definitions of rural service shared in recent years and have been modified to provide better access to services. The work that has led to this improvement has been driven by a strong sense of community and a desire to improve the quality of life for residents. The continued development of rural infrastructure is essential to ensure that all members of the community have access to essential services. This sentiment was echoed by Mr. Brown, who stated, "We are committed to improving the service to rural homes."

Defense Costly to Railroads, Too

One of the requirements of any future defense program is considerably increased rail transportation. In the long run, the demand for rail is increased greatly, and it is complicated by new equipment and new facilities which are essential for the future of the nation. The addition of service cars means increased freight and the necessity of hiring union teams operating night trains.

Newman industries are adding approximately 20,000 new freight cars this year. The Boston Central station has placed 210 new cars in service for the year and 4-21 cars are coming in. These new cars are expected to save money, and the money would be used for the addition of new cars for the construction of new equipment.

What does it mean to the future of the passenger? What is the rail to be used for in the future? The railroads have to be able to handle the increase in future traffic.
