The Farm That Wouldn't Sell

By H. L. L. SLOBAIRD

Every reader has heard of the farm that wouldn't sell.

Not that there was anything wrong with the farm; it was a finely built, beautifully planned structure. The owner was a man who had worked hard for years to make his farm a success. But for some reason, the farm just wouldn't sell.

The owner began to wonder what was wrong. He had put in a lot of work and money into the farm, and he was determined to make it sell.

But, no matter what he did,

the farm just wouldn't sell.

Finally, the owner decided to consult with a real estate agent. The agent listened to the owner's story, and then said, "Well, Mr. Owner, I think I know what's wrong.

Your farm just won't sell because it's a confounded good farm."

The owner was startled. "But

why doesn't it sell?" he asked. "It's a fine farm with a lot of land and a good building."

The agent replied, "Well, Mr.

Owner, it's because it's a confounded good farm. It's too good for its own good."

The owner was puzzled. "Too good for its own good?"

The agent explained, "Yes,

Mr. Owner, I mean that it's too good. It has everything that a farm needs, but it's too good. It's too well built,

too well planned, too well equipped."

The owner was impressed by the agent's explanation. "I see," he said. "I suppose that's why it won't sell."

The agent nodded. "Yes, Mr.

Owner, that's exactly why it won't sell. It's too good for its own good."

The owner was relieved. "I see," he said, "and I think I know what to do."

The agent asked, "What?

What do you think you should do?"

The owner replied, "Well,

I'm going to sell it."

The agent was surprised. "But

Mr. Owner, you just told me that it's too good for its own good. Why are you going to sell it?"

The owner said, "Because

I've decided that I'm going to sell it, regardless of whether it's too good for its own good."

The agent was impressed by the owner's determination. "I see," he said. "Well, Mr.

Owner, I wish you luck."

The owner said, "Thank you,"

and he went on his way.

The farm that wouldn't sell

proved to be a good farm, after all. It was sold, with all its good qualities intact.

And the owner was happy, because he had sold his farm, regardless of whether it was too good for its own

good.
On the other side of the lake was the pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Roy D. Taylor.
