Council Approves Ordinance Raising Privileges Licenses

Business owners in Murray will be required to pay 10 per cent more for privilege licenses if an ordinance approved on the first reading by the Murray City Council last night wins final approval.

The ordinance stipulates that the fees for all privilege licenses issued by the city be hiked 10 per cent, a move which finance committee chairman, Howard Koenen, said would bring in an additional $7,500 to city coffers.

It was pointed out that privilege licenses expire May 1 and that business and service firms required to purchase them are given until May 31 to renew their licenses.

Koenen indicated that his committee plans a full review of the privilege license ordinance as well as the total tax structure of the city. The committee will then recommend changes to the council.

The council authorized Mayor John E. Scott to sign a contract with the firm of Bards, Wagner, Summer and Cannon of Nashville which calls for the firm to develop a master plan for the joint operation of all recreational facilities in the city and county.

The contract, which must also be signed by county officials, was approved by the council, subject to review by the city attorney.

The planning firm forecast a 60-day completion date on the first phase of the project at a total cost not to exceed $8,000. A federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation grant, if approved, would pay half the $8,000 with the city and county splitting the remainder.

The development of the master plan will be the first step in the overall development of the jointly operated park on the Ryan property, north of Chestnut. Mayor Scott said that one of the first recommendations expected from the planners would concern the proper method of setting up a joint board to develop and operate the park.

The planners will incorporate all recreational facilities in Calloway County into the master plan.

City planner Richard Nash appeared before the council a requested permission to launch a campaign designed to inform the general public of existing laws governing building permits and zoning restrictions. Nash said that he had uncovered several incidents in the city where regulations set down in ordinances were not being followed and he felt the major reason was that most people were unaware of the regulations.

Tom Rushing, the council's member on the planning commission, read a letter from the commission recommending that the city consider installing pavement, curbs and gutters on Glendale Road from its present end east to Hwy. 121. The letter indicated that the present property owner was willing to dedicate the right-of-way to the city in return for the road being prepared. The council referred the action to the street committee for further study.

In other business, the council: —Approved a request from the airport board for $13,000 for improvements at the airport and took under advisement another request from the board for $6,000.

—Approved an ordinance rezoning a lot at 905 Sycamore from residential (R2) to professional office;

—Appointed John Youngerman, Rt. 7, Murray, to a three year term on the Murray-Calloway County Hospital Board on the recommendation of the Murray-Calloway Jaycees;

—Accepted the low bid of Parker Ford on the purchase of a pickup truck for the sanitation department;

—Commended Police Capt. James Witherspoon for his 20 years of service to the city on the police force.

White House To Provide Jaworski With Material

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced today it will provide special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski with the materials he has sought by subpoena.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler passed this word to newsmen hurriedly and without elaboration.

Three Killed In Accident Near Paducah Today

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — An Army sergeant from Nashville, his wife and a small child were killed today in a crash involving their compact car and a large truck about four miles from Paducah.

State Police said the accident occurred at the "Y" shape intersection of U.S. Highway 60 and old Hinkleville Road.

Sgt. Samuel L. Bradley, 28, his wife, Yank Sun, 35, and the child about two years old were trapped in their car and were dead at the scene.

Police said the Bradley car veered to the left at the intersection and ran into the path of a tractor and flat-bed trailer carrying a generator and scraper blade. The truck caught fire but the occupants, Larry Sparks of Arlington, Texas and Boyd Bashman of Grand Prairie, Texas, did not require hospitalization.

Traffic on the two-lane road was blocked for a time.

Cook Says Stans Admitted That He Lied To Grnd Jury

NEW YORK (AP) — G. Bradford Cook, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, says Maurice H. Stans admitted to him that he lied to a grand jury investigating a secret $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Moreover, Cook testified that Stans persuaded him to lie twice to the same grand jury to cover up the $200,000 contribution from financier Robert L. Vesco. But in a third appearance, Cook said, he decided to "tell it as it was."

A jury trying ex-Commerce Secretary Stans and former Neither the White House nor Jaworski have said what was sought in the subpoena.

There was no immediate opportunity to question the White House spokesman as to whether all of the materials covered in the Jaworski subpoena exist.

Earlier, White House lawyer James D. St. Clair and members of the special prosecutor's office agreed to meet this afternoon as the deadline approached on the prosecutor's latest demand for presidential files.

St. Clair and members of Jaworski's staff have negotiated daily since Monday, when the White House asked for a four-day extension of the deadline to respond to the subpoena.

All that is known about the subpoena is that it does not ask for evidence on the Watergate break-in and cover-up or the 1971 White House plumbers operation that resulted in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. Indictments have been returned in those two matters.

It is likely the documents sought by the grand jury through Jaworski bear on the handling of campaign funds.

On another subject, White House spokesman Gerald L. Warren said Thursday it was a matter of court record that tapes do not exist of conversations sought by the House Judiciary Committee which occurred after a recorder ran out of tape.

Warren did not make any estimate of how many conversations might not have been taped as a result of the machine running out of tape, but an analysis of the court documents indicated that perhaps five conversations were not taped.

On Jaworski's demand for additional documents, Warren said the subpoena "is under review and under consideration in the counsel's office."

When pressed on whether the President would comply, he would only say "the President has an abiding interest and dedication to obeying the law."

Neither the White House nor the special prosecutor's office would say what documents or tapes were subpoenaed.

New Energy Bill In Congress Should Lower Gasoline Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has begun work on a new energy bill that sponsors say should result in lower prices for gasoline.

The bill introduced Thursday by Sen. Henry M. Jackson and Rep. Harley O. Staggers replaces the energy-emergency measure vetoed by President Nixon on March 6.

Jackson's Senate Interior Committee will begin final work on the bill next week, bypassing the usual public hearings.

The bill would limit the ability of the large multinational oil companies to pass on to consumers the higher costs of imported oil.

Jackson said this provision should result in sharply lower prices for crude oil, perhaps as much as $3 a barrel below the current $10.50 price. He said this should bring lower gasoline prices.

The key element in the new bill would limit the ability of the large multinational oil companies to pass on to consumers the higher costs of imported oil.

Wildlife Official Denies Charge That Timber Harvest Is Harmful

GOLDEN POND, Ky. (AP) — A wildlife official at the Land Between the Lakes says it's not true that timber is harvested in the area in ways harmful to wildlife.

"Quite the opposite is true," Dr. Ray Nall, supervisor of the Wildlife and Management Section, said Thursday. "Our timber cutting practices are designed to help wildlife, not hurt it."

Livingston County Judge Floyd Hooks had issued a statement the day before criticizing "the cutting of nut and berry-bearing trees" that supply food for animals.

Hooks said the harvested trees were being replaced in some areas solely by evergreen and pine trees which won't support wildlife.

Nall explained that the timber harvest is distributed in small blocks through the area "to provide a variety of wildlife habitat."

Nall said a 1971 inventory indicated the Land Between the Lakes sustains $31 million board feet of saw timber, not including the additional 25 million board feet grown each year.

He said timber harvested by Averitt Lumber Co., Clarksville, Tenn., under a five-year contract, will amount to 2.5 million board feet annually, or 10 per cent of the annual growth. This also will be less than one-half of one per cent of the total timber volume, he added.

Nall said pine plantings are restricted to those needed for wildlife cover and erosion control. The small cover plantings range from 2 to 10 acres and are distributed at one-half mile intervals where cover is lacking, he said.

Nall said inter-disciplinary staff meetings are held at least six months before any cutting so the project can be reviewed. He added that "no objections were encountered" when the forest management plan for Land Between the Lakes was reviewed by wildlife management officials and conservation groups.

The senator refused to speculate whether the new bill could be passed over the opposition of the Nixon administration and oil-state representatives who were against the original measure.

Nixon's chief objection to the bill he vetoed was a provision forcing a rollback in oil prices. The new bill contains no such provision but would require the president to maintain rigid ceilings on the prices of oil and petroleum products.

With the exception of the oil-price question, the new bill is essentially the same as the old, Jackson said.

Gasoline Availability On Increase

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Motorists on major Kentucky highways will find more gasoline available and service stations open longer hours in the coming week, a survey indicates.

The weekly survey by the Louisville and Blue Grass automobile clubs showed 96 per cent of the stations on main roads expected to end the month with adequate supplies.

Of the stations polled only 7 per cent expected to be limiting sales, according to survey results reported Thursday.

Half the stations queried said they planned to be open this Sunday, compared with 42 per cent last Sunday.

The survey indicated 71 per cent intended to remain open after 6 p.m. and 38 per cent after 9 p.m.

Fuel is shortest in the Louisville area, the poll showed, with 71 per cent of stations in the metropolitan area planning to close on Sunday and 26 per cent continuing to limit sales to each customer.

School Board to Meet with City Council On Tennis Court Issue

A committee representing the Murray Board of Education will meet with the Murray City Council to further discuss proposed tennis courts on the Murray High School campus, it was decided at Thursday's Board meeting.

The decision was reached after discussion by the board concerning the courts, which had been proposed as a joint venture by the city and Board. Recent changes had been proposed which would place in question the control of some courts during the school day.

It was pointed out that the major objective of the schools is that of educating the students, and that serious consideration must be given before assigning part of the campus to others on a permanent basis.

In other action at Thursday's meeting, the board gave permission to the staff and faculty at Murray High School to conduct a self-study program, with the assistance of a joint committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, and the Kentucky Department of Education.

Principal Eli Alexander of Murray High School was recognized for the purpose of reviewing the program and staff of the school. Alexander explained at length the improved programs in special education, English, and science programs. He added that new programs are being considered for next year, including psychology, honors science, architectural drawing, bachelor living, honors math, and a class in jazz music.

Alexander also reported that the results of ACT testing programs show Murray High students with higher scores in both composite and individual categories than either the state or national averages.

The administrative staff for the Board of Education was also elected at the meeting, with Fred Schultz renamed superintendent; Preston Holland, athletic director and assistant superintendent; Peggy Wilson supervisor of instruction; Willie Jackson, director of pupil personnel; Ruth Lassiter, finance officer; Eli Alexander, Murray High principal; Robert Jeffrey, Middle School principal; and Dennis Taylor, Carter-Robertson principal.

A report was given on the recently-implemented breakfast program at Carter and Murray Middle Schools, and the board was pleased to note that the program is operating in the black, according to Supt. Schultz.

Discussion was also held on recent changes in the foundation program as a result of state legislation. The major changes discussed were elimination of some funds for special education and vocational education.

Nixon Predicted To Sign Wage Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of a bill to increase minimum wage rates set eight years ago predict President Nixon will sign it, even though it is much like one he vetoed last year.

The Senate and House in quick succession and by big margins Thursday passed the bill that would begin a series of increases May 1, eventually raising the minimum from the present $1.60 an hour for most workers to $2.30 for all.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon will not decide whether to sign the measure until the Office of Management and Budget reviews it. But House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona offered to bet reporters $100 that Nixon will approve it. It is a compromise between earlier versions.

The bill extends minimum wage protection to an additional 7 million persons, for a total of 56 million covered. Those brought in include 5 million federal, state and local employees and 1 million domestics.

The bill provides that full time students may be employed at 85 per cent of the regular minimum, but for not more than 20 hours a week and under regulations intended to provide that they do not displace regular employees.

Beginning next Jan. 1, police and firemen for the first time would be made eligible for overtime, under special rules allowing hours worked to accumulate over four weeks. The number of hours worked before overtime applies would diminish year by year. Police and fire forces of less than five would be exempt.

Rabid Fox Killed In Graves County; None Reported Here

A fox was killed Tuesday southeast of Mayfield. The head was submitted to the State Laboratory in Frankfort for examination and the preliminary report was positive for rabies.

Jerry Featherstone, Graves County Health Department administrator, said everyone should watch their livestock and pets, especially in the area where the fox was killed.

R.L. Cooper, Calloway County Health Department administrator, and officials here said there have been no confirmed reports of rabies from foxes killed in Calloway County. He said heads of foxes killed have been submitted for rabies tests, but they have all been returned as negative.

Featherstone said all pets which have not been vaccinated should be confined for ten days as a precautionary measure. He added if any livestock or pets show signs of illness the owners should call their local health departments.

NEW SIGN now in front of Calloway County High School as photographed by David Hill, Murray Ledger & Times staff photographer.

Happenings At Calloway County High School

By BRENDA OVERCAST
NEW LOOK

Not long ago, anyone unfamiliar with the surroundings of Calloway County could have passed Calloway County High School never knowing what significance it held; however, things have changed. A large engraved sign stating "Calloway County High School, Home of the Lakers" is now in the front of the school.

This is the first sign ever permanently constructed at the school.

The sign, approximately 10 x 40 feet and 1 foot thick, is a heavy solid stone mounted in a brick structure.

It took several days as bricks were laid for the mounting of the sign. The new sign has become a legend in its own time. Pictures have been taken of it, and people have had their pictures taken with it.

We, the students at Calloway County High School, are very proud of our new sign. It distinguishes our school from others and adds dignity to our front lawn.

Dish Garden

Easy To Build Fun To Watch

Dish gardens, plantings of small plants in open, shallow containers should be arranged to suggest a miniature landscape, says a University of Tennessee horticulturist.

"A dish garden is easy to construct but some attention should be given to watering and drainage," says James Pointer, assistant professor, UT Agricultural Extension Service. "If the container is deep enough, use one-half inch of gravel, sand or charcoal in the bottom of the container, then cover with enough soil to fill the dish."

The specialist also recommends selecting plants that have similar cultural requirements and look attractive together. He mentions, dracaena, dieffenbachia, peperomia, miniature date palm, peace lily, philodendrons, podocarpus, sansevieria and wax plants.

"When planting, spread the roots in the potting mix and be careful to set the plants at the same depth they were growing," adds Pointer.

Many modern homes have built-in planters. According to the specialist these planters should be waterproof and rustproof.

"To make the container waterproof or to prevent a toxic effect if the container is made of copper, it may be coated with asphalt emulsion," says Pointer. "Tar is toxic to plants."

If the built-in planter is deep enough, leave the plants in their original pots, and fill the space between the pots with sphagnum or peat moss. This system allows for rearrangement of the plants.

'The World I Want For My Child'

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

The first member of Congress to become a mother while in office is looking toward "the kind of world I want for my child." In an Ebony magazine article, Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke says of her daughter, Autumn Roxanne, "I hope that she will not be subjected to all the trauma that her father and I were in growing up in a racist society, but I would like to expose her to all of the wonderful things that are a part of being black — which I think are very important — and to make sure she knows all of the joys."

Mrs. Burke's maternal view of the future ranges from what she can do as a congresswoman in the public eye to what she sees as her role within the family: "I am going to at least attempt to pass on to my daughter some of the moral values that I have. I intend to give logical reasons for those values, for I feel compelled to justify my beliefs and patterns whether she accepts them or not."

This would set a good example for any parent. As a black parent, Representative Burke recognizes a particular challenge in the changing times: "The kinds of things we faced in my generation were easy to understand. Your parents said, 'They don't let you sit down here, they don't let you to that place —' Everybody knew. But now it is so complex, so frustrating to young people when they are led to believe that everything is fine, yet at the same time it is not fine."

A way to realize the best potential of change is through the understanding across racial lines recommended by Representative Burke. Going contrary to progress are revived efforts at segregation by white Americans and separatist trends among black Americans.

"Separatism and racial regression have historically gone hand in hand," writes civil-rights leader Bayard Rustin in a recent newspaper piece. "Separatism, in the guise of accommodation, followed the collapse of reconstruction. . . . Separatism has never meant reform." Mr. Rustin argues that the "danger of separatism" — manifested among black students at white universities, for example — is an issue "that needs to be driven home to society."

Not only institutions but individuals can do their part to keep understanding moving forward so that, when Autumn Roxanne Burke is of university age, America will be nearer the kind of world her mother and all Americans want for their children.

OVERCOMING HUMAN BARRIERS

Acts 8:18-31

Through the centuries there have been numerous human barriers to the progress of the Lord's work. Through God's enabling grace and power many of these barriers have been overcome, and still others will be.

Overcoming Barriers In Samaria 8:18-25

Conspicuous among those faithful Christians who were scattered from Jerusalem by bitter persecution was Philip the deacon who found refuge in Samaria, where he continued his witnessing for Christ. His preaching of the gospel was blessed abundantly by the Lord, and the people heeded unto the things which he spake. Informed about the progress of the gospel in Samaria, and desirous of knowing whether the professions of faith there were genuine or spurious, the apostles in Jerusalem sent two of their strongest men—Peter and John—to Samaria to inspect the work, and to give the genuine converts further instruction. Upon their arrival in Samaria, they prayed and laid their hands upon the believers, and the Holy Spirit was received by them.

Among those who saw the demonstration of the Spirit through these Christians in Samaria was Simon Magus, the sorcerer, who had made a profession of faith and been baptized, but had not been saved. He imagined that the power of the Holy Spirit could be purchased with money, so he offered to pay for that power, hoping thereby to regain his popularity and to make additional revenue by transmitting that power to others. Simon Magus was neither the first nor the last person to attempt to commercialize religion.

Indignant because of the attempt of covetous Simon to buy spiritual power, Peter unhesitatingly, immediately, and severely condemned Simon Magus for his obvious depravity and wickedness in wanting to exploit Christianity for personal financial gain. Convinced that Simon was only a professing Christian and not a possessor of salvation, Peter courageously and strongly rebuked him for his terrible wickedness, urged him to repent thereof, and pleaded with him to pray for divine forgiveness. Peter told him bluntly that his heart was not right with God, knowing, of course, that this condition accounted for his putting of self in the center of everything. The heart that is not right with God always causes the thoughts, motives, desires, words, and deeds to be wrong. Simon did not have any awareness that his request had offended the holy God, and that for that reason he should pray, personally, specifically, and earnestly for divine forgiveness. Simon Magus feared that suffering or punishment might be his lot on account of the request that he had made, and the avoidance of that was his only concern. The exceeding sinfulness of his expressed desire never registered with him, but he did go far enough to ask Peter to pray that he might escape any punishment for saying what he said and doing what he had attempted to do. He was fearful but not penitent.

Overcoming Barriers In The Desert—8:26-31

Just when Philip's evangelistic efforts were most successful and the prospects for the immediate future were most promising, the Lord commanded him to abandon his efforts and go south to a desert. Why should he leave a great revival in the city and go to a desert where there was not any prospect of success? This is a reminder that God's ways and man's ideas do not always coincide, but God always knows best and never makes a mistake. Without a word of complaint or a single excuse, Philip obeyed the Lord promptly, without knowing the real purpose of his journey, but certain that he was not going on a fool's errand. He reached the place to which he had been sent just in the nick of time. He saw a chariot coming toward him, and the Holy Spirit said to him: "Go near, and join thyself to this chariot." He ran to the chariot, ready and anxious to witness for Christ. Riding in that chariot was an Ethiopian eunuch, a man of great prominence, prestige, position, pomp, possessions, and power. Notwithstanding these facts, he was far from being satisfied.

While wending his way homeward, the eunuch was reading aloud Isaiah 53, which delineates the sufferings of Christ. With eagerness, earnestness, and enthusiasm Philip ran to his chariot and asked the eunuch if he understood what he was reading. Philip's face was so radiant and eager that the statesman felt at once that here is one who knows.

After confessing that he did not understand what he was reading, the eunuch invited Philip to enter the chariot with him. Troubled in heart, earnest in spirit, and eager to learn, this diligent seeker after the truth was thoroughly prepared to listen with an unprejudiced and open mind. Each was convinced that the other was the man that he needed. The Holy Spirit was working at both ends of the line. He had prepared and commissioned Philip to go to the eunuch, and then He saw to it that the latter was in such a state of mind and heart that he would receive the Lord's messenger and message.

When seated by him, Philip seized his golden opportunity by tactfully beginning with the very scriptures which the eunuch was reading and preached Christ to him. So earnestly and effectively did Philip present the gospel of Christ and witness to this man that he responded properly and promptly. Believing what Philip told him, he accepted Christ as his personal Saviour, whereupon his sins were forgiven and he was saved. Wasn't it wonderful that he received Christ as his Saviour the first time that he heard the gospel? How important it is for Christians to know the Word of God so thoroughly that they can explain its teachings effectively to those who do not understand the way of salvation! What a privilege Philip had that day! What a high and holy responsibility! If Philip had failed to witness to that man, doubtless he would have returned home without being saved. What a tragedy that would have been!

Freedom Suffers

Princess Ann and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, were the targets of an attempted kidnapping in London the other day, but the British people as a whole may turn out to be the real victims of this unsuccessful crime. Increased security for the entire royal family is sure to lie ahead, and when people who symbolize a nation and its traditions have to move around under heavy guard, the nation is all the poorer.

Kidnaping and extortion plots aimed at prominent persons and their families have become almost epidemic. This will exact a heavy toll in freedom and peace of mind for countless individuals around the world. It is intolerable that a handful of criminals, demented or moved by greed for money or power, can cast such a blight over the lives of so many.

Nixon and Cooperation

The decision by Judge John J. Sirica to turn over to the House Judiciary Committee the titillating satchel holding the secret report of the federal grand jury that indicted several former aides to President Nixon may be helpful to the committee — and a weary nation — in expediting impeachment hearings.

And other evidence assembled for the grand jury's consideration should also be helpful in guiding the committee's deliberations and satisfying public concern.

But Mr. Nixon's question and answer session recently with business executives at a Chicago meeting reemphasized the deficiencies in the President's personal response to his Watergate problems.

He changed nobody's mind on the question of his guilt or innocence of the myriad charges loosely packaged under the Watergate label.

Steadfast presidential supporters could cheer his adamant defense of his office and applaud his fighting rejection of suggestions that he resign.

But the Nixon critics will not now — nor will they ever — accept his protestations of noninvolvement without the documented evidence which he has implied exists.

Mr. Nixon may be able to support with logic his reluctance to turn over helter-skelter all the tapes and records sought by the House Judiciary Committee in its impeachment inquiry. He might be successful in winning court agreement.

But the doubts of a significant portion of the American population would not be erased. And the ultimate judgment on the President's immediate future and his place in history will be formed through public opinion.

Mr. Nixon's unhappy dilemma, disregarding the unresolved validity of the allegations against him, is largely of his own making.

His fumbling response to the Watergate revelations has from the beginning made him a target of suspicion. As a consequence, his motives — even those of obvious good intention — are questioned.

And it has become increasingly apparent to everyone — with the possible exception of the President — that the termination of the Watergate scenario can be achieved only through complete baring of all related facts.

A continuing debate over the committee's justification for demanding more material can only prolong the anxieties, the doubts and the domestic turmoil.

The president, even conceding the merit of his resistance, must take the step across the barrier to full cooperation. The country and historians, we are sure, will forgive him for the lapse in his defense of the presidential office.

Seen & Heard Around Murray

By James C. Williams

The Lord gave us all the privilege of choosing our way, right, wrong or otherwise. We wonder at times why we are not all gifted with the same ability to resist temptation, or to resist choosing the path of least resistance.

Up to now, we have only been in the present tense in Spanish, but next week we move into the past tense. This sounds simple, but it means learning a whole new set of verb endings. We also move into the past tense in German, which means ditto. Our poor mind is literally reeling with endings.

Makes us feel rather dumb. When we were in Mexico last summer even the little kids spoke Spanish. And when in Munich, Berchtesgarden and Salzburg even the little kids spoke German. Surely, we thought, if a little kid can learn it, we should be able to. At least, we knew more words in English than they did.

We hate to keep harping on the subject, but we must reiterate how well we have been treated in our classes at MSU. Instead of being looked on as some freak, we have been accepted as someone who merely wishes to learn the subject at hand. Of course this is as it should be, and merely proves that our original fears were unfounded.

The small Cedars that we transplanted to more spacious areas, are doing well. Looking at them this week in the bright sunlight, Joyce Kilmer's poem "Trees" came to our mind and we mused how true it is that "Only God can make a tree."

They were only about eight inches high when we put them out, having come up in a flower bed. Probably planted by the great tree planter, the Jay Bird. One shovel full of dirt contained the entire root system. One is hip high now and the other, planted a year later, is knee high.

We just like to watch things grow.

Watched Anthony and Cleopatra, in two hitches. Quite a production, however the producers took some liberty with history for some reason. Actually, Caesar placed Ptolemy and Cleopatra both on the throne of Egypt and she had her brother murdered. We wondered what happened to Caesar's son by Cleopatra and looked it up. Octavian had the child killed because he feared the magic of his forebears might precipitate some crisis, and he had enough to worry about.

Comments from Others

HUNTINGTON, IND., HERALD-PRESS: "When the Federal Government does things, it uses such a heavy hand that one sometimes wonders whether the Constitution is still in a viable state. Remember that part about state's rights? They dwindle farther and farther into the past. What brings such somber thoughts to mind is the . . . passage by the U. S. Senate of a bill calling for a 55 mile-an-hour speed limit across the nation in order to conserve gasoline supplies. In itself, the bill is admirable. . . the bill not only makes sense in that it would conserve gas, but it will probably conserve human life, too. The bad feature about the bill, exposing the heavy hand of the Federal Bureaucrats, is the tag line on the bill. The Senate warns that states not implementing the speed limit would face loss of federal highway funds. No effort to gain support through reason and logic! No recommendations from Federal Big Brother! Just the harsh warning that the States will obey or lose their road funds. The irony of the order is that those funds are not the Federal Government's to begin with. That money was accumulated from the pennies you and I paid out in taxes. . . the Federal Bureaucrats won't give us our own money back. That is no way to develop confidence in government. An urgent appeal for cooperation from state governments would be more in line."

CRIME

Police in San Francisco are hot on the tail of two burglars who they suspect may be gay. Not only do they manage to rip off the most valuable pieces in the victims' apartments, but they leave instructions on how to redecorate the place.

Waynesburg, Pa. — A Greene County man climbed a fire escape to get into jail. He only wanted to visit but ended up staying there. Sheriff Mark Shultz, whose living quarters are part of the jail building, was awakened by a sound outside his bedroom window. He said he found 26-year-old Joseph Hornick of Clarksville climbing the fire escape to get into his brother-in-law's cell. Shultz booked Hornick on disorderly conduct charges. (Democrat Messenger)

Edmonton, Alta. — A thief stole a car, then returned it to its original parking space when he discovered two small children in the back seat, police reported. (Edmonton Journal)

AN INVESTMENT IN YOUR FUTURE

ATTEND CHURCH

in power is God. How generously He deals with His world. All of our physical necessities are miraculously supplied by Him. He planned it so all wild creatures could live in abundance. He pointed us human beings to faith in God and challenged us strongly by citing the birds, "Your Father feedeth them." Then pause by the clear stream, take in the fresh air, examine the fruits of His fields and "Be Still and know that He is God." Just who among us would doubt that He gave us the soil, the seed and the sea?? He gave His church for congregating and praising The Lord. It is here He quickens our spirits by the revelation of truth and goodness and feeds our deeper needs with His love and grace. He is the matchless benefactor.

Companies Have Grown Used To Energy Savings

NEW YORK (AP) — The Arab oil embargo may be over but don't expect the place you work to return to the way it was.

Companies which turned down thermostats and turned off lights as emergency measures have grown used to the savings. Their employees have adapted, the firms say.

Large office buildings in the Northeast and Midwest report total energy savings up to 20 per cent, helped along by a mild winter. In some cases lighting consumption, if not the bills, have been cut in half.

Major industrial corporations say they have set out in earnest to eliminate energy waste. They say the economics makes sense. The cost of waste has grown too high. DuPont Co.'s energy consulting division reports a 300 per cent increase in business this year.

With proper conservation, industry could save a million and a half barrels of oil a day," says George Tunis, head of DuPont's applied technology division.

The nation consumes about 19 million barrels of oil a day.

"We figure we've cut our electrical consumption by 25 per cent since November and our steam consumption between 40 and 45 per cent," says Donald Odell, vice president of New York's Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., whose offices hold 12,000 people each day.

Metropolitan's conservation steps included turning down thermostats to 68 degrees, taking out every other light bulb in corridors, cutting down their number of elevators in service, and "just making sure people turn off the lights when they leave," says Odell. "From a company point of view the people have accepted it."

"I doubt we'll ever go back the way we were. You learn that you can get along."

Frank Ward, who helps manage First Chicago Corp.'s massive center in the Loop, says the building has saved about 30 per cent in electricity compared with a year ago. The building, in which 11,000 persons work is all-electric.

"If the employees get used to the lighting they have now, then there's no need to go back," Ward says. Presently the building's lighting load is off 50 per cent.

The energy cutbacks were not taken initially to save money. As one government official says in Washington: "We're trying to save energy, not dollars." Most companies have found their savings washed out in higher utility and fuel oil bills.

But some have profited, and all agree they would lose by going back to former levels.

"We estimate that our cutbacks are saving us nearly $25,000 a month," says one building manager who asked to remain anonymous.

Corn Yields Not Hurt When Nitrogen Is Used

Farmers who cannot obtain enough nitrogen for their 1974 corn crop before planting time may be able to make up the shortage by sidedressing later on. Corn yields are just as high when nitrogen is applied as sidedressing as when it is applied at or before planting time, according to Lloyd Murdock, extension soils specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"The most efficient use of nitrogen is made when it is sidedressed," Murdock points out. "Corn plants use very little nitrogen during the first 30 days after planting. Nitrogen which is applied at planting is subject to leaching during those first 30 days."

How late can nitrogen be sidedressed and still produce high yields? "It may be later than you think," says Murdock. He cites a test where equal amounts of nitrogen were put on different corn plots, with times of application ranging from planting time through the ear development stage. Even when all of the nitrogen was applied as late as tasseling time, there was little or no yield reduction. "Of course, if sidedressing is not done until tasseling time and then there is no rain for several weeks, yields will suffer," notes the UK specialist. "However, the study did indicate that sidedressing late in the growing season can be successful."

Murdock also points out that airplanes can be used for applying nitrogen after corn is too tall for sidedressing with conventional equipment.

Will more nitrogen fertilizer be available after the big spring planting rush? "We can only speculate about this," says Murdock. "The supply of natural gas available for manufacturing nitrogen fertilizer may increase as warm weather reduces the need for home heating fuel. Also, the demand for nitrogen fertilizer should be less concentrated after the planting season."

Even if you plan to apply most of the nitrogen for your corn as sidedressing, Murdock recommends using 20-30 pounds of nitrogen per acre in the starter fertilizer at planting time if it is available.

Oil shortage spurs wildcatters

By JAMES CARY
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — They're mavericks. An independent breed. Gamblers. They work hard and take chances. They're the wildcatters of America's oil industry, and on their shoulders rests a major part of the nation's hopes for the new domestic oil discoveries that will one day ease the energy shortage.

But right now, with a massive new boom in oil exploration beginning to roll, the wildcatters are snarled in a complex web of shortages — of tubular steel, drilling rigs and competent personnel skilled in sinking new wells.

Nevertheless, all the ingredients necessary are currently present for a return to the wildcatters' former days of glory.

In the mid-1950s, his numbers were legion, an estimated 20,000, but now they are down to 10,000, severed in half by imports of foreign oil and a domestic oil-gas price structure that has, until recently changed, made wildcatter increasingly risky and all too often unprofitable.

Yet these independents of the oil business still operate 350,000 small or stripper wells in 27 states, each producing only 10 barrels of crude or less daily, but adding up to a very important total of one-eighth of the over-all production of the United States.

The true importance of the wildcatter lies in the fact that he is the frontiersman of the industry, the pioneer who carries out 75 to 80 per cent of the nation's oil exploration.

The big strikes are usually quickly sold to the major oil companies for ready cash, but they don't happen very often.

For eight of nine holes drilled are dry, and each, dry or not, costs an average $76,540 of investors' money, or at least did in 1971.

Only one in 50 is considered a commercial success, while about one in 1,000 is a major strike that produces 50 million barrels of oil or more.

The decline of the wildcatters is measurable. In 1956, some 16,000 exploratory wells were drilled in the United States, most of them by wildcatters, at a cost of $2.5 billion.

In 1973, only 7,435 new wells were drilled at a cost of less than $1.2 billion. Of those, 5,965 were dry.

Now wildcatters are on the move in increased numbers again — the smell of oil and money in their nostrils — but even their own organization, the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA), thinks they will be lucky if 10,000 new wells are drilled in 1974.

Although that is a sizable increase the number would be far greater if all the equipment needed could be obtained, particularly tubular casing and drill pipe.

The Federal Energy Office (FEO) estimates 156 million feet of new well shafts will be drilled in 1974, requiring 1.75 million tons of oil industry tubular goods. Manufacturers are scheduled to produce 1.85 million tons — a very tight demand-supply ratio.

Federal energy chief William Simon summed up the problem — past and present — this way in a recent address before the National Association of Home Builders:

"We have consumed an ever-increasing amount of oil and gas at prices well below their replacement cost, and today we confront a long overdue bill for past self-indulgence."

It is because foreign oil shipments have been seriously curtailed, because the price foreign producers are demanding has become exorbitant, and because domestic prices permitted for new oil or from stripper wells have now risen well beyond replacement cost, that the wildcatter is on the threshold of a new day.

Businessmen Favor Elimination Of Social Security Differential

Once again independent business people take the position that there should be no differential made between rich Social Security beneficiaries and poor Social Security beneficiaries.

This is evidenced in the result of a nationwide poll conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business on a bill by Congressman Bob Wilson of California which would permit a beneficiary to earn up to $3,600 per year without losing benefits.

The vote was 83 per cent in favor, with only 15 per cent opposed, and 2 per cent undecided. In Kentucky, the vote was 80 per cent for, 18 per cent against, and 2 per cent undecided.

As the law now stands due to the new change, a beneficiary can earn up to $2,400 per year from employment without losing any of the benefits. Over that limit the beneficiary is penalized. However, Social Security beneficiary can have an unlimited extra income from dividends, interest, real estate, or other investments, and continue to collect the full benefits. This has resulted in some millionaires drawing full Social Security.

This class discrimination has long been considered by the independent business people as one of the major paradoxes in the Social Security system.

When originally passed in 1936 it was presumed that on the living costs of that time, the planned benefits would support a retired person. In addition, an attempt to solve a social problem of the times, the unemployment of the depression, was involved by putting a limit on permitted earnings to encourage older people to retire to open jobs.

Since that time the impact of inflation has made it impossible for the retired to live on Social Security, but the Social Security Administration now takes the position the intent of the law was not to provide a living income, but a supplementary income.

Proper Care Leads To Healthier Calves

Newborn calves which are healthy and thrifty make a lot more money for their owners than calves which are sickly or dead. You can increase the chances of a calf being healthy and thrifty by taking good care of the calf and its mother, notes Curtis Absher, extension beef cattle specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Absher says this care should start before the calf is born. The cow should receive supplementary vitamin A in her diet throughout pregnancy. This helps produce a stronger calf at birth and makes more vitamin A early in life, they are born without this vitamin stored in their livers. Vitamin A is necessary for the healthy of the delicate membranes, such as those in the eyes, nasal passages and intestines. It also helps the calf ward off scours. Some cattlemen inject vitamin A into the muscle of newborn calves.

Calves have a better chance for survival and good health if the mother was vaccinated for lepto and IBR and received other vaccinations which the veterinarian recommended. This should have been done before the calf was conceived. A severe case of lepto may result in an aborted calf, while a milder case may result in a calf which is weak and listless.

Being born in an environment which is as germ-free as possible increase the chances of a calf for survival and good health. On most farms, the best place for calving is a sod field with a few trees to serve as a windbreak. Barns are difficult to clean and often serve as a harbor for bacteria and viruses which are detrimental to the health of the calf.

After a calf is born, its navel should be disinfected with tamed iodine. This helps prevent infections from entering the body-infections which can cause white scours, swollen joints, as infected naval area, and other maladies.

The calf should get colostrum as soon as possible after birth. Colostrum is high in food value, vitamins and antibodies needed to ward off disease. However, the quality of colostrum and the ability of the calf to make use of the colostrum begin to deteriorate soon after birth.

Castration is most easily performed when the calf is young. Right after the calf is born is as good a time as any to castrate, according to Absher. He says any additional weight gains made by bull calves is offset by the shock of castration at older ages. A clean, sharp knife should be used for castration, and conditions should be sanitary. Castration can also be performed with elastrator bands or burdizzo clamps.

It is important to make sure cows shed their placental membranes, or afterbirth, soon after calving. If a cow has not "cleaned" within 36 hours, contact a veterinarian. Absher says a veterinarian should be the one to clean the cow, because infections can be spread and the cow's reproductive organs can be damaged if it is not done properly.

Some cattlemen are concerned about the milk level of a high-producing cow being more than the calf can take, and may feel the cow should be milked. Milking a beef cow can be a difficult ordeal, and may also be harmful to the cow, according to Absher. He says the cow will adjust her milk flow to the requirements of the calf. Milking may damage or bruise the udder, and may introduce mastitis organisms into the teat canals. The only case where milking might be beneficial is when a teat is extremely ballooned and needs to be let down enough that the calf can nurse, Absher points out.

Cows need adequate levels of energy, protein, calcium and magnesium in their diet after calving. Cows need to be fed enough that they will be gaining weight during the breeding season. For many productive cows, this means twice as much feed after calving as before calving. Heifers which have calved for the first time need to be put into a separate lot and fed extra grain if they are to calve at the same time next year.

Magnesium Diet Gives Protection For Tetany

This is the time of year when grass tetany threatens to strike cows grazing lush young grass on Kentucky farms. Cows which are nursing young calves or are very near calving are most susceptible, according to Curtis Absher, extension beef cattle specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Absher says young grass or small grain pasture growing on a field which tests high in potassium or has received a heavy application of nitrogen is most likely to produce tetany. Changeable, cool weather increases the probability of tetany. Older cows are the most susceptible to the disease—it seldom strikes first-calf heifers.

A farmer may not realize grass tetany has stricken a cow until he finds her dead, since the disease runs its course rapidly. Early symptoms may include a stiff gait, staggering, and loss of appetite. Stricken cows often isolate themselves from the herd. As the disorder progresses, the cow may become very nervous, sometimes having muscle tremors and breathing rapidly. Death can occur less than an hour after the first noticeable symptoms.

Supplemental magnesium in the diet of the cows is the best-known insurance against tetany losses, Absher points out. For herds in areas where there have been limited occurrences to tetany, a salt-mineral mixture containing 15-20 percent magnesium should be provided. In herds which have a history of tetany problems, force feeding 1.5-2.0 ounces of magnesium oxide to susceptible animals may be necessary. This can be done by sprinkling magnesium oxide on ground feed or silage, or by feeding two pounds per head per day of a grain-magnesium oxide mix containing seven percent magnesium oxide.

Absher says keeping cows off young grass until 4-6 inches of growth have accumulated helps prevent tetany. Continuing to feed cows hay or grain during early spring will also reduce the chances of tetany striking.

Additional information on grass tetany is contained in UK extension publication ASC-16.

Defense Rest In Undercover Narcotics Case

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — Attorneys for 10 undercover narcotics agents accused of terrorizing Illinois households with the gal drug raids rested their case after presenting a brief defense from secret grand jury testimony.

Seven federal officers and three St. Louis policemen are charged with violating the rights of 11 persons in six raids last April in and near Collinsville, in southern Illinois.

During the 11-day-old trial, the prosecution sought to show the officers illegally entered and searched homes, acted in reckless disregard of the rights of others, physically and verbally abused suspects, ransacked homes and, in one case, held an innocent man without charge for 77 hours.

"The defendants believed no one, nothing, their homes or their privacy, could stand in their way," U.S. Justice department prosecutor John Conroy said.

The defense admits that twice the agents raided wrong addresses. But in each incident they had enough probable cause to make warrants unnecessary, never acted with criminal intent and conducted no illegal searches, their attorneys say.

Young drivers have more traffic accidents

Young drivers are still involved in traffic accidents in numbers far disproportionate to their ratio to licensed drivers as a whole, reports the Travelers Insurance Co.

In 1972, almost 20,000 drivers under 25 were killed in auto accidents.

Nicklaus And Barber Lead At New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, (AP) — Miller Barber said he could have shot a 62 as easily as his 66 in the first round of the $150,000 Greater New Orleans Open Golf Tournament, but he wasn't at all disturbed about missing.

Nicklaus and Barber, who tied for the lead after the regulation 72 holes of this tournament a year ago — Nicklaus eventually won in a playoff — again matched six-under-par efforts on the 7,080-yard Lakeview Country Club course.

They held a one-stroke advantage over a group of seven players — headed by Lee Trevino and Australian Bruce Crampton — tied at 67 as the warm, almost windless weather contributed to some extremely low scoring on the layout that was still wet and heavy from Tuesday's torrential rains.

In all, 67 players in the field of 150 broke par 72. Trevino, who missed only one green and chipped in for birdie there, and Crampton were tied with one shot out of the lead just one shot out of the lead.

South African Gary Player was in a large group at 68. Tom Weiskopf had a 70 despite continued troubles with an ailing thumb that sent him in search of medical help.

Johnny Miller, winner of four titles and almost $150,000 already this season, was paired with Nicklaus, had a 71 and said he "just hit too many grunkles." He grinned, declined to explain a "grunkle," and said, "You figure out how to spell it."

Arnold Palmer is not competing.

Major League Preview

Twins Hope Youth Is Going To Be Big Help

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Manager Frank Quilici thinks the youth program of the Minnesota Twins is ready to begin paying dividends in the West Division of the American League.

The Twins are coming off a third-place finish in 1973, with uncertainties regarding Harmon Killebrew and Tony Oliva, but with confidence of more experience.

"We had a very young team last season," said Quilici. "Our players had to learn to play together while they were finding out if they belonged in the major leagues."

"You could see the change in our club last season. It wasn't the team in September that it was in April ... it was a lot better."

Among the youngsters Quilici is counting on are Eric Soderholm, centerfielder Steve Brye, catcher Glen Borgmann and a group of young pitchers, including Joe Decker, 10-10, and Bill Campbell, 3-3.

However, to become a contender again, the Twins need the power of Killebrew and Oliva. Killebrew, recovering from knee surgery, dislocated a shoulder in spring training and his comeback is in jeopardy.

Oliva missed most of the 1972 season with knee miseries, but came back in 1973 with a .291 average as the team's designated hitter. His gimp knees restrict his movement on the bases when he does get on.

Minnesota's strength is its hitting. Rod Carew won his third American League batting championship last year with a .350 average. With others such as Jim Holt's .297, Oliva's .291 and Steve Braun's .283, the Twins led the majors in hitting.

Quilici would like his hitters this year to cut down on their strikeouts and provide more clutch hits. Outfielder Bob Darwin has struck out almost 300 times in his two years with the club.

The Twins should be steadier on defense this year with Brye in center, Soderholm at third and Randy Hundley, acquired from the Chicago Cubs during the offseason for George Mitterwald, as catcher.

Danny Thompson will be trying to come back from assorted injuries at shortstop. If not, the Twins are looking closely at rookie Sergio Ferrer. Jerry Terrell, a .265 hitter as a rookie, is a capable utility man.

Holt, rookie Craig Kusick or Killebrew will share the duties at left field, joins Holt, Brye, Darwin and Hise vying for places in the outfield.

More questions confront Quilici on his pitching staff. He has no proven lefthanded starters and 23-year-old Bert Blyleven was the only standout with a 20-17 log. Ray Corbin, Decker, Campbell and young southpaw Vic Albury show promise and veteran Bill Hands, 7-10, looks like he could regain form which made him a 20-game winner with the Cubs.

The bullpen is yet another problem. The Twins haven't had adequate firemen since Ron Perranoski and Stan Williams combined to save them West Division titles in 1969 and 1971.

Tom Burgmeier was obtained from the Kansas City farm system and appears to be the leading candidate for critical-bulldog duty.

Still, Quilici remains the optimist. "We've got the nucleus of a fine ball club," he says.

Madlock Rampaging As Cubs Win Another Game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

For a rookie, Bill Madlock is as relaxed as they come. It's the pitchers who have to face him who are starting to tense up.

Madlock, who was acquired in a trade with the Texas Rangers and who is supposed to make the Chicago Cubs forget Ron Santo, has a 14-game hitting streak and an out-of-sight springtime batting average of .592. That's .592, folks — 49 at-bats, 29 hits.

Thursday, Madlock ripped two doubles and two singles and stole home in the ninth inning for the final run in the Cubs' 4-1 exhibition baseball victory over the California Angels.

The only trouble is—that if Madlock's erratic glove work continues, he may also field .592.

Meanwhile, the rawest rookie of them all made his debut Thursday. While Madlock is good-hit-no-field, Oakland's Herb Washington is no-hit-no-field. All Washington does is run.

The A's inserted the world class sprinter from Michigan State to run for Joe Rudi at first base in the fifth inning. Cleveland pitcher Milt Wilcox promptly balked him to second and Washington breezed home.

Clarke's Hat Trick Key For Flyers' Tie

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Bobby Clarke tried his hat trick on for size and said it fit real well.

"This one was just as important as the one last year against Montreal," said Clarke, whose three goals gave the Philadelphia Flyers a 3-3 National Hockey League tie with the Atlanta Flames Thursday night.

"When I had my first hat trick last year against Montreal, my third goal won the game, 7-6. We were fighting for second place at the time, so that was a big one."

"But tonight we were trying to clinch first place, so this win felt just as good," Clarke added.

Elsewhere in the NHL, the Chicago Black Hawks and Buffalo Sabres skated to a 2-2 tie and the Los Angeles Kings dropped the New York Islanders 4-1.

In the World Hockey Association, the Toronto Toros nipped the Edmonton Oilers 6-5 in overtime; the New England Whalers edged the Cleveland Crusaders 3-2 and the Quebec Nordiques whipped the Los Angeles Sharks 9-3.

Black Hawks 2, Sabres 2, tie Rick Martin's 47th goal of the season with five minutes left in on Reggie Jackson's single.

Unfortunately, Washington's run wasn't enough to prevent an 11-5 loss to the Cleveland Indians. Dave Duncan's three-run homer in the first inning was the Indians' big blow and loser Ken Holtzman also surrendered a two-run homer to Charlie Spikes.

The injury bugaboo struck the Philadelphia camp when slugging left fielder Greg Luzinski tore the palm of his hand on a cyclone fence and may miss the Phillies' opener a week from Saturday.

The Phils didn't miss Luzinski Thursday, though. Bill Robinson, another outfielder, smashed a two-run homer to provide a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Two more veterans bit the dust in roster moves. Pitcher Chuck Dobson, trying to come back from arm surgery two years ago, was placed on waivers by Oakland and the Cincinnati Reds did the same with outfielder Larry Stahl.

Outfielder Leron Lee, who hit .300 with the San Diego Padres in 1972, was sold to Cleveland and the California Angels shipped outfielder Ollie Brown to Houston.

The New York Yankees wish Texas would get rid of Jeff Burroughs. For the second time in a week, Burroughs delivered a grand slam to knock off the Yankees this time by a 7-4 score. The hard-hitting outfielder has six spring homers and 22 runs batted in.

Jerry Reuss scattered 10 hits in pitching the Pittsburgh Pirates over the Chicago White Sox 6-1.

Fred Patek hit a grand slam and Buck Martinez cracked a solo shot as the Kansas City Royals raked Jim Palmer, Baltimore's 1973 Cy Young Award winner, for 11 runs in five innings and clobbered the Orioles 14-3.

The Cincinnati Reds rapped Detroit's Mickey Lolich and John Hiller for 12 hits, seven of them for extra bases, and clubbed the Tigers 8-1.

Claude Osteen scattered six hits in eight innings and the Houston Astros blanked the Boston Red Sox 3-0.

The Montreal Expos exploded for six runs in the eighth inning on Ron Fairly's bases-loaded single, Jim Cox' double and Pepe Mangual's three-run homer and outslugged the Minnesota Twins 15-10.

The New York Mets scored five runs in the eighth inning on RBI hits by John Milner, Cleon Jones, Brian Ostrander, Don Hahn and Wayne Garrett and defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3.

Dave Hilton's bases-loaded single in the 10th inning carried the San Diego Padres past the San Francisco Giants 4-3 for their sixth straight victory.

Joe Stecher Dies

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — Joe Stecher, 80, former world heavyweight wrestling champion, died at Veteran's Hospital earlier this week.

Forced to retire from the ring in 1934 because of ill health, Stecher had been a patient here for about 30 years.

A native of Dodge, Neb., Stecher claimed the world title by defeating Charlie Cutter at Omaha in July, 1915.

Funeral services are pending in San Francisco, where his widow now resides.

New Head Coach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Douglas Porter has been named head football coach at Howard University, the school announced Thursday.

Porter succeeds Tillman Sease, who has retired.

Formerly head coach at Mississippi Valley State, Porter has been offensive backfield coach and assistant athletic director at Grambling since 1966.

Wohlford probably will be the regular left fielder.

Left field was left open by the trade of Lou Piniella to the Yankees. Wohlford played with the Royals in 45 games last year and spent the rest of the season at Omaha in the American Association.

McKeon finds himself in a position that other managers would relish. He's faced soon with trimming the squad, and this may be his biggest headache.

The Royals boss has already decided that his four starters will be Paul Splittorff, a 20-game winner in 1973; Steve Busby, who tossed a no-hitter as a rookie last season; Patten and Briles. Briles suffered a knee injury before the spring training grind opened and may not be ready to pitch at the start. If not, Al Fitzmorris will step into the rotation.

"There's no reason that Busby can't win 25 games," asserts McKeon. "He won 16 last year. Now he knows the hitters, his control is better and he has confidence in himself."

The big guns in the bullpen will be McDaniel, who had a 126 record and saved 10 games for the 1973 Yankees, and Doug Bird, who carved a 44 mark and had 20 saves.

The infield that made 192 double plays, the best in the AL since 1956, is back intact, first baseman John Mayberry, second baseman Cookie Rojas, shortstop Fred Patek and third baseman Paul Schaaf.

Fran Healy is the catcher. Almost Otis has no peer among center fielders in the AL, McKeon notes. He also hit 26 homeruns.

'Maverick' Producers Air New Pilot Show

NEW YORK (AP)—Producer Roy Huggins and James Garner, who teamed up in 1957 to give the nation the tongue-in-cheek "Maverick" series, are at loose again with a new show that also hope becomes a hit series.

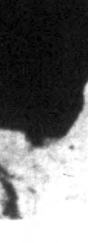

Despite this plot, the show was liberally sprinkled with funny, offbeat little things that often gave it the sly "Maverick" touch.

If the show becomes a series and the impression exists, Messrs. Garner and Huggins could find themselves with another winner on their hands.

strangling, then seemed to take forever before the traditional Great Chase got under way.

Garner played a gumshoe who, as it turns out, has done five years behind bars for an armed robbery he didn't commit. He now tries to solve cases police list as "unsolved-in-active."

Into his life steps a comely young lady (Lindsay Wagner) who wants him to find out who killed her widowed father, a wino we saw done in at the start of the show. The murder is in the "unsolved" category.

She isn't dismayed by Garner's $200-a-day-fee. "Money doesn't happen to be my problem," she crisply informs him. "I can hire a platoon of people like you." And she writes him a check.

It is at this point I begin to like the show. He runs a credit check, the cad, and learns her hopes exceed her bank balance. But no matter. It turns into love at second sight and detection on the installment plan, the latter leading to a wealthy young widow whose 68-year-old millionaire husband has died on the wedding night.

ANN MILLER, Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Rosemary Clooney are spotlighted on "Grammy Salutes Oscar," special spotlighting music from the movies, Saturday, March 30 (9:00-10:00 p.m., CDT) on the CBS Television Network.

Hugh Downs Turns Producer For Documentary on Barnstorming

NEW YORK (AP) — Hugh Downs has become a producer in a flying scarf. A broadcaster from California.

The movie was filmed last summer with a fleet of five biplanes built in the 1920s when barnstorming — taking adventurous citizens for a quick hop around the pea patch — was in full and glorious bloom.

The jet-age barnstormers did the same thing, starting in Weeping Water, Neb., and ending a month later in Rio, Wis. They were surprised to find that they'd even turned a small profit.

spring, is sort of a plot's answer to 'The Endless Summer,' a popular surfing documentary of a few years ago. Bach, who co-produced the film, "assembled all the pilots and got a marvelous crew," little town — then you fly the fleet over," he said of the modern recreation of flying's good old days.

Publicizing the flights was done as in the early days, he said. Parachutists tumbled from planes, mock dogfights ranged and aerobatics ran rampant as curious crowds trooped to the landing field.

Those who would be among the eagles and had $3 in cash were taken aloft for a short ride, Downs said, "and the funny thing is that we were claiming to be the only anti-inflationary force in America."

"When Glenn Curtiss started barnstorming after World War I, he charged $15 and Charles Lindberg, in the 1920s, charged $6."

The barnstormers, Bach among them, weren't on salary. "Bach felt that would have destroyed the spirit of it, so they all took one per cent of the movie," Downs said, referring to a percentage of the film's potential earnings.

Then they had to live off of what they made. The theory was that if you didn't get people up in the air, paying for rides, you couldn't buy your hamburgers. You went to bed hungry under your wing.

That didn't happen, he said, "so Bach really proved that he was right — ~~that~~ barnstorming, which died in the 1930s when the banks closed, could be revived."

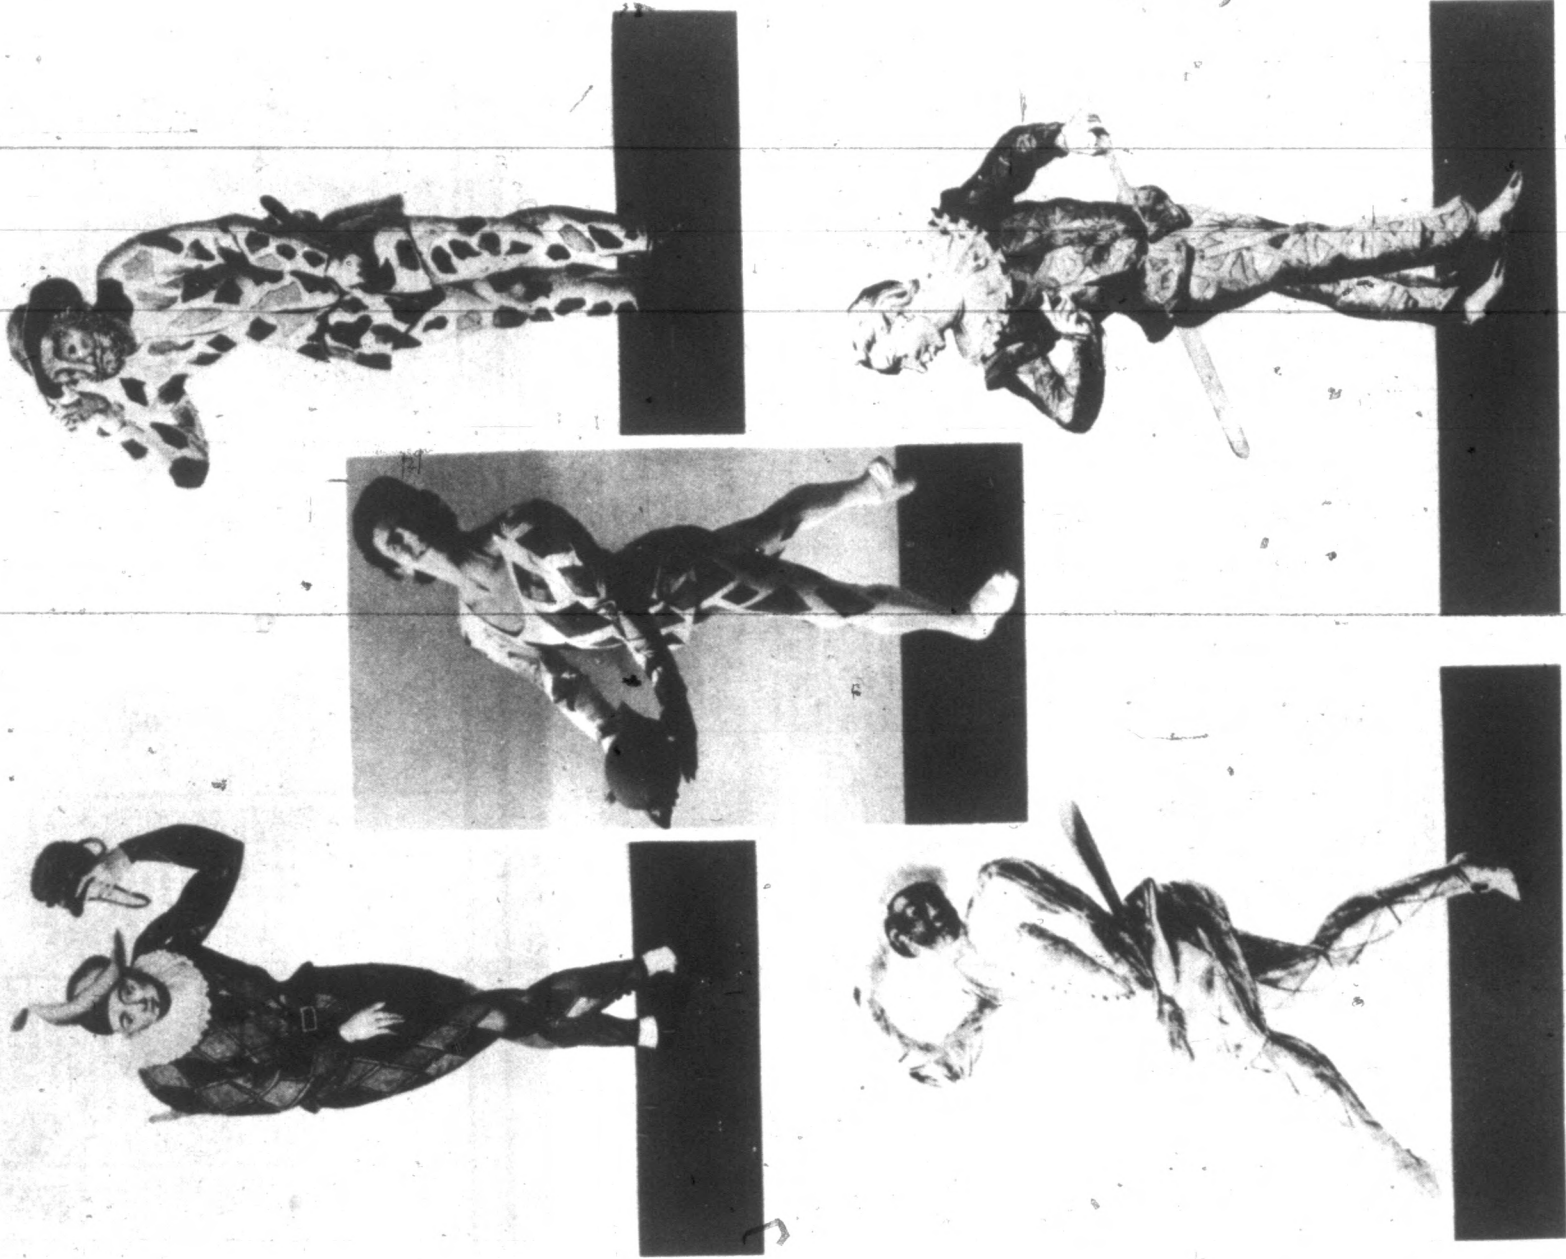

Downs thinks the movie will make money. But he isn't putting all his eggs in one cocktail. He's hosting a one-hour ABC special Sunday that's based on "Variety," the show-biz bible, and hopes it'll become a regular weekly series next season.

He's also, serving as executive producer on a new television talk-variety show, starring Lena Horne, that will be syndicated soon.

AFTER MATT DILLON (series star James Arness) is shot in the right arm, he resigns as marshal and comes across Lem (Dennis Reffeld), an Army deserter, on "The Disciple," episode of "Gun-

WASHINGTON — It may be small consolation to every driver impatiently waiting in line at a gasoline station, but the United States has a wealth of domestic energy resources. Unfortunately for those impatient drivers, some of the most promising sources are as yet untapped — and, in some cases, undiscovered.

Some of the more promising sources for fossil fuels include the Alaskan oil fields, the outer continental shelf and the oil shale and coal lands of the western states. Most of those resources are located on public lands — owned either by federal or state governments.

Here are the estimated resources in those areas, the locations of the fuels, some of the problems which must be overcome for development and the outlook for each:

ALASKAN OIL FIELDS: The oil discovered on the North Slope of Alaska in 1968 includes at least 10 billion barrels of recoverable petroleum, and perhaps as much as 30 billion barrels. In addition, the largely unexplored nearby naval petroleum reserve contains another 10 billion to 33 billion barrels.

Now that Congress has given the OK for the Alaska pipeline, the major problem remaining is actual construction of the 789-mile project, expected to take at least three years. It will have a capacity of two million barrels a day. The oil in the petroleum reserve is set aside for use in a military emergency.

If Congress were to approve of tapping the reserve for domestic needs, it still would require a multibillion-dollar investment, and probably construction of another pipeline.

OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF: The U.S. Geological Survey estimates that the potential recoverable petroleum resources in the OCS out to a water depth of 200 meters is about 200 billion barrels and the recoverable natural gas is about 850 trillion cubic feet.

The OCS already is a significant source of domestic oil production — 18 per cent in 1971 — with most coming from the Gulf of Mexico and some off the coast of California. Other favorable locations are the Gulf of Alaska and the Atlantic Coast particularly near Cape Cod and Delaware Bay. The oil spills in the Santa Barbara Channel and in the Gulf of Mexico spotlight the greatest problem in tapping the OCS. The industry claims that offshore drilling and production technology have greatly improved since then. No exploratory drilling has been conducted off the Atlantic OCS, so further research is necessary. In addition, the courts must settle a dispute between the federal government and some coastal states over who holds the sovereign rights over seabed resources.

President Nixon has ordered stepped-up leasing of OCS lands, although none of the areas in the Gulf of Alaska or off the Atlantic Coast will be leased until completion of an environmental study. If the study is favorable, it still takes five years to bring either of these two areas into production.

OIL SHALE: The U.S. Geological Survey estimates that up to 600 billion barrels of oil may be obtained from oil shale lands in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming.

Major problems include disposal of the tailings which result from oil shale processing, because they have a greater volume than the original ore. Processing also requires huge quantities of water, a factor which in itself may limit production.

Some technological problems must be overcome, but the industry must believe they can be solved, as evidenced by the bidding when the federal government leased its first tract earlier this year. Standard of Indiana and Gulf Oil bid $210 million to lease 5,120 acres.

In all, six tracts will be leased — two in each of the three states — during the first six months of this year.

COAL: The U.S. Geological Survey estimates that between 200 billion and 390 billion tons of coal have been identified and are recoverable, making coal the nation's largest fuel source.

The Rocky Mountain region has vast resources of coal close enough to the surface to be strip-mined, with low-sulfur coal particularly abundant in Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota and South Dakota.

The problems associated with coal include the devastating impact on the land of strip mining and the air pollution caused by burning the fuel. Coal, too, may require huge quantities of water.

Coal production, virtually stagnant for several decades while homes and industries switched to cleaner-burning fuels, may be on the road to recovery. But Congress is yet to act on the strip-mining legislation it has been debating for several years. Although those four domestic fuel resources are plentiful — each may produce more energy than is available now from proved domestic reserves — the spigot can't be turned on immediately. Oil from newly leased land on the continental shelf of the Gulf of Mexico is at least two years away. North Slope oil won't hit its peak for at least half a dozen years. Major production of coal and oil shale are even further off.

So — for the moment at least — it indeed is small consolation for that motorist waiting in line with his gas-hungry car.

Company Spokesmen Say Oil Shortage Unplanned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil company spokesmen have told a Senate committee that the current oil shortage was not planned.

Executives of Exxon Corp. and Standard Oil Co. of California said their companies spent billions during the 1960s exploring for more oil despite the developed capacity throughout the free world to produce more oil than was needed.

The testimony was given to the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multinational corporations Thursday, at the end of two days of hearings on partnership arrangements between major American oil companies in Saudi Arabia and Iran.

George T. Piercy, Exxon vice president, said his company spent $2.4 billion in the United States and $1.6 billion on overseas oil exploration during 1964-73.

G. L. Parkhurst, retired Middle East coordinator for Social, said that in addition to expanding production in the Middle East, Social spent more than a billion dollars in the United States and conducted exploration programs in 20 other countries during the 1960s.

Parkhurst defended the joint ownership of Arabian American Oil Company in Saudi Arabia by Exxon, Social, Texaco and Mobil as "the most dramatic overseas American enterprise which has even existed."

He said that to break up the four-company ownership to permit Aramco to sell oil to anybody as suggested by subcommittee chairman Frank Church of Idaho would "destroy a great American enterprise."

He said the four companies independently compete with each other in selling Aramco oil in world markets and independently estimate their market needs as a basis for Aramco production expansion. Social, he said, has resold oil to 22 per cent of its Aramco oil to as many as 45 independent companies.

Fuel crisis a boon to chimney sweeps

A boom in chimney sweeping has developed as Americans return to long unused fireplaces for heating because of a shortage of fuel oil.

One Boston firm has increased its staff of chimney sweeps from the usual two to 18 men and two women, a Pittsburgh firm has a team of 200, a third more than usual, and a crew of chimney sweeps in Philadelphia is working five days a week instead of two. — CNS

Disappearance Of Patterson Kept Secret For Five Days

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — The disappearance of American Vice Consul John Patterson was kept secret five days because the ransom note contained a death threat, another American diplomat reported Thursday night.

"That was the main reason we didn't want to break this, because they said if this was published they would carry out the threat," the source said.

Patterson, 31, disappeared last Friday after he left the United States Consulate in Hermosillo with an unidentified man for a livestock meeting. The U.S. Embassy in Mexico City announced Wednesday that he had been kidnapped, and sources in Washington reported a ransom note demanding $500,000 and signed by the People's Revolutionary Army of Mexico had been slipped under the consulate door.

American officials said the U.S. government would not modify its policy of refusing to pay ransom for its employees. But Consul-General Elmer E. Yelton said Patterson's 28-year-old wife "has made every possible effort to follow instructions contained in the ransom note."

"Mrs. Patterson has received no word from her husband or third parties," he said.

Odd-Even Gas Ration Plans Coming To End

By small steps and great leaps, the great American gasoline numbers game of 1974 is coming to an end.

It started in Oregon when gasoline shortages were at their height and quickly became known to millions of motorists on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts as "odd-even gas rationing."

Now, with the end of the Arab oil boycott, the plan is being dropped in South Carolina, the District of Columbia, New Jersey and at least one Connecticut city and one California county. There are some holdouts — Oregon notable among them; but officials elsewhere say they're thinking too of dropping the system or relaxing its provisions and enforcement.

Other states preserving the plan undiluted include Massachusetts, Washington, Maryland and Delaware.

The plan, adopted in one form or another in part or all of more than 15 states, was to limit gasoline sales to odd or even days — or different days of the week — depending on whether license plates ended in odd or even numbers.

Actually, it never was a true rationing system. It was a way to allocate limited supplies to cut the panic that had caused lines at gas pumps. In most cases it didn't limit the amount of gas a motorist could burn, only the days on which he could buy it.

The predictions were labeled as scare talk by Secretary of Agriculture Butz and other administration farm officials.

They said the wheat supply is tight, but no shortages were imminent.

Christian Group To Give Concert Sing and Tell

Sing and Tell, a Christian Folk Group from the First Baptist Church here in Murray, will present a concert at First Baptist Church, 203 South 4th Street, Sunday, March 31, at 6:30 p.m.

The group has just returned from a tour, having sung in churches in Florida and Georgia.

Sing and Tell, an extremely talented group of university students, was organized as an outreach unit of the music ministry of the First Baptist Church, according to Rev. Richard Walker, church pastor.

Tax Refund Checks Could Be Delayed If Returns Late

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The director of the state income tax division, William R. Reed, warned Thursday refund checks could be delayed two to four weeks if Kentucky returns are not filed by Monday.

Despite the possibility of delays, Reed suggests Kentuckians not rush their computations and make careless errors on returns.

About three-fourths of Kentucky's more than 1 million taxpayers will likely be receiving refunds this year but fewer than half the taxpayers have filed.

Reed says married couples cheat themselves out of potential refunds by failing to file separately.

He notes husband and wife may use the same form for filing.

Although by law, the state has until July 15 to make refunds without interest, Reed says a refund is usually processed in about six weeks.

Those who get caught in the last two-week crunch, says Reed, can't expect to get their money in less than eight to 10 weeks.

If you made an error on your return, add another two weeks to that.

Bakers Say Bread Will Not Be Short

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Bakers Association reported today there will be no national bread shortage this summer.

Earlier, the association had warned that exports were draining the U.S. wheat supply and that consumers might be without bread before a new crop is ready this year. Also, the bakers said, bread prices could soar to as much as $1 a loaf.

The predictions were labeled as scare talk by Secretary of Agriculture Butz and other administration farm officials.

They said the wheat supply is tight, but no shortages were imminent.

The Nixon administration told Congress it will not ask for legislation waiving environmental impact statements for energy projects.

They said the wheat supply is tight, but no shortages were imminent.

Policeman Says He's Learned Lesson From His Ordeal

CHICAGO (AP) — "The ordeal of indictment and trial taught me a lesson I'll never forget," says a former Chicago policeman found innocent of shaking down taverns for kickbacks.

James Psichalinos, 31, and two other former officers found innocent of the charges talked Thursday about what it was like to live on the outer edge of the law.

"If you ever charge a man with a crime, you've got to be very, very sure the charge is justified," Psichalinos said. "I enjoyed police work, but I have serious doubts that I'll try to go back on the force."

The other former officers cleared of the charges Tuesday were James Gartner, 36, and Eugene Manion, 45, the father of 11 children.

They were among 61 officers indicted in a scheme that involved an alleged $275,000 in kickbacks. The investigation has resulted so far in 47 convictions and a dozen acquittals.

Manion, an 18-year veteran of the force, would like to return and is to have a police board hearing in May. Since his indictment eight months ago, work has been scarce. He was fired from one good-paying job but was hired temporarily as a security officer of a supermarket.

"When that jury acquitted me, the first thing I did was phone my wife — she is hospitalized mainly with exhaustion from worry," said Manion. "I cried. She cried. And I called my daughter in the hospital where she is recovering from an eye injury. And she cried."

"Then I went home and my other 10 children cheered when I walked in. They said the cheers were pre-arranged and were ready because they knew I was innocent."

Manion said his friends stuck by him throughout the ordeal and his family drew closer together than ever before.

"After living a decent life, it was tough being on the other side of the fence. Right now I'm very tired. This has taken a lot out of me," he said.

Gartner said he didn't lose any friends after the indictment "but I couldn't find any good jobs and just did odds and ends...Thank God my wife's teaching job was not affected."
