EVERYONE knows who and what Thomas A. Edison is and nearly everyone knows who and what the United States Navy is. But few people know who and what the United States Navy and the United States are.

This being so, we shall attempt to explain in this article what the United States Navy is and what the United States Navy and the United States are.

First, let us consider what is meant by "the United States Navy." The United States Navy is a military branch of the United States government, responsible for sea-based military operations.

Now, let us consider what the United States is. The United States is a country, consisting of 50 states and a federal district, with a total population of approximately 333 million people.

In the context of your question, the United States Navy is a branch of the United States military, which is an armed forces of the United States government, consisting of the United States Army, the United States Navy, the United States Air Force, and the United States Marine Corps.

The United States Navy is responsible for protecting the nation's interests on the high seas and in international waters, as well as engaging in military operations and exercises on land, in the air, and at sea.

The United States government is the national government of the United States of America, responsible for creating and enforcing laws, providing public services, and conducting foreign policy.

The United States government is divided into three branches: the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. The legislative branch is made up of Congress, which is composed of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The executive branch is headed by the President, who is assisted by the Cabinet. The judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court, which is the highest court in the land.

In summary, the United States Navy is a military branch of the United States government, responsible for sea-based military operations, and the United States is a country consisting of 50 states and a federal district, with a total population of approximately 333 million people.
