Although Secretary of State Hull in his inaugural address last Thursday night outlined the major objective of the new administration, his nearer-term objectives were not outlined in detail. However, it can be predicted that the following subjects will be given the attention that was accorded to the major objective of bringing about a world-wide settlement of the existing troubles which may lead to another world conflict in the future.

One of the chief aims of the new administration will be the promotion of disarmament. This has been, and will continue to be, a major objective in the new administration's policy. Hull has already indicated that he believes that the United States should contribute to the reduction of armaments and that the United States will do so.

Another major objective is the promotion of world peace. Hull has already indicated that he believes that the United States should contribute to the maintenance of world peace, and that the United States will do so.

Finally, Hull has already indicated that he believes that the United States should contribute to the development of international cooperation, and that the United States will do so.

Is an aviator, having had considerable flying experience, and it appears likely that he may also throw the football around this summer in Belleville, Ill. Coach Mills, who had the championship football team in West Kentucky last season, does not take any stock in the more or less general belief that the new coach might be more or less general out to prove that he can make his football team better. It appears that the term of the superintendent of athletics is planned for him to teach ground-school football. The superintendent of athletics holds that football was a good sport when played properly.

The superintendent of athletics held that, under the present system of football, it is impossible to train the players properly for the game. The superintendent of athletics held that the present system of football does not provide the players with the necessary training to make them effective in the game.
