HARDINGS OF GLUMS WERE WRING

It will be remembered that certain hardships of glumness have made little impression in all but terrible breakdowns in rail transportation more than a year ago and it will be noted that the Archives of American History

Government's program of ensuring the war economy has been a success in preserving the integrity of the United States and the Allies in general and the United Nations in particular. The immediate goal is to reduce the production of war items to an extent that will permit the resumption of civilian production.

HARDCORES OF GLUMS WERE WRING

The President's recommendation for the abandonment of all labor protests has not found favor with the workers. The President's proposal to cut in the government budget is also being strongly opposed. The President's proposal to increase the consumer taxes will be resisted by the pub-der.

AGE IS ONLY SKIN DEEP

This old house is a picture of age. But it has a life of its own.

It has lived through many changes over the years. From a small cottage to a beautiful home, it has been loved and cared for.

The old house has a story to tell. It has seen many generations come and go. It has witnessed the joy of family gatherings and the sorrows of loss.

Despite its age, the old house still stands strong. It has weathered many storms and has faced many challenges. But it has always remained true to itself.

As long as we take care of it and love it, the old house will continue to be a symbol of age and beauty. It will continue to be a treasured possession that we can all be proud of.

There will be a dedication of the new Sunday School building on Monday evening, February 27.

RAILS HUM APACE to win the war

Railroad people are not given to much talk. Their disposition is to do their job—right, and let the results speak for themselves. That would be a good rule for all of us to follow in a time like this, a time of war, when the seed is for action fast and discussion later.

In keeping with that thought, railroad workers have been busy with more things than the movement of armed forces and war materials, which of course is the major part of what they are doing. This is work that is being scrupulously observed.

However, it is no secret that many a secret is in the first seven weeks after Pearl Harbor the railroads moved millions of individual soldiers, sailors, and marines on furloughs. At the same time, they were meeting the vast needs of war production by transporting great quantities of materials for planes and tanks and ships and other vital instruments of war.

All this was done so smoothly and efficiently that nobody had to go without necessary transportation. And nobody had to go without necessary transportation.
