, and usually lacking in sufficient amounts in home grown feeds. Soybean oil meal furnishes excellent protein to balance grain mixtures for dairy cows and growing calves, and repeated agricultural experiment station tests have demonstrated that it is an economical and efficient protein source for this purpose. This meal is very palatable, definitely satisfactory to feed and not too larative even in large amounts.

In a recent quantity experiment by nutritional experts as much as 18 pounds a day of soybean oil meal was fed to a cow for an extended period, with no adverse results.

On the other hand, raw soybeans, whole or ground, contain too much oil, and when fed at high levels they have a definitely adverse effect upon butter, besides being less palatable. When ground they deteriorate rapidly, the oil becoming rancid.

The many advantages of soybean oil meal in animal feeding have been so thoroughly demonstrated that the demand for it has had a phenomenal growth, increasing from 21,000 tons to more than 1,000,000 tons annually in the last 10 years. Many reputable brands of livestock feeds containing this valuable protein ingredient are on the market and have been found eminently satisfactory.

SPIRIT OF "77"

As the opening session of the Seventy-Seventh Congress of the United States get under way, it is eminently proper that its members and the general public alike have a clear definition in their minds of the problems and responsibilities that the people's representatives face in these troubled world times.

Nor is it hard, by a little thoughtful analysis, to list the most important points upon which Congress should for its unwavering attention. They would certainly include the following:

1. National defense is of primary importance. It is industry's job to provide the materials for this defense; government's task, aided by expert military advice, is to define the country's defense needs and to employ them most effectively to safeguard our shores.

2. The rearmament program should be carried through with as little dislocation as possible of our great peacetime economy.

3. No group in this country need lose any of the sound social gains that have been won over the course of the years. But the Congress does have a schedule of modification and clarification that it could well face this session in the interest of making our economy function more soundly and for the good of all Americans. It has avoided decision so far on amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, so badly in need of repair; now the report of the Smith House Committee studying that Act and the Board administering it points once again to the necessity for changes. The principles behind the Walter-Logan Bill, which narrowly failed to become law this last session, are worthy ones, in some form, they are deserving of more Congressional thought. Measures following the pattern of these projected items of legislation virtually demand the consideration of the new Congress.

Essentially, the Seventy-Seventh Congress has this touchstone to test all its acts: Consider the safety of the United States, and promote internal harmony so that our industries and our whole national life will be strong. If it works in that spirit, it can make "77" a real lucky number for our great nation and all the people who dwell here in peace and in freedom.

Holmes Urges Best Co-operation

"In order for America to produce all that is necessary for the defense program with greatest speed, every American must give both loyalty and complete co-operation to his government," John Holmes, president of Swift & Co., states in a report to employees released this week to each of the 65,000 employees in 599 plants and branches.

Mr. Holmes calls upon the members of his organization to continue working together harmoniously and effectively in carrying out increased responsibilities in feeding the nation which he foresees for 1941.

Mr. Holmes' statement to Swift employees on national defense is part of a special annual review of the company's operations which goes to all employees. Two years ago Swift instituted this new type of report. The financial statements and other facts contained in the regular shareholders' report are also in the report to employees, but stated in everyday language and liberally illustrated.

The report reveals that during the year 1940, Swift & Company employed 2,600 more men in its United States and Canadian plants than it did during the year 1939. Since the close of the 1940 fiscal year (on October 26), there has been an additional increase of 4,000 on the payrolls of the company.

One out of every eight persons on the Swift payroll in 1940, a total of 7,787, worked for the company 20 years or more. There has been an increase of 1,109 persons in this group in the past two years. A total of 1,030 employees have been with the company from 30 to 35 years and 29 have been with the company more than 45 years.

On the pension rolls of the company are 2,088 former employees and 1,561 widows and minor dependents. During 1940, $2,687,836 was paid out in pensions. Employees do not contribute to this pension fund. Over 49,000 employees are covered by group life insurance policies with $158,000,000 of insurance in force.

Mr. Holmes particularly acknowledged the company's appreciation of the older workers, including those on pensions.

"We owe much to all long-service workers," said Mr. Holmes, "not only for their valued years of service, but because they have also helped to pass on their skill and experience to the younger men. In talking with these long-service men I find that one of their greatest sources of satisfaction is the number of young men whom they have trained and who are now holding responsible positions."

It is pointed out by Harold H. Swift, vice chairman of the Swift Board of Directors, in a special section of the report, that Mr. Holmes himself is one of the men who was so trained by his seniors that he rose to the presidency after starting with the company as a messenger boy. The success of Mr. Holmes is cited as proof of the Swift principle, "We can raise better men than we can hire."

The company's earnings for the year were $11,183,484. According to the report, employees received $102,417,011 in wages and salaries.

In discussing the earnings of the company, Mr. Holmes says, "It is a fact too often overlooked that our earnings average only a fraction of a cent per pound of finished product. Had we sold our goods this year for 1-4 cent less per pound, or even if we had maintained the same sales prices and our costs had been 1-4 cent per pound higher—instead of making a profit we would have had a loss of several million dollars."

Many Farmers Find It Pays to Grind Their Feed Electrically

Even on small farms, home grinding can cut feed costs by $150 a year.

By IRA MILLER

Farm Electrification Bureau

COMPETENT authorities estimate that the feed bill makes up 50 to 90 per cent of the total cost of livestock production. Therefore, the difference between profit and loss—between a successful and an unsuccessful year—for many farmers depends to a large extent on the economies or lack thereof they practice in the feeding of their poultry, cattle, hogs or sheep.

Extended tests in all parts of the country and under widely varying conditions have proved that it pays to grind many grains and roughages for most livestock. Among the advantages are: Reduces feed waste; encourages full feeding; aids digestion; maintains milk and meat production; makes it easier to mix feed; allows the use of less palatable feeds; and permits the feeding of roughage in self-feeders.

Although custom grinding by commercial mills still is an important industry, more and more farmers—especially with the ever-increasing availability of electricity—are grinding all their feed at home excepting, perhaps, a relatively small quantity containing ingredients they do not raise themselves.

Electrically grinding grain at home results in a cash saving of from $1.25 to $2.25 per ton, as the average custom grinder charges from 10 to 15 cents per 100 pounds whereas the cost of home grinding (even with electricity at 5 cents per kw-hr., and allowing for depreciation, interest and repairs) is only about 4 cents per 100 pounds.

In addition to this tangible saving, there also is that of saving the grain; loading it on a truck; journeying to the mill; unloading at the mill; waiting until the grain is ground; loading and making the return trip; and unloading and storing the grain at the farm. The cost of these several items is difficult to compute but, regardless of how little value the farmer places on his time, it constitutes an appreciable amount.

Grinding grain at home assures a fresh and constant supply at all times, and eliminates the inconvenience of leaving the farm when the weather is bad or during busy seasons. Another advantage is that inferior feeds, not worth the trouble and expense of custom grinding, can be profitably ground.

There is a size and type of grinder to meet the feed and price requirements of every farm, be it small or large. Electrical power is by far the cheapest and most convenient for home grinding, particularly if the motor is portable and can be used for other farm chores. Ask the extension division of your state college or university, or the various manufacturers, for advice and help on your feed grinding problems.

of Hickman is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Mabry.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of Rush Creek church had an all-day meeting at the church last Thursday. A large number of members and visitors were present. The next regular meeting will be at the home of Mrs. R. S. Bransford on Thursday, Feb. 16.

MARTIN BOXES
When Alexander Wilson, our first great ornithologist, rode his horse from Lexington, Kentucky, to New Orleans, Louisiana, in 1810, nothing impressed him more than the hospitality shown by all sorts of people to the graceful Purple Martin. "The Choctaws and Chickasaws," he says, "cut off all the top branches of a sapling near their cabins, leaving the prongs a foot or two in length, on each of which they hang a gourd, or Calabash, properly hollowed out for their convenience. On the banks of the Mississippi the negroes stick up long canes, with the same species of apartment fixed to their tops, in which the Martins regularly breed." One of the redeeming features of the people of our pioneer days is the fact that they loved the Bluebird and the Purple Martin and even then made houses for them to attract them around the farmhouse. In thinking back over the thousands of country houses that I have seen, I know of nothing that is more commonly found than some species of martin box. We boys in the long ago often did our first bit of genuine carpentry when we made a martin box and mounted it on a pole, which, by perverseness, nearly always warped and left our house sitting at a rakish angle. Few of us did a very artistic job in this carpentry, but the martins seemed not to know the difference and accepted our invitation to make our farmyards their home. In the mountains and elsewhere I have seen gourds like those Wilson mentions still attracting yearly their full quota of Purple Martins.

And that reminds me of other boyish contraptions that link the present day with times long gone. Nearly everybody has made a windmill and placed it on a barn or on a long pole. I have passed places within recent months where the yard contains a windmill for each of the several boys who lived there. Regardless of their lack of paint and sometimes a lack of balance, the windmills fluttered and turned in the wind as if they had real business to do; the tall windmill on a stock farm, pumping water from the well, could have done no better. What is almost as good to the one who recalls childhood efforts at creation is to see the mere stub of a windmill over a smokehouse or henhouse or stock barn, the mill itself having long ago been blown away. Every one of us had our windmills to do this very thing, I am sure; it was heart-breaking to take down the wing or tail or whatever it is left when the mill blows off.

Down by the brooks in spring and fall flutter mills still wobble along as in the older times. No other childhood plaything seems more poetic. Long before dams were made, I suspect, boys knew the force and power of water because of their flutter mills. Not to have made one is to have missed a joyous part of being a boy.

Nearly every boy I knew tried his hand at some device for saving labor, usually with lamentable results. There were things that would open the gate when you drove up, that is, they were supposed to open the gate. I recall how I invented a "burr-fighter," with which I whipped the cockle-burrs out of my way when I went across the fields in late fall. It was a clumsy mess of wire and probably damaged my clothes more than the burrs would have. I always wanted to invent a bed that would spill me out at the correct time, little realizing that another boy, of my father's generation, had already done this very thing. Rather oddly this boy became in later life our most eminent student of glaciers, John Muir; the invention took shape in his pioneer home in the Wisconsin woods.

THE CASE OF HENRY FORD

By George Peck

This nation is faced with one of two alternatives. Shall we encourage free private competitive enterprise or place business planning under the control of government? Under which of these two economies can we best bring about lasting and real prosperity?

Business men are actuated by two basic motives—fear and hope. Under free enterprise, hope for profit is the dominant motive. Under government control, the dominant motive is fear. Fear may deter us from taking possible harmful action but it also stifles initiative and prevents progress. On the other hand, hope spurs initiative and makes for progress.

All the evidence of history supports the choice of free enterprise over government planning and control. In emergencies government control may be temporarily necessary but should be abandoned immediately the emergency is over.

The case of Henry Ford is an outstanding example of the advantage of free enterprise over government control. Back in 1900, there were only 8,000 automobiles in use in this country and they consumed 80,000 barrels of oil, practically all of the oil available. That was an average of ten barrels per car per year.

Now, suppose at that time we had government control and planning, and further suppose that Henry Ford had advanced his plan to make one million cars per year. Any government planning board would have turned Mr. Ford down on the grounds that there wasn't enough oil to run so many cars.

But fortunately for Mr. Ford and for all of us, America was operating under free enterprise. Henry had hope and figured fully that if he manufactured the cars, someone else would find it profitable to produce the oil.

That is exactly what happened. Today there are 30 million cars in use in America and each of these cars is using 17 barrels of oil per year instead of 10. Further, that oil costs less than one-half as much as it did in 1900. And still further, in spite of the great quantity consumed, we have the greatest oil reserves in history.

This story is typical of many other pioneer industrialists. It is simply one more example of the far greater efficiency and progress which can be made under free competitive private enterprise.

"HOME IS THE WRITER . . ."

For a number of years in the more recent history of this republic, disillusioned by the aftermath of the World War and further dismayed by the impact of depression, many of our leading writers toyed with left-wing ideas that had their origin in the darkest corners of foreign lands. Then things began happening abroad that put a different color on these foreignisms, no matter how attractively they were packaged. And our really sensible authors beat a fast retreat and began to realize anew the virtues of our American system. They suddenly saw that this side of the Atlantic harbored by far the best and happiest life for the individual. In other words, to paraphrase Stevenson's verse, "Home is the writer, home from the sea. . ."

Eloquent testimony of this new appreciation of our own land is found in the following words from

A Year of Accomplishments

The year just ended was a record year of general telephone expansion in the South. Millions were spent to expand local and long distance facilities and other millions were expended for preparedness projects. At the same time, the numerous and varied governmental and industrial emergency needs were filled promptly.

Nearly 300,000 new telephones were installed and about 180,000 taken out, making a net gain for the year of more than 110,000. Sixty-eight new central offices were built and put into service. Twelve of these were new exchanges while fifty-six replaced manually operated offices with the newest type dial equipment. Rural sections also shared liberally in this program.

The gross expenditures for new construction and replacements exceeded $40,000,000.

It was a year of outstanding accomplishments achieved under exceptional conditions. The thousands of telephone men and women responsible for this work are justly proud of the results. They begin the new year confident in their ability to meet the future telephone requirements of this fast growing section of the nation.

one noted playwright, which scarcely need further comment:

"What of our own country? Ours is a vast, sprawling, young nation, composed of men and women of all conceivable racial origins, and all conceivable occupations and habits and points of view. We are by nature easy-going, happy, undisciplined and ornery. And yet—the building of America has been the most tremendously successful mass achievement in all human history.

"If efficiency is the same as effectiveness, then we are by far the most efficient people on earth.

Importance of Gardens Stressed By Goodman

The importance of home gardens in 1941 was stressed in a communication issued today to all Work Projects Administration workers by George H. Goodman, administrator. Mr. Goodman expressed the hope that, wherein it was possible, all of more than 35,000 workers would supplement their incomes by such endeavor and would immediately begin to lay plans in that direction.

WPA will not sponsor any garden program, he said, other than the program designed to furnish food stuffs for the WPA school lunch program throughout the state. Last year this program produced thousands of cans of commodities now being used to feed, free of charge, indigent children and give to them the energy needed for school work. The school lunch garden and canning program, Mr. Goodman said, would be enlarged for 1941.

"The government does not have the cash to pay for this defense program, but will have to borrow it from the people. Then in order to pay back these loans, it will be necessary to collect it from all the people by means of various forms of taxes. It may be a direct tax, indirect tax or both. This will, of course, increase the cost of living.

"As the price of food and of necessities of life advance, union and skilled labor will become dissatisfied and will demand higher wages. The manufacturer will have to increase the price of the product he is making so that he can pay the increased wage, and thus the consumer will have to pay higher prices for the things he needs.

"Another thing that will materially increase prices is that a big demand for all the implements of war will make a scarcity of raw materials and lack of manufacturing facilities.

"As the living problem of our people becomes more acute, the big question will be, how to meet these conditions and to live comfortably through trying times.

"Many of our people do not own farms or many own poor land and make little or no effort to raise crops, expecting to earn enough on relief work to meet all living costs. This plan may have worked poorly in the past, but the future holds no hope for such a course.

"Every family in Kentucky and Tennessee, well-to-do and poor alike, should raise a garden, and in this way nearly all of the table expenses for six months can be taken care of. You should plan for poultry in the spring, and a pig or two will be a good investment. A little effort, sacrifice and determination will make it possible in a short while for nearly every family to own a milk cow.

"It is urgent in this year of 1941, that we bend every effort to raise all we can for the table and if possible have a surplus for the market. What has become of the 'Old Timer' who buried in the ground each autumn, potatoes, apples, beets, turnips, and cabbage, to supply his family during the winter months?

"As sure as the sun shines, everything we wear and eat will advance in price, and the only way for our people to solve the living problem, is to raise something to sell or to eat."

McFadden Homemakers

The McFadden Homemaker's Club met Wednesday, Jan. 22, in home of Mrs. J. D. Moss. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. John Binkley, and the club sang "My Old Kentucky Home." Roll call was answered by "Why religious liberty is essential to us." Minutes of the last meeting were read and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. George Gordon.

At noon a pot-luck lunch was served to twelve members and four visitors. In the afternoon session old business was discussed, and Mrs. Thompson, home agent, gave the major project, "Make the Farm Feed the Family."

During the recreation hour Mrs. J. H. Burton led games and songs. The club will meet with Mrs. Marion Dawes on February 26.

BOY SCOUTS' FOUNDER

Although organizations of boys for outdoor activities had existed in the United States a few years earlier, the Boy Scouts as we know them today were first organized in England in 1908 by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, who died a few days ago at the age of 83.

The movement soon spread to this country, and the Boy Scouts of America received a charter from the District of Columbia on February 8, 1910. Daniel Carter Beard, a pioneer in scouting in the United States, is still active as head of the Boy Scouts of America at the age of 90.

Lord Baden-Powell was in the British army, and during the Boer War won great fame as commander of the small British force at Mafeking, which successfully withstood a siege of 215 days against a large Boer army. For this achievement he was promoted to the rank of major general at the age of 42.

In recognition of his service in founding the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides he was raised to the peerage. He was an author of note, as well as an explorer, a sportsman and a talented sculptor. His books were devoted largely to military and outdoor life, one of the best being his "Aids to Scoutmaster-ship," published in 1920.

The ideals of Baden-Powell were well illustrated by the principles of Scout oath and law: to be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent.

PITIFUL MUSSOLINI

Benito Mussolini, the once loud-mouthed Italian dictator, has now become one of the world's most contemptible and pitiful figures, and many predict that his downfall is probable within just a few months. His utter failure since Italy entered the war has shaken the confidence of his own people in his wisdom and military judgment.

The boasted strength of Italian arms, which appeared to be considerable at the time Mussolini stabbed France in the back last June, has been proved largely fictitious. His armies have been hopelessly beaten by little Greece and by the British in Africa. His navy has refused to fight, but has been partially destroyed in its home ports by British bombers and virtually driven from the open sea by the British Mediterranean fleet. His air force, although composed of thousands of planes, has been miserably ineffective.

Even if reinforcements from Germany should save Italy, it would only emphasize the impotence of Mussolini, and Hitler would doubtless take charge of Italian affairs, as German conquerors have done in former times.

Whatever happens, there seems nothing in sight for the Italian people but humiliation, disgrace and poverty. All this will come to a once great and respected nation because of the egotism and blundering stupidity of one man—Benito Mussolini.

HEAVIER TRAFFIC SEEN

Industrial expansion due to the gigantic preparedness program will create a demand for transportation never before approached, in the opinion of Harvey C. Fruehauf, president of the trailer company bearing his name, who predicts that in many parts of the country highway facilities will have to be increased to eliminate congestion and bottlenecks.

"With expenditures of several billion dollars for defense during the coming months, we can expect to find all of our facilities taxed to their utmost, and this goes for airways, waterways, and railways as well as the highways," says Mr. Fruehauf, whose statement continues:

"As manufacturers of commercial trailers, we have already been called upon to supply new kinds of vehicles for the army, especially tractor-trailers, which, with fewer vehicles, can move greater numbers of men and more materials at higher speed, while conserving power, fuel and highway space. This is particularly valuable behind fighting lines.

"In the event of damage to a load, the tractor is not lost, as it can be quickly detached and driven to safety. Should the tractor be damaged, the load can be saved by attaching another tractor. The detached trailer can be used as an ammunition or fuel depot, field hospital, repair shop, kitchen or field office while the tractor is free for other work.

"It is likely that the present war will result in tremendous advances in our conception of highways and great developments in the vehicles which operate over them."

A THREE-FLEET NAVY
While the United States will not have a satisfactory two-ocean Navy for about three years, its present naval strength will be organized into three fleets, and all vessels are to be manned at full war strength at the earliest possible moment.

For several years only a small portion of the Navy has been stationed in the Atlantic, but with new and reconditioned ships being added it is assuming proportions to warrant the designation of this force as the Atlantic fleet. It will be commanded by Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, now commander of the Atlantic patrol force, and will have about 125 ships.

The main fighting force afloat will continue to be known as the Pacific fleet, whose new commander will be Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, who succeeds Admiral J. O. Richardson as commander-in-chief. The Asiatic fleet, stationed in the Far East, will continue under the command of Admiral Thomas C. Hart.

Under the fleet reorganization plan, which becomes effective on February 1, the enlisted strength of the Navy is authorized to be increased from 192,000 to 232,000 men. To supply additional officers urgently needed, a considerable number of midshipmen at the Naval Academy will be commissioned in February, four months ahead of the usual graduation date.

Naval construction is progressing more satisfactorily than any other phase of the armament program, and the United States Navy will soon be the strongest sea force the world has ever known.

Many state legislatures will meet during the next few months. Already, proposed laws are being drafted.

People interested in the traffic problem in communities should see their representative about one very important item that should be included in a good state traffic code. That is the revocation of licenses where drivers are convicted of drinking or of driving while drunk. A politically-minded or weak court cannot help a community eliminate the causes of accidents, especially that of the drunken driver. State laws should require a judge, justice of the peace, or official charged with the administration of the law to revoke the licenses of drunken drivers.

When the licenses of drunken drivers are revoked, we shall have contributed something to the safety of persons who respect the rights of others.

The silence that accepts merit as the most natural thing in the world, is the highest applause.—Emerson.

WILLIAMSON-KOEHN

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Koehn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Koehn, and Joseph M. Williamson of Nashville, Tenn., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Williamson, was solemnized at six-thirty o'clock Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents on Eddings street. The Rev. Loyal O. Hartman, minister of the First Methodist Church, read the single ring ceremony before an improvised altar. Baskets of southern smilax and white gladioli were arranged in the room and white candles were lighted at either end of the altar.

Candles were lighted by Robert Koehn of Tuscola, Ill., cousin of the bride. Pre-nuptial music was played by Mrs. Steve Wiley and Mrs. Charles Gregory sang "At Dawning" and "Oh, Promise Me."

The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, wore her great aunt's wedding gown, an old-fashioned model of ecru silk faille, made with fitted bodice and long sleeves, and trimmed with imported hand embroidered lace. Her finger tip veil was fastened by a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white stephanotis and gardenias and her only jewelry was a pair of heirloom bracelets.
