BEHIND SCENES IN AMERICAN BUSINESS

PERILOUS—Most notable quote of the week was this, by Senate Military Affairs committee member after hearing seven high-ranking government officials, in closed session, spell out the rubber situation: "actually perilous from a military standpoint." These, the strongest words yet uttered on the subject, were given firm backing by the action of officials in urging the Senate committee to recommend the most drastic step that has been proposed in the U. S. toward commandeering physical property and hurrying it into the war drive, namely the legislation authorizing requisitioning of autos and tires. Admittedly it's the need for saving rubber that lies behind the car-requisitioning proposals. Some members said they expected "nothing drastic" in the way of requisitioning in the near future, but can't paste it in your hat that the threat of drastic measures is definitely here "from now on."

PARTING OF WAYS—Apparently we've reached the stage where still-expanding industrial production—almost all of it war work—can no longer produce similar gains in retail business. While heavy production hums, retail trade for several weeks has fallen steadily behind the pace it had maintained ever since the days when the upswing was called a "defense boom." National department store sales gains have run merely 15, 13 and 8 per cent ahead of corresponding 1941 weeks, lately—and this means less actual movement of goods across counters because prices are about 19 per cent higher, on the average. Some stores say the customer slow-up was especially noticeable right after the OPA price-freezing order, as though shoppers were waiting for the May 13 reductions. But those reductions will scarcely be worth waiting for, probably averaging out to less than one per cent.

TIPS ON THE TIMES—United Aircraft, which itself has passed back $26,000,000 in savings on government war jobs after achieving mass-production economies, reports further savings in voluntary kick-backs from its subcontractors, one of which is cutting the price $2,250,000 on one airplane engine part alone. "Production soldiers" of industries are leaping into action right alongside "regulars" to help service equipment and keep motorized units rolling in high. Road service men Willys-Overland have been dispatched to Army training centers throughout the country to train soldiers as "trouble shooters" to keep the fast, hitting Jeeps in top condition. The instructors were originally road service men for the Willys auto, which uses the same basic power plant as the Jeep, but had special training from the auto company's engineering experts who develop the standard design Jeep for the armed forces. Three Pennsylvania coal mines, abandoned for years, have been re-opened, and a new one is being dug in Kentucky.

REMOTE PATROL—Far from the ocean-prowling U-boats whose extinction soon will be their assignment, Navy sub-chasers are to be turned out, ultimately at the rate of one a week, by the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing company's new shipyard rising up on the shore of Lake Michigan near Chicago. These will be the first all steel anti-sub patrol craft built in the Midwest. Other Great Lakes yards are turning out the regular wooden ones, 110-footers, but the Navy needed a company with long experience in working heavy steel and these 50 sleek, diesel-powered avengers will be built by workers who in peacetime pioneered modern streamlined trains. Although almost all present employees of the car works will work on the ships, several thousand men will have to be engaged from outside and trained in shipbuilding crafts. It was pointed out that many skilled workers, including welders, riveters, electricians, pipe and frame fitters, sheet metal workers, joiners, painters, plumbers and cabinet makers are readily adaptable to shipbuilding.

THINGS TO WATCH FOR—Clothes made from peanuts. W. B. Jester, president of the National Peanut Council, says they are a definite early future prospect, and that you won't be able to tell the difference between "peanut wool" suit and one made of Scotch woolens. Rubberless but nevertheless elastic-topped socks for men. At least two new ideas in glass jars for home canning, requiring no rubber sealing rings. A gift candy box in large disc shape, the cover of which is, in effect, a phonograph record that can be played.

BITS O' BUSINESS—American tanks with thicker armor plate than axis tanks and deadlier armament, are now rolling off production lines at Baldwin Locomotive works at three and a half times the rate by War Department officials a year ago! A standard harvester-cutter of Papee Machine company has been adapted as a guayule-harvesting machine. One is already at work on a plantation near Salinas, Calif. where the rubber bearing shrub grows. (That has almost no effect, however, on the immediate rubber problem.)

BACKLASH—Deeper and deeper bites the backlash of war, into even the most modest of the nation's 1,700,000 retail stores. Thousands of things you wouldn't think of as "war materials" at all actually are needed in tremendous quantities for some war role or other—dainty things like window curtains, or novelty items like playing cards. Storekeepers, even of stores which haven't been hit directly by auto, or gas, or typewriter, or bicycle, or pots and pans curtailments, are constantly finding their "education" broadened with respect to the materials and machinery behind just such items as these, and many others. Taken as a whole, the nation's retail stores face the problem of "making up for" durable goods which last year aggregated $15,000,000,000 worth of their $54,000,000,000 total sales.

All things whatsoever ye would that men would do to you, do ye even so to them.—Bible. Events of great consequence often spring from trifling circumstances.—Livy.

TRAFFIC RULES

By RUTH TAYLOR

In one of his prophetic tales of the future Kipling envisioned a world ruled by the Aerial Board of Control, whose law was that there were no laws "except what interferes with the traffic and all that it implies."

That is what this is—an attempt by an organized gang of road hogs to interrupt the traffic of the world. And this is one thing we cannot and will not endure.

In some respects it is immaterial that the Japs waged war upon us. The end would have been inevitable. We must be able to send our ships to Malay and Singapore. We could not and cannot let the Japanese or any one else bar our ships from the seas. We could not and cannot permit an infringement of our rights to free passage to any part of the world.

Unless we keep the sea lanes open, we will have to change our manner of living. We will have to set the clock back and halt the progress of civilization. It will cost us a lot of money to win this war—but it will cost us a lot more to lose it.

What is the answer? There is only one. We must put out every effort and win this war. That is the first task and one to which every man, woman and child must devote himself if the way of life we call American is to endure. Then will be the time to win the peace, and to set up a workable way of life for the world.

We must compromise with evil. That would be both weak and wrong. But we must strive in every way to reach a state of mutual cooperation and a willingness to work together. We must do this not only between our nations and those other nations who place the rights of man above the right of the state—who, in short, subscribe to the four freedoms—but among ourselves. We must see to it that our minorities are so assured that their rights are not to be overrun, that they do not need to give a thought to anything except the main purpose for the moment—Victory.

It isn't as difficult as it sounds. We have already worked it out in our handling of the steady stream of cars pulsing along our highways. Traffic rules are designed not to take away rights from anyone but to adjust these rights so that all may have them.

When we set up and enforce similar rules for world problems, then we can keep the peoples of earth free to go about their business, the law-abiding protected and the reckless drivers barred forever from the roads.

These Neighbors of Yours Spent Over
$2,047,285
of Their Pay In Kentucky Last Year!

FOLKS: Today there are 1,138 men and women employed in our company. Last year they got $2,047,285 total salaries and wages. They spent practically all of it with local merchants in small Kentucky towns . . . for food, clothing, fuel, rent, education, medical and dental care, etc. Thus it helped to provide jobs for many other people.

These employees are your neighbors, fellow church members, Legionnaires, Rotarians, Kiwanians, etc. Eight out of ten of them were born in Kentucky. And these employees—not some group in Wall Street—really are the Kentucky Utilities Company. They are responsible for better electric service you get at lower rates year by year.

By putting politics in business, politicians plan to wreck this organization and destroy the company. They aim to substitute political management and all its evils for business management.

Political management of one kind of business sooner or later means political management of other kinds. It is un-American in principle. It spells the end of free enterprise.

Steamer President at Hickman June 3rd

The Steamer President, largest steel open-deck passenger steamer on the Mississippi, will open the 1942 excursion season at Hickman on Wednesday, June 3rd, with a moonlight dance trip to be presented under auspices of Elks Lodge No. 1294 of Hickman. The steamer will leave the wharf at 9:00 p.m.

In announcing plans for the moonlight dance trip, Dan Aquino, Chairman of the Elks excursion committee, called attention to President Roosevelt's recent suggestion that 'baseball, motion picture and outdoor amusements continue as usual' during the war as a means of 'aiding home-front morale.'

The President will be the only steamer coming to Hickman this year, and the June 3rd excursion is the only one this Spring, as the Steamer Capital is being kept in service at New Orleans.

Dancers are promised a real treat in the sensational rumba rhythms and novelty tunes featured by Johnny Mack's 11-piece dance band on the President.

THE COMMON DEFENSE

The Love of Liberty

The familiar propaganda line of the Nazi is that only a small minority in every country has opposed Hitler's racial creed and his plans for human enslavement. We can challenge that assertion and the challenge cannot be answered because in America, as everywhere else, it is the people who love liberty, not just a few of them. We, and people everywhere, resist Hitler because we will not accept tyranny. Love of liberty and staunchness of spirit in the face of oppression is not the characteristic of any minority. It is a human characteristic, as the peoples of many races and many tongues in America very well know.

The small minority, first singled out for persecution in the conquered lands across the sea, has been imprisoned and exiled. It cannot protest. But the protest of other oppressed groups is nonetheless strong on that account. Norway is seething with revolt. France will not accept the Nazi yoke. Czechoslovakia, Holland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Hungary are full of trouble—trouble for the Nazis.

Of course, it must be so, for men love liberty because they are men, not because they belong to certain racial, religious or cultural groups. The Nazis know that better today than they did before December 7. They are going to know it better still as the days unfold. They are going to know that love of liberty under democracy in this land is American—that from coast to coast Americans of all religions and all races are determined to keep their self-respect and their freedom.

In June, 1941, Hitler, said "I prophesied correctly. Already you see our racial creed is finding roots in one people after another." Yes, Herr Hitler, you prophesied correctly. You knew that you would find a few supporters in America as you found your Quisling in Norway, your Laval in France. You say that you won their allegiance to your racial creed. You bought their allegiance. But you have not won and you cannot buy the Norwegian people or the French people any more than you have won or can buy the American people.

You have prophesied in vain, Herr Hitler. You have prophesied to the wind. Now, prophesy again, Herr Hitler. Prophesy and say that the whirlwind is coming, full of the stored-up wrath and righteous indignation of all the sons of freedom. Think not to say within yourself, "Have Quisling in Norway, and Laval in France, and some few like them in America; they will help me." There is no help in them now that can save you from the whirlwind, for only destruction awaits you here, Herr Hitler.

Fishing Good In Kentucky Waters

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Anglers throughout the state of Kentucky are showing signs of pleasure at their "fishing luck" for the month of April in the public waters of the state, S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated today.

Reports from every section of the state indicate fishing has been good in all public waters to the state during the month of April and is continuing good in the Navigable waters open to pole and line (also rod and reel with artificial bait) fishing during the month of May.

All waters of the state will be open again to fishing on the first day of June, Wakefield pointed out.

War Plants To Employ Larger Numbers Women In Vital Production Jobs

Knoxville, Tenn.—Officials of the Aluminum Company of America revealed that a large number of women would be employed in the company's aluminum sheet fabricating plants here.

The reason, they explained, is that from now on the draft will make it difficult to retain men who have been trained to do the various jobs. The company has been asking and obtaining deferment for trained and partially trained men, but there is considerable doubt that it will be able to do this in the future.

As a result, officials have made a survey of their plants to find out what work women can do, and they are prepared to employ a large number of women from Knoxville and the surrounding Tennessee area to do inspection work and to perform other light tasks.

The experience of the company is shared by others visited by newspapermen on the "Production for Victory" tour of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The Glenn L. Martin Company at Baltimore has employed about 4,500 women in its aircraft plants, and expects to employ more. Officials say that in certain jobs they are better than men.

HITLER'S COFFIN IS ON AMERICAN PRODUCTION LINE FULLER SAYS

New York City—"Today the roaring machines in our war factories are playing a mighty battle hymn of planes and tanks and guns. The power of American industry has been turned against the Axis." That is the message Walter D. Fuller, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, gave in his recent address before the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

Asserting that days of sacrifice are ahead, Mr. Fuller said, "Modern war already has brought shortages of goods and materials, rationing of tires, gasoline, sugar and other things. We have had to tighten our belts, and we are digging deeper in our pockets than ever before."

"But patriotic Americans everywhere cooperate in any measures necessary to win this war. There is no sacrifice too great for victory. We can make no sacrifice today that would begin to equal the price all of us would have to pay in defeat. The cost of defeat would be permanent. The sacrifices for victory are only temporary."

Mr. Fuller recalled that only two years ago we had no munition industry and no factories capable of producing tanks, but today we are ahead of schedule on the production of tanks; airplane production is over down the ways five and six months ahead of schedule.

"That is the story of victory in the making," Mr. Fuller maintained. "It is the story of what those men are accomplishing because they are determined to preserve freedom, liberty and democracy in the world. Hitler's coffin is on the American production line today."

"When the production goals were set at 185,000 airplanes, 120,000 tanks and 55,000 anti-aircraft guns and 18 million tons of commercial shipping in 1943, some people called these 'fantastic.' They were so 'fantastic' in relationship to industry's ability to produce that these schedules are about to be increased! Yes, we are going to outdo the 'impossible.'"

"But no one should get the idea that it has been simple and easy," Mr. Fuller declared. "It has taken blood, sweat and tears. It has taken planning and work. It has taken industry and enterprise. The sacrifices have been tremendous. You know of many companies that have been squeezed out of existence by the pressure of war. There are many others that have had to sacrifice their domestic markets, built at huge costs over the years."

Industry Needs A Clear Track

"Yes, industry has made gigantic sacrifices. Many of them will never be generally known. If it is to complete the gigantic job—this job of—as quickly as possible (and that striving democracy and liberty for all is what we must have so that precious lives will be spared and peace will reign again)—industry must have the fullest possible cooperation from government and from labor. We need a clear track in delivering our bullets and bombs to the enemy."

Declaring that "sideshowes like the current agitation for a closed shop only distracts from the main event," and that "some labor leaders seem determined to clamp a closed shop policy on industry regardless of what the cost may be to our victory effort," Mr. Fuller said, "American industry believes that a worker has a right to join a union if he wants to, and an equal right to quit or not to join if that is his desire."

"Management, in this crisis, seeks no 'undue advantage.' Management does not seek to nullify any existing gains for labor. But it does want a sound labor policy and it wants this labor policy decided democratically by Congress."

The Job Ahead

Mr. Fuller warned that we must not emerge from war into peace as woefully unprepared as we jumped from peace into war. He said that this country will have a tremendous plant capacity when this war is ended, but markets will have to be developed.

"The job that we have to do now, while we are fighting with both hands to win this war, is to figure ways by which the national income can be kept at the present high level in the post-war period and then pushed higher and higher. That is the way of happiness, opportunity and prosperity."

"It will take courage to do the job ahead. But it took courage and determination to found this nation and preserve it so that we might now have the privilege of defending it."

Immense power is acquired by assuring yourself in your secret reveries that you were born to control affairs.

Perhaps your ship will never come in. It may be that you never sent one out.

WAR SETS New TEST FOR RAILROADS

IN A DECISION which calls for loyal acceptance by shippers and travelers as well as by railroaders, the War Production Board has severely curtailed the use of materials to build railway equipment. There will be no further authority to build passenger cars, and the building of locomotives and freight cars will be held below the numbers which the railroads figured as being required to meet increasing demands for transportation.

It was a choice between guns and transportation. That choice must have been exceedingly difficult to make. We know there was a fair, urgent and complete presentation of transportation requirements. The decision rested, as it had to, with those responsible for the most effective use of all our nation's resources in critical materials, manufacturing facilities and labor supply. These men have complete information regarding war production and must direct all requirements toward the maximum effort to win the war.

We all realize and agree that the needs of war come first—in transportation, as in everything else. When it becomes necessary to divert materials from transportation in order to insure an uninterrupted flow of war production, that necessity can be appreciated and will be accepted by all concerned. Then it becomes our duty as patriotic citizens to face the situation ahead of us and alter our plans accordingly.

It means that all of us engaged in railway transportation—shippers and travelers and railroaders alike—have got a harder job to do with fewer and less adequate tools than we had anticipated. That's our challenge. Our answer is that we'll buckle down and do our very utmost to meet the requirements.

The job is simply harder, not impossible. We on the Illinois Central are resolved there'll be no failure here from lack of trying.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THURSDAY: THE LAST DAY WITH THE DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:14-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—This do in remembrance of me.—Luke 22:19.

The last day! How quickly it comes, and how fleeting yet meaningful its moments.

We do not know what our Lord did on Wednesday of Passion Week. In all probability He remained in Bethany to rest in fellowship with His friends. Surely He needed that day of quiet, for that which had gone before, difficult and strenuous as it had been, was as nothing to that which lay before Him.

Late on Thursday He and His disciples came to the upper room where Peter and John had already made preparation for the observance of the Passover (Luke 22:8). This feast had (since that great and awful night of Israel's redemption out of Egypt's bondage) pointed forward to the Christ and to His cross as the fulfillment of the type of redemption by the shedding of blood. But now the hour had come for Him to give Himself in that death, and so He set aside the Passover (because it has been fulfilled) to establish the great Christian feast of remembrance—the Lord's table, which now shows forth His death till He come.

I. The Final Passover (vv. 14-18).

Our Lord looked forward with intense desire to the Passover which He now observed with His disciples, for it was the last celebration of that feast recognized by God. All that it had foreshadowed of deliverance and hope was fulfilled in Him who now sat at the table. He had moved forward with resolute purpose to this day when His mission on earth was to be accomplished, and He was to become the Christian's Passover lamb (1 Cor. 5:7).

The fact that He had looked forward to it with desire does not minimize the deep darkness of either Gethsemane or Calvary. Remember that, when in the garden He faced that hour and thought of the possibility of the cup being taken from Him, He said to the Father, "Not what I will, but what thou wilt." Praying concerning the same matter (in John 12:27), He said, "Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour; but for this cause came I unto this hour."

II. The First Communion (vv. 19, 20).

Taking the unleavened bread and the unfermented wine of the Passover which had just been observed, Jesus established a new feast, the Christian feast of remembrance, which we call communion or the Lord's table.

His words are significant, "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till He come" (1 Cor. 11:26). At the Lord's table His followers find spiritual strength in recalling His death for them, but they also find joy as they remember that He is to come again. They thus testify to the world that they believe and cherish these truths.

This feast is rightly called "communion," for down through the ages and until He comes the saints of God have at His table sweet communion with Him and with one another. Let us not neglect it!

Our Lord also spoke of the cup as "my blood of the new testament." The word "testament" means covenant. The Lord's table therefore speaks of our allegiance to Him, of our loyalty to our Lord, and our devotion to His service. That is why the Christian Church speaks of communion as a sacrament, a word from the Latin sacramentum, meaning oath, and essentially an oath of allegiance.

III. The Folly of the Disciples (vv. 21-30).

Someone may say, "That point does not belong with the other two. Both the Passover and the Lord's Supper are for the joyful remembrance of deliverance and redemption." The objection is well taken except for one thing—we are dealing with human beings as they are, not as they should be and could be by the grace of God.

Here in the inner circle of the twelve there was one traitor. It seems impossible, but apparently Judas had maintained such outward conduct as to turn no suspicion in his direction, even though all along he had in his heart the blackest of treachery against his Lord. A sad and soul-searching fact is here revealed, that it is possible for one to make a high profession of faith in Christ and even so to live as to give no cause for criticism, and yet to be unregenerate and in fact the enemy of Christ.

What about the strife regarding position? Shameful as we agree that it was, it still goes on in the church. Not even the remembrance of our Lord's death and the reminder that He is coming again is enough to keep men from wanting to be greatest.

Taking After Dad

By CATHARINE FOSS
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"HE CERTAINLY doesn't take after me," Grant Frain, stretching his six-foot-two, watched his eighty-year-old son coming across the wide lawn.

As if she had read his thought, Dorothy Frain looked up from her sewing. "The Physical Ed. Instructor at Jamie's school says he'll probably shoot up all of a sudden when he's a little older." She sighed. "Goodness knows I hope so. He is so sensitive about being the littlest one in the class."

"Is he the littlest one?" "Yes. And no one ever gives him a chance to forget it. I could just choke people who ask how old he is, and they say, 'Is he really?'"

Grant nodded. "I guess I was just as sensitive about always being the biggest one when I was a kid. I got so I hated to meet people. They'd always say, 'Is he only twelve?'—or fourteen, or whatever it was—my, what a big boy!" Although he said it in humorous mockery, the recollection brought with it a stinging sense of rebellion. Funny how kids took things so seriously, he thought.

Jamie came up to his mother. She looked down at his knickers hanging almost to his ankles. "Oh, for goodness' sake, Jamie," she protested, "pull up your knickers. They look awful like that." She shook her head. "They look awful, anyway. I think they are about the ugliest garment ever designed."

Jamie looked up into his mother's face and grinned, but obediently buckled up the offending knickers. "Isn't it about time to be going, Mom?" he asked.

"Yes, I guess you'd better start dressing now." She looked over at Grant. "There is a fete this afternoon at the school," she explained.

Jamie was frowning. "What do you mean, Mom—dress? Aren't I just going to wear these clothes?"

"Why, certainly not. This is a sort of party. Besides, your knickers are much too dirty. I'm going to take them to the cleaner's this afternoon."

"Oh, heck!" There was real consternation in the child's face. "What am I going to wear, then? I haven't anything else."

"Your blue serge shorts, of course."

"Aw, mom." Grant was a little annoyed to see the expression of—well, of panic—that spread over his son's face. "Not my shorts—"

Dorothy always said that Jamie was the most tractable child she had ever known. "You can always make him see reason," she would say, "if you just take the time."

And Dorothy did take the time. She was a very capable mother. As for himself, Grant had neither time nor patience to work out the problems of child-training.

He looked back at Dorothy and Jamie. Jamie had thrown himself on the grass, and was crying hysterically. Dorothy stood over him, flushed and trembling.

Grant rose with a quick, annoyed movement. His trouser leg caught on a rough piece of reed in the wicker chair. As he reached down to loosen it, a long-forgotten incident rushed into his mind with the intensity of a recent crisis. On just such a piece of reed he had deliberately snagged a pair of smooth black knickers!

It all came back to him then. He was fourteen and six feet tall. His mother had taken him to the best tailor in the city and had a tuxedo made for him with knickers! And he had gone to a dance—a ball it was called—in that tuxedo. The twenty years since that night were wiped away in the shame and rebellion which engulfed him. He had gone out onto the roofgarden adjoining the ball room and snagged the hated pants beyond repair. And his mother had taken him home.

Grant moved toward the shaking little figure with long, rapid strides and tapped a small shoulder. "Come up here, son," he said evenly. The sobbing ceased.

Jamie turned a grimy, tear-stained face and looked questioningly at his father. Then he scrambled to his feet.

Grant put a hand on his shoulder. "Now," he said gently, "if you think you can be quiet long enough, I'll tell you what you and I are going to do." He looked down into the small puzzled face. "You and I are going to take the car and go up to the store, and buy a pair of corduroy knickers for school, and a pair of serge knickers for parties. And," Grant leaned toward the boy and spoke in a confidential whisper, "on the way over, we will drop three perfectly good—" here he winked at Dorothy who sat watching them—"pairs of shorts at the Salvation Army office for some guy that likes shorts."

The little face before Grant was suddenly illumined. A sharp pain struck at Grant's heart. "The trusting little rascals," he thought, "they don't hold the past against you." Jamie found his voice. His little grinning mouth said, "Gee, Dad, you're a pal!"

A thought flashed through Grant's mind. "Just like me, that kid." He said, "Go kiss your mother, son. She's all right. But she's a woman, and women don't understand the importance of the cut of a feller's pants."

Opportunity is as scarce as oxygen; men fairly breathe it and do not know it.

Persistent people begin their success where other end in failure.

Some people grow under responsibility, others merely swell.

It is the surmounting of difficulties that makes heroes. No man is free who cannot command himself.

Never stand begging for that which you have the power to earn.

Behind the Men Behind the Guns

More than 1,000 Southern Bell employees now proudly wear the uniform of America's armed forces.

Behind them, ably doing their part, 26,300 intensively trained fellow telephone workers, efficiently serve their country at home. Not in uniform—but engaged in a task no less vital to the national war effort—constantly maintaining the efficiency of the far-flung communication lines of a country faced with its greatest emergency.

Nor have these loyal workers at home neglected the duty of every American. They have already bought $415,000 of war bonds, maturity value, and are subscribing over $117,000 every month for additional bonds—concrete evidence that these thousands of men and women are in every way "behind the men behind the guns."

PRODUCTION FIGURES AS AMERICA ARMS

Armament production figures are soaring, and all indications are that they will soar still higher. Donald Nelson, WPB chief, recently reported that "combined production of the U. S., Russia and England today is much greater than that of the Axis nations, and by the end of the year it is safe to predict that we shall have overcome the accumulative reserve built up by Japan since 1939 and by Germany since 1933."

Late reports are that industry is already making 3,300 planes a month and that the President's schedule of 60,000 planes in 1942 will be not only met but exceeded. Plane production rose 50 per cent during a little more than the three months following the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Industry is far ahead of the 45,000 tank schedule for 1942, with its goal of 75,000, is very encouraging, according to production officials. A big tank arsenal reports that it is already seven months ahead of schedule in its output of medium tanks and is now tripling production capacity.

The goal of 20,000 anti-aircraft guns has been met, and the schedule for an eight-fold increase in shipping tonnage is expected to be exceeded by several millions tons before the war ends. At present a ship a day is going into the water, but three ships a day are predicted before the end of 1942.

New Records Made

An amazing new bomber plant, the largest factory of its kind in the world, was a soybean farm just a year ago. It was not scheduled to go into production until next July, but now, after day and night work, operations are expected to begin this month. The plant will employ 10,000 workers to turn out bombers.

A new speed mark was added to the automobile industries' war production record when one company took just 47 days to complete the first all-welded medium tank ever built for the fighting forces. An official of the company remarked: "Some of our men who made this achievement possible perhaps had never seen a tank before they started this job. Equipped only with skilled men and machines for building automobile bodies, we started from scratch to make a completely new type tank."

All previous records for total monthly output of steel ingots were broken by the American steel industry in March, when 7,393,911 net tons of steel were produced.

Operating at the highest level in history, the machine tool industry will turn out more than 375,000 machine tools this year. A survey from that industry reports: "One reason why war production in this country is climbing sharply is that some 190,000 machine tools manufactured last year have been put to work."

packed into the first six months of this year, according to present production schedules.

The major contributions to increased production are pooling of facilities, putting idle machinery to work and exchanging information. Firms that once were competitors are swapping trade secrets to speed their war effort.

In the last month 1,600 machines that had been standing idle in automobile factories were put to work producing instruments of war. An index was compiled of 35,529 machines of types essential to speedy prosecution of the arms program. When a manufacturer needs a machine he goes to a central planning board for an unused machine in the hands of another company.

Subcontracting and conversion are also pushing war production ahead. Here is an outstanding example of the type of change that is now occurring. One plant formerly manufacturer steel burial vaults, but not any more. It now makes parts of tanks. The company has become a tank subcontractor without buying a single new type of tool or rebuilding its factory.

In order to maintain this stupendous schedule, manufacturers are turning their full efforts toward the war production program. One industry after another, is stopping the production of civilian goods to turn to war materials. Because of this, it is pointed out that living habits of the American people are due for some sweeping changes—substitutions, scarcities and rationing of many things formerly considered necessities. However, all indications are that the public is more than willing to undergo these sacrifices for victory.
