THE LISTENING POST

One of the strangest and most priceless possessions a person ever has is something which is automatic and something which we never think of a great deal unless, as happens infrequently, this possession is lost. Losing it is something which doctors know little of and regaining it once it has been lost is something which largely a matter of chance. A sudden shock or injury may cause its loss, and a similar shock or injury sometimes causes it to be regained. I am talking about memory, and this is something which never ceases to amaze me as I see its workings.

One morning not long ago I was sleeping rather late. Other members of the family were up and the radio was turned on. Dimly, half-asleep I heard a song in a man's rich tones, and I have not the slightest idea what the song was or what the words were. I was more than half-asleep, I believe, and in this condition a man is more or less in a state of suspended animation. I had no conscious thought; those words came to me over the radio much as raindrops on the roof. I was conscious only of extreme comfort and a desire for the deeper channels of sleep. But some word or line of that song touched some vagrant chord of memory, and in an instant I was thinking of a place and a time very far away, at least so far as times was concerned. For days afterward I tried to think of what the singer said that animated this memory, but could never capture the knowledge. I think there must have been something in the song about violets, wild violets, for that was where my memory traveled instantly. I saw again a spot I knew as a lad, and a spot I have not seen in many years.

In my youth the boys had one certain rendezvous and day after day of long, lazy summer were traveled to that spot. We called it the Bluff and to my eyes then it seemed a very high and dangerous bluff. Thinking of it now I am persuaded that it was not more than fifty feet high, but to eyes of eight or ten it seemed as high as the Rockies. It was a sort of peculiar formation at that, for such a flat country. A meandering creek turned a bend after flowing more or less in a straight line for a mile or so, and widened out in this bend. Gravel covered the bed of the creek here and it flowed over this gravel with a delightfully musical sound, and the water was bright and clear. Knowing nothing of germs in those days we boys drank freely of this water at all times, and it was delicious.

Right in the bend rose the bluff. It was a stark, red bluff, rising above the rippling creek and small stunted trees grew out of the red sand of the bluff at scattered intervals. The more hardy boys soon climbed this bluff, digging bare toes into the red soil and crawling from tree to tree to finally reach the top. I tried many times to climb the bluff and failed miserably, but at last I did manage to scale its peak and looked down in triumph at the gleaming creek which then seemed so very far down.

Now getting to the violets. On one side of the bare, stark bluff another steep hill rose up from the creek. Unlike the bluff, where erosion had taken heavy toll over the years, this steep hill was wooded heavily with what I imagine now

COTTON EDUCATIONAL MEETING SCHEDULED

Cayce High School Dec. 9, 7:30 p. m. Western High School, December 10, 7:30 p. m.

H. M. Pewitt, Chairman Fulton County A. C. A., announced today that B. W. Edmonds, State AAA Committeeman from Calloway County, will be at the Cayce meeting and will explain the importance of continuing growing cotton under Marketing Quotas and the urgent need of getting the cotton farmers to rally around the polls in support of this vital issue to be voted upon on Saturday, Dec. 12.

Rosco Stone, former State AAA Committeeman, now director of Kentucky State Farm Bureau Federation and president of the Fulton County Farm Bureau, will be in charge of the meeting at Western. All farmers who really want to know more about the cotton situation as of today and what it means for the future should attend one of these meetings, so stated Mr. Pewitt.

He also stated that each grower who produced cotton in 1943, either within his allotment or in excess of his allotment will be eligible to vote in this election, and 2-3 of the farmers must vote in favor of Quotas before they can be put into effect. Those who have allotments but did not grow any cotton in 1942 will not be eligible to vote. Each eligible voter will be sent a notice of this election individually and will be given instructions as to where he should cast his vote if at all convenient to do so. If it is not convenient at that place, then he can demand a vote at the place that is convenient to him.

Broadway Application Of Salary Limitations Soon May Be Sought

Washington.—A plan to broaden the application of President Roosevelt's $25,000 salary limitation is expected to be laid before the next session of Congress, covering next month.

An informed official, who declined to be quoted by name, said today the President would ask that the limit be applied to income from investments, as well as income from salaries. He will ask Congress, it was said, to make the restriction effective through the new tax bill.

If the proposal is advanced, Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), said today, it will encounter sharp congressional opposition. The limit on salaries, applied through an executive order, has already been widely criticized in Congress.

The salary restriction, as put in force by James F. Byrnes, the director of economic stabilization, forbids the payment or receipt of any gross annual salary of more than $27,000, debts and federal taxes, it was estimated, would leave a net income of about $25,000.

No such limitation was placed on income from investments, because, it was explained, Mr. Roosevelt felt he had no legal authority to impose it. The lack of a restriction on investment income was one point raised by Chairman George (D.-Ga.), of the Senate finance committee in criticizing the salary limit as "unwise and unnecessary."

Meanwhile, there were reports that the salary limitation order might be enforced through insistence upon the $27,000 gross salary, rather than the $25,000 net.

As a result, some pointed out, it might be possible for individuals with unusually large deductions for dependents to retain $27,000 or more. It was said on good authority that the Treasury probably would be satisfied if the $27,000 gross were observed, regardless of the uneven effect on net incomes.

Warships Lost

Allied warships lost in the original Allied movement on Morocco and Algeria, the admiralty said, included the small British aircraft carrier Avenger, three destroyers, two cutters, a sloop, a minesweeper, an anti-aircraft ship, a depot ship and the corvette Gardien.

The U. S. transports listed as sunk were the Tasker H. Bliss, the Hugh L. Scott and the Edward Rutledge—all lost off Casablanca where the French put up their most spirited resistance; the Joseph Hewes, sunk off Rabat, Morocco; and the Leedstown, sunk off Algiers. All were sunk by enemy submarines.

The U. S. Navy Department added that three other transports, a destroyer and a tanker were damaged.

Destroyers Sunk

The three destroyers listed by A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, as sunk were the Broke and the Martin, both British, and the Isaac Sweers, a Netherlands ship which had been towed half-completed to England when the Nazis invaded the lowlands.

Struck by a torpedo off Algiers, the Sweers went down swiftly but 138 of the Dutch crew of 220 were believed to have survived.

The cutter Walney and Hartland, two former U. S. Coast Guard vessels transferred to the Royal Navy in 1941, were sunk in what Alexander said was "a gallant attempt to prevent the scuttling of blockships in Oran harbor. Although burning, the cutters smashed through the harbor boom and penetrated to the inner harbor to land troops before they went down, he said.

C. R. Stinnett of Ballard county harvested 42 bushels of seed which he combined on one and eight-tenths acres planted to hemp.

Boy Starting Club Blaze Called "One Of Finest"

Boston.—The friends of 16-year-old Stanley Thomaszewski, a central figure in the Coconut Grove fire that took 484 lives, are standing by him in his grief.

Fire and police officials have quoted the youth, employed at the Grove as a bar boy, as saying the fire started when he accidentally dropped a lighted match at the base of an artificial palm tree while trying to install an electric light bulb in a darkened corner.

Robert S. Masterson, headmaster of the Roxbury Memorial High School for Boys, told an interviewer yesterday that the good-looking lad was one of the finest boys, physically, mentally and morally, in the school.

Active in School

"I have great sympathy for Stanley in this situation in which he has innocently been enmeshed," the school master said. "That he would go voluntarily to the police to aid them with the facts is just the manly, courageous action I would have expected from him."

Stanley, a tackle on the school football team, is a company captain in the school's military training ranks.

"He was outstanding among the twenty-three captains in the school and I consider his prospects excellent for the highest honor, that of being named colonel of the Roxbury Memorial High Regiment," added Capt. Jafes J. Kelley, the school's military drill instructor. He said he considered Stanley as good material for West Point.

Trusted by Friends

Richard McCarthy, Stanley's home room teacher, had this to say: "Stanley was room treasurer. That shows how his schoolmates felt about him. He was trustworthy, honorable, efficient. He is a senior, taking a college course; a good student."

"Every week, week after week he has been buying War Stamps regularly at school."

In four years at school, Stanley never needed disciplining; never played hooky.

BRITISH DO NOT RECOGNIZE DARLAN AS HEAD OF FRENCH

London.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that the British government did not consider itself bound by the statement of Admiral Jean Darlan in which he assumed responsibility as head of the French government in Africa.

Eden said in answer to a question that the government had not been consulted in advance about the statement.

The foreign secretary announced that the government would make a statement on the Darlan issue to a secret session of the House of Commons. The date was fixed but not made public for reasons of security.

Eden previously had asserted that the British government intended to stand by its commitments to General Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, but he did not state what those commitments were.

Reuters quoted Algiers radio as reporting that Marcel Peyrouton, one-time French governor of Tunisia, had placed himself at Darlan's disposal.

Peyrouton left the Vichy fold last April when he asked to be relieved as Vichy's envoy to Buenos Aires.

The Algiers radio also said that French Minister Henriot, in San Domingo, and his staff had resigned to join Darlan.

First Eyewitness Account Of French Fleet Scuttling Given

London.—The first eye-witness account of the scuttling of the French battle fleet in Toulon harbor last Friday was given Monday night by the commander of the French submarine Casablanca, which escaped from Toulon along with a sister submarine and reached Algiers in North Africa Monday. As reported by the Algiers radio, the commander said that the French fleet first thought it was being attacked by the Germans when shots were heard from the direction of Toulon arsenal at 5 a. m. on Nov. 27 and Nazi planes appeared overhead.

"From the silence of our anti-aircraft batteries we thought that they had been taken by the Germans," the commander said. "They had, in fact, been captured two hours before the main German attack began."

The commander revealed that there were no French troops in Washington.—The Japanese came out for round 3 Monday night in the battle of Guadalcanal, the Navy announced today, but were beaten back again with nine of their ships sunk and thousands of their soldiers drowned.

The night engagement cost the United States one cruiser sunk and other U. S. vessels damaged, a communique reported, but none of the Japanese soldiers being brought in by transports set foot on shore except possibly as bedraggled prisoners.

Two Japanese troop transports and one cargo ship were sunk and six of their escorting warships were sent to the bottom of the sea. These included four destroyers and two other vessels which were either cruisers or large destroyers.

Japanese Claims

Before the Navy issued its communique, imperial headquarters in Tokyo had trumpeted the action not as an unsuccessful attempt to put reinforcement ashore at Guadalcanal but as "a fierce attack" by a Japanese "torpedo attack flotilla." Tokyo claimed the sinking of one American battleship, one cruiser of the Augusta type and two destroyers, to the loss of only one of their own destroyers.

Meanwhile American forces ashore on Guadalcanal hacked away at the Japanese left stranded there without reinforcements of men or fresh supplies, killing more than 100 of them in patrol skirmishes Tuesday and Wednesday (Guadalcanal date).

American warships intercepted the Japanese armada in waters off the north coast of the island, in about the same vicinity as the scene of the last naval battle.

"The enemy was interrupted in his attempt to reinforce and supply his troops on the island," the communique related succinctly, "and no landing was effected."

Toulon when the Nazis attempted to seize the fleet. They had been removed from the city at the order of the Germans eight days before, and only the crews of the warships remained to guard the arsenal and to oppose the Nazi attack.

"The German planes made a special search for our submarines in the harbor," he said. "Flares were dropped as soon as a submarine was detected on the surface."

"My submarine saw a chance to escape, though, and we quickly cast off and gained the high seas. Throughout the day we heard tremendous explosions behind us, and during the night we saw high columns of flames over Toulon harbor."

"Then we made our way toward Algiers, submerging in the daytime and traveling on the surface at night. There was no incident, and upon reaching Algiers we placed ourselves under the orders of Admiral Darlan."

HE THINKS HE'S SMART NOW, BUT WAIT!

Nation-wide gasoline rationing will touch most lives in the United States one way or another. Our country has considerably more motor vehicles than all the rest of the world put together. Before the war we had achieved the extraordinary fact of one passenger car registered for every five persons in the population. In the past quarter-century the automobile has figured increasingly in the business and pleasure of the average American family. It has become a great utility and a great thing.

A huge tourist industry and a huge servicing industry have been founded upon it. Countless suburban communities have grown up on the assumption of a free, lavish and perpetual use of automobiles. Countless farms have been revolutionized not only by the annihilation of distance which motor cars and good roads have brought but also by the installation of trucks, tractors and other gasoline and oil-burning equipment.

In view of all this, it is obvious that rationing of motor fuel, especially in a land unaccustomed to rationing of anything, will produce difficulties of administration and observance and require experience before it can function smoothly and justly. Its imposition in the Eastern states last May was attended by some hoarding and lying and followed by evident violations. There is no reason to believe these things are not being duplicated in the vast additional territory now included.

In fact, abuse will be probably aggravated. In the East there was an actual and acute shortage, so that rationing was an oil conservation as well as a rubber conservation measure. In most of the other states its necessity lies in rubber conservation alone. This necessity is couched for by high and disinterested authority after long, painstaking study. However, some people are still saying there's no point in restricting the use of gasoline where it seems plentiful, and men in Congress who have had at least six months to learn better have been irresponsibly giving encouragement to this view.

No government could conceivably introduce a measure of such far-reaching effect and potential unpopularity unless its necessity were real and urgent. The fact is that the armed forces have already made the maximum sacrifice of rubber possible to their efficiency. Civilian rubber now in use must be conserved to the very utmost. The civilian's car and the rubber on which it runs must serve only essential transportation uses.

The individual motorist has a serious patriotic duty. He must bear in mind the report of the Baruch committee that every unnecessary turn of the wheel for Hitler and against our soldiers. He will see cases of bootlegging, of cheating, of stretching the truth.

The inconveniences which gasoline rationing impose don't even deserve mentioning beside the sacrifices our fighting men are being called upon to make. And it seems likely that in the stern and terrible year which Winston Churchill has said is ahead of us, the sacrifices of our fighting men will bring home the facts of war to the civilian population as never before, and will expose the miserable little chiseler in a stern and terrible light. to be second-growth timber. It was steep, it is true, but it could easily be climbed by pulling one's self along from one sapling to another. I remember when I was a very small child I climbed this hill several times, and was always afraid I might start rolling and never stop until I hit the bottom.

• The ground itself under these small saplings was mossy, and in the proper season wild violets peeped out at one from every part of the hillside. Looking back at it now it seems that it was always thus covered, but common sense tells me that this was only in the spring when the wild violets made such a lovely scene on that steep hillside.

• What the man on the radio said to cause this memory I will never know. I merely know that some word, or some line, of some song, unlocked that certain memory and for a long time afterward it stood before me vividly.

F. C. C. LIMITS PHONE LINE CONSTRUCTION

Cable Also Placed On Telegraph
Wires

Washington.—The Federal Communications Commission today limited all new construction of telephone and telegraph lines to those which serve "an essential military need or a vital public need which cannot otherwise be met."

Acting at the request of the Board of War Communications, the F. C. C. issued an order requiring any application for construction of new lines to show military or vital public need in order to receive consideration.

Must Be Supported

Such applications must be supported, the commission said, by a statement of need signed by the Army's chief signal officer, the director of naval communications or the Coast Guard's director of communications; an order of requisition signed by the authorized representative of a governmental department to be served by the line, or a complete statement of facts and circumstances to demonstrate the necessity of the proposed line.

The commission said such documents need not be submitted for pending applications unless specifically requested.

WEST COAST HAS ERRONEOUS REPORT OF FLEET OFFSHORE

San Francisco.—The reported presence of a "large number of unidentified surface vessels" off the California coast brought an unprecedented alert today, but the Navy announced later the report was "considered in error."

It came from a naval patrol at dusk last night, and led to a radio broadcast ordering all fleet personnel to report to their ships immediately. The force was reported 450 miles offshore proceeding eastward. The resultant alert affected only service personnel and police, who were ordered to their posts.

A statement by Vice Admiral John W. Greenhalgh shortly before noon said a thorough search of the area did not confirm the presence of any unidentified craft. The broadcast to fleet personnel was discontinued.

Word of the naval patrol's report gave rise to considerable speculation as to whether the Japanese might be trying for a mainland attack on the first anniversary of the Pacific war, December 7, but there was no official comment. There was no word of an alert other than in this area.

Unofficial sources said the general broadcast to fleet personnel was the first of its kind on record since war began.

HOUSE GROUP RELEASES BILL ON TARIFF BAN

Immigration Rights Taken From Measure

Washington, —A Modified wartime measure, granting President Roosevelt power to suspend tariff regulations but omitting the authority he had requested to override immigration barriers, emerged today from a House Ways and Means Subcommittee.

In quick answer to White House pressure for action on the measure this year, the subcommittee turned the compromise over to the full committee, which will consider it tomorrow and decide whether to hold public hearings.

Apart from the omission of the section covering entrance of aliens, the rerafted bill differed little from the farm in which it was presented previously to the full committee. Just what reception it would draw remained uncertain.

Under its terms the President would have "discretionary" authority to suspend tariff laws and regulations on the recommendation of any of several way agencies that the suspension was necessary to the prosecution of the war.

It retained a three-day check rein on "duration of the emergency" powers, providing for their automatic expiration on December 31, 1943, or by joint resolution of Congress, or at the end of the war, whichever date comes first.

SALARY LIMIT WIDENING DUE

F. D. R. Asks Extension To Investments

Washington, —President Roosevelt plans to ask the new Congress to extend the $25,000 net salary limitation to investment income, beginning in 1943.

An informed official said today the President believed that all types of earnings should be limited for the duration, but had omitted investment income from his executive order because he was informed the Wage Stabilization Act gave him no authority in that field.

$25,000 Net Is Limit

As put into effect by James F. Byrnes, economic director, the executive limitation bans the payment by any company or the receipt by any individual of a gross yearly salary of more than $27,200. After reductions for insurance, debt and Federal tax payments, this is calculated to leave $25,000 net.

There was no comparable limitation, however, on the income received from investment and this was one of the points made by Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee in assailing the order as "unwise and unnecessary."

May Meet Opposition

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), told reporters he was confident that if the President followed this course he would run into strong congressional opposition.

It appeared meanwhile that enforcement of the salary order was likely to be centered for practical purposes on curbing the payment of more than $27,200 gross, rather than on efforts to make the $25,000 ceiling effective in all cases.

Those in a position to know said it might be possible for some individuals, particularly those with larger than average deductions for dependents, to retain $27,000 or even more. They indicated that for enforcement purposes, the Treasury would be satisfied if the $27,200 gross limitation were observed and would make no point of it if the net income went slightly above $25,000.

Lest We Forget . .

"PEARL HARBOR"

When you glance at the calendar and notice the date, doesn't it bring to mind some horrible memories of a year ago? For it was on a peaceful Sunday last December that a new battle cry was born . . . And we Americans still remember Pearl Harbor and the sneaking, treacherous attack which we received from those Yellow Devils on that fateful day.

So the month of December brings a note of sadness . . . Lest we forget those innocent people who lost their lives that day, and the brave American boys who have paid with their lives since that time. Yet, we find a source of encouragement in the realization that we are twelve months nearer the Victory and the Peace toward which America has set its course.

FULGHAM NEWS

By Miss Docie Jones

Mailing Christmas packages in October and November stretches the holiday season quite a bit and affords an opportunity to lengthen the "want list." Personally, ours is too long now for a "short pocket-book."

P. T. A.

A bigger crowd was out Tuesday night for the P. T. A. and absentees missed a good program sponsored by Mrs. Leslie Walker and Mrs. E. J. Bennett. Children giving musical numbers were Evelyn Humphreys, Eugene Armbruster, Rhoeila Parrott, Ethel Parrott, Marie McClure, Louise McClure and William McClure.

A one-act play, "His Wife's First Husband" was a continuous riot of laughter. Characters were Charlotte McNeely, Brownie Walker, Billy Parrott and Brown Clifton. Devotional by Mrs. Frances Magruder and Beryl Darnell.

At the business session, campus committees on shrubbery, flag and pole reported. Another committee was appointed to form plans for some kind of a program featuring war stamps and bonds. The nature of the program will be announced next week.

Cafeteria's Donations

Shiloh patterns made a generous contribution to the school cafeteria, Tuesday and Wednesday. Mrs. Dick Colbert came Tuesday and brought twenty quarts of fruit and vegetables already canned, one 24 pound sack of flour and a quantity of dried beans. She also helped to prepare the noon lunch.

The following day Mrs. Herbert Green and Mrs. Aaron Dean came with 32 quarts of fruits and vegetables plus 6 more sent by Mrs. Will Jewel.

Thanksgiving? Yes, and a practical expression of appreciation for the cafeteria service. Mr. Darnell donated two gallons of dried peas and Mrs. Jimmie Moore gave 6 quarts of catchup. Who's next?

Prize Winner

James Monty, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vaden, had his first big radio thrill Sunday morning while listening in to Grandpa's Hour over a Memphis station when his name was called as first prize winner in a war stamp contest. Yes, Monty missed the rest of the program and is now awaiting the arrival of the mail for $1.00 in defense stamps.

BUDGET SEEN OF 100 BILLION

Washington, — Production and strategic plans in Washington, it was learned authoritatively today, are shaping up toward a $100,000,000,000 "victory" budget for the United States in 1944.

Tentative figures for the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1943, were described as already exceeding $90,000,000,000 and might be about $100,000,000,000 when President Roosevelt sends his annual estimates to Congress the first week in January.

History's Biggest The biggest budget in anybody's history, this pending plan is no portent of when the war will end. For the coming year, the war managers seek the maximum weapons and mobilization possible. If the war should end sooner, the plans can be cancelled.

In the current year, the United States is spending for itself and Lend-Lease slightly more than $70,000,000,000. Much spending was improvised as when bombs fell on Pearl Harbor right in the midst of last year's annual budget season.

A county-homemakers library for the use of its members has recently been organized in Webster county by homemakers' clubs.
