Quiet Deepwood Subdivision Invites Public To Open House This Weekend

Are you still wishing for that home of your own? Still dreaming about living in a fine neighborhood with beautiful homes and spacious lots?

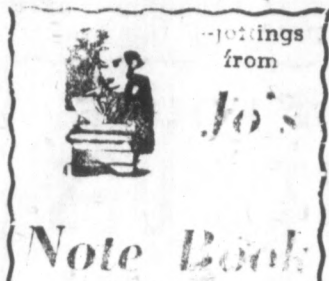

Now, those dreams can come true, with the opening of Fulton's brand-new Deepwood Subdivision just off the By-Pass in Highlands. The official opening will be held Saturday and Sunday with Open House from one till eight each day.

There are already two homes in the subdivision—one completed and furnished and the other nearly done—and these homes along with the others to be built, meet the specifications of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The Subdivision has city sewers, city utilities, curbs, gutters, asphalt streets and very few restrictions. The homes are FHA approved and are of the very latest design.

Max McDade and Herbie Hunt, owners and developers of Deepwood Subdivision, invite everyone in the Ken-Tenn area to attend the Open House this weekend and look over the fine, modern homes they offer for public approval.

If you're like we are you always think of far off places, in the big cities, when people talk about juvenile delinquency. Maybe we have come to love our community so well we just hate to think of children in the homes of our neighbors and friends who are anything but good, clean, American youngsters. I honestly think that our mind has dictated to our heart in this respect, because here of late I've come to realize that a lot of the youngsters around us need to re-silver their halo.

Perhaps this is true because I have been the victim of some honest to goodness criminal incidents within the past few weeks. I know that a lot of you are aware that young people, all of them old enough to know better, have had a field day pulling, what they call, pranks by way of the telephone. Some of the pranks that they pulled are down-right brutal, indecent and criminal. I've heard of them, but have never had the occasion to be a part and parcel of the chicanery. But now I'm getting mighty hot under the collar about what they're doing to WFUL and just for the record they're treading on dangerous territory there.

Here's what they've been doing and I'll tell you why they're on dangerous ground a little later on. For instance these telephone monsters have been calling listeners of the area and identifying themselves as members of WFUL's staff. They ask their telephone listeners to identify a record and if the listener if successful, they say, they'll get a valuable prize. Well, if the song is identified, the telephone ghouls say, you've just won a big hunk of baloney and then hang up. That's one instance!

Another happened Tuesday when teen-agers called the station to announce that a big circus was going to be in Water Valley. The mother of one of the young girls called and apologized when she heard it and told us that the information was not true, and that there wasn't going to be any circus in Water Valley at all, that the kids were just playing. The mother, thank heavens, was as distressed as I was and for the record, we intend to report the young ladies to the proper authorities so that the news may spread that telephoning misinformation is no laughing matter.

The reason such a crime is dangerous as far as WFUL or any similar industry is concerned is Application may be made with Mrs. Virgil Barker, registrar, at 451. The school is sponsored by the Junior Department, Fulton Woman's Club. Only those children who will be five years old before January 1, 1962 need apply.

Hours of the Kindergarten are from 8:30 to 11:30 a. m. Class will be held at Carr Elementary School. A nominal fee will be charged pupils to cover expenses. Mrs. Robert Rudolph is serving as treasurer for the association. Fees will be payable to her at the end of each four weeks.

Those interested in the Kindergarten, which is beginning its ninth year this fall, may contact Mrs. Barker. Enrollment is limited.

McBride Becomes Fourth To File For City Office

The latest candidate to file for the office of City Commissioner of Fulton is L. M. McBride, vice president of Browder Milling Co. McBride, a resident of Pearl Street, filed for the candidacy on Monday of this week.

This brings the total number of announced candidates for the Commissioner position to four. The others are Bill Rice, Clarence Moline and John R. "Jack" Patton, colored.

The filing deadline is August 9. There are, as yet, no announced candidates for mayor.

Fair Tickets On Sale Now

The gigantic Ken-Tenn Fair is less than two weeks away, and the season tickets are now on sale in several downtown stores. The tickets are for gate admission every day of the Fair.

The tickets, which cost $1.00 for adults and $.50 for children, are on sale at Evans Drug, P. H. Weeks, National Store, City Drug, Leader Store and Kasnows.

Source Says Tripp Will Not Run Unless Announced Candidates OK His Program

With the deadline for filing for offices in Fulton's city election less than a week away, four persons have signified their intention to run for City Commissioner and only one candidate has filed for city judge. While it is generally believed that Nelson Tripp will file for reelection as Mayor, a source close to the Mayor said Wednesday that he would not run unless he could foresee a number of candidates for commissioners, who are in sympathy with his program of development for Fulton.

Of the four candidates for commissioner who have announced thus far two of them, Bill Rice and L. M. McBride have stated that they are definitely independent candidates. John Patton, the first Negro ever to announce for public office in the city and Clarence Moline are the other candidates.

Meanwhile, it is anticipated that at least four commissioners and a Mayorality candidate will announce this weekend.

The prospective Mayorality candidate, a man well known in church, civic and fraternal circles told the News that he has lived in Fulton all his life and felt that all Fultonsians were interested in the progress and development of Fulton and that he was confident that any of the feasible programs of development now in progress would be carried out and even supplemented when the need presents itself.

The candidate for Mayor will announce probably today, but asked that he not be identified until he met the legal requirements for announcing.

For the past four years Fulton has entered into the Federal urban-renewal program which calls for a housing development and slum clearance in the area known as Missionary Bottoms. During the past few years the Fulton City Council has appointed a Planning Commission, that works closely with State and Federal agencies on Community Development. The Council has also appointed an Airport Commission and the airport is now being built, although city monies have not been appropriated for its payment. The Chamber of Commerce has committed itself to meeting the obligation for the City's share of the program until the city can finance it. A Power Plant Board has been appointed, which is currently negotiating with Kentucky Utilities to purchase the local private utility system.

Fulton has been selected one of the eight cities in Kentucky to be designated as a pilot city for instituting and putting into motion community development programs. The State of Kentucky has employed five specialists in this field who will work with the Fulton officials.

Voted upon four years ago, Fulton will operate under a city manager form of government beginning in January 1962. An issue in the campaign may be whether to hire a local man or a specialist in this field. Mayor Tripp favors a qualified, experienced city manager to handle the city's affairs.

J. J. Perce is the only candidate to file for City Judge. Others mentioned as possible candidates for City Commissioner are Oran Winstead and Ward Johnson.

Fulton Jaycees Win More Honors At Successful Board Meeting Held Here

The welcome mat was out this past weekend, as over 300 Jaycees from all over the Commonwealth of Kentucky converged on this waiting city to attend the Kentucky Jaycee State Board Meeting.

The young businessmen and their wives began arriving Friday afternoon and continued coming in throughout the day Saturday. "Welcome Jaycees" signs decorated the front of most of the store buildings downtown and signs were erected at the entrances to town.

The whole town took on a holiday air Saturday morning as merchants displayed "Old Glory" in full force and the crowds of locals and visitors thronged in and out of the business houses.

The main attraction for the two-day meeting was the dinner meeting Saturday night at the Park Terrace at which the principal speaker was the Secretary of the Army, Elvis J. Stahr, Jr., Hickman's own native son. He spoke following the buffet supper which was served on the Park Terrace lawn. He was introduced by Mrs. Paul Westpheling.

Following the dinner, there was dancing, with music provided by Charles Andrews and his, Melody Men.

Meetings of the various committees and officers in the Jaycee organization were held Saturday afternoon and while their husbands were involved in business, the wives enjoyed the facilities of the Fulton Country Club, swimming, golfing, and viewing the fashion show prepared for them by the Jayceettes.

Wendall Ford, chief administrative assistant to Governor Bert Combs and the past national Jaycee president, was the principal speaker at the actual Board business meeting Sunday morning at the Fulton Theatre. He spoke on the topic, "Working Together."

Dan Stewart, Kentucky State president, presided over the business meeting and Rev. Oakley Woodside, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, gave the devotional.

The Fulton Jaycees received honors—a Founder's Plaque for the successful establishment of the Hickman Jaycee club; a Community Development Plaque for last year's community development and also, a resolution was recorded in the minutes commending the Fulton Jaycees for the successful board meeting.

History to Come to Life In Fair's Production of "Trail of Tears"

BY KAREN DUBLIN

Many years ago, when Fulton was a mere clearing with perhaps a scant few buildings clustered in its center, the white men moved into the Oklahoma Territory and began the process of transferring their red-men brothers to the far-away land of Florida. This trip, made entirely on foot, proved to be a sorrowful one for the Cherokee tribe, because with each mile traveled, another man, woman or child fell dead from starvation, exhaustion or heartbreak.

The story of this "Trail of Tears", which actually passed through this immediate area, will be re-enacted at the Ken-Tenn Fair this summer. Over one hundred cub scouts will participate in the story which will be the night-time feature of Kid's Day, August 15.

The performance will be set in an authentically reproduced Indian village in front of the grandstand. All the participants will be in full Indian dress including the wide fan-like regalia of the chief.

The program will begin at dusk and the "stage" will be completely dark. On cue, a "fireball" will be shot into the huge pile of brush in the center of the village and it will burst breathtakingly into giant, leaping flames.

As the spotlight focuses on the largest teepee, the chief, his son and his daughter will come into view of the audience. Following them onto the scene, will be the Webloes who light their pine knot torches from the center fire and do their beautiful Torchlight Dance.

Then as the whole tribe, led by the pounding tom-toms, comes leaping in and dances around the center fire, the old medicine man will enter the scene from the grandstand area and weave in and out, chanting and stamping his feet.

A quiet will then settle over the Indian braves as they participate in the "Peacepipe Ceremony". As soon as this is completed, two young Indian maidens will enter and do the thrilling "Eagle Dance" complete with the "eagle wings" costume and the authentic steps.

The excitement of their wild and beautiful dance soon catches on among the many braves and they begin to stamp their feet, beat the drums and yell their famous blood-curdling war cry.

As this high-pitched excitement reaches a climax, the chief will raise his hand and an immediate and complete hush will come over the tribe.

The lovely Indian Princess then raises her soft voice in two plaintive tribal songs, mourning the death of her fellow tribesmen on the long march, and upon completion of her songs, the whole tribe will become silent and still.

Lights! Camera! Action! Now it will be the audience's turn, as they will be able to come down out of the grandstand, walk among the teepees and view the complete lit village. Indian crafts, done by the Cub Scouts during this past year, will be on display in the village.

This thrilling Indian Exhibition is just another in the long list of exciting and interesting features of the Ken-Tenn Fair. The Fair, sponsored by the Fulton Jaycees, will be held at the Fulton Ball Park August 14-19, and will include an exciting Midway, a Community Clubs Exhibit, a gigantic Merchandise Exhibition and a Livestock Exhibition.

The Jaycees invite each and every resident of the Western Kentucky-Tennessee area to "come on out and enjoy a real old-fashioned county fair!"

Fulton Faces Hour Of Decision In City Election; Fear Must Not Be Permitted To Impede Progress

By the time we put next week's paper on the press (Wednesday, August 9) the deadline will have passed for candidates to file for the offices of City Commissioner, City Judge and Mayor of Fulton under the new form of City Manager government that goes into effect next January. At this writing only four persons have filed for commissioner and one for city judge. There can be no doubt that Nelson Tripp will be a candidate for re-election, although he has not formally filed his papers.

Rumor has it that Mr. Tripp will have an opponent, but it is obvious that there has been no wild stampede to the City Clerk's office for applications for filing. For that matter there never has been any wild enthusiasm for running for the low paid, high responsibility jobs in city government.

There's something different and ominous about this year's race for city offices. It's different of course because the form of government is different. It's ominous because several good, experienced and respectable people have said they would run for Mayor but they add, they don't want to encounter the hazards of a "bitter, mud slinging, race as this year's race might be."

Now that's the interesting part of the election for us. Why should it be a bitter, nasty, mud slinging race? City elections have rarely been that spirited, although we do remember one in some year's past. But the only thing we can learn from the ill founded rumor is that the persons who say it will be bitter are the ones who will be hurt most by such bitterness. Any man, and we can see no indications of a woman in the race, who sets out "to throw the book at another candidate" it has been said, only lays himself open to the resurrection of some incidents that Fulton does well to forget and so should the individuals involved. This may sound like double talk, but we think the people involved get the message.

For the past several years Fulton has, for the most part, been steadily gaining ground in state-wide circles as a town that gets things done. Community development programs, beautification programs, and programs of progress have come out of the Chamber of Commerce. The Jaycees, with their vigorous and enthusiastic projects have brought state and national recognition to us. Even in political circles we're making some headway and the stage is set for some concrete accomplishments that will put us in the highly competitive industrial market.

No one man, or group of individuals, should envision themselves as the white hope of the city, particularly if their presence would tend to harm our city and by unfavorable publicity undo all the good we've tried to do. This is our hour of decision. If it's going to be necessary to get an entirely new group of individuals in city offices, unspoiled and untainted by previous actions, then let's get the job done and now!

A mud-slinging Mayor's race will set us back many years in the public acceptance of our program. Any person who will be the target or the instrument for a bitter city election owes it to Fulton to remove that prospect from realization.

Sure there are many programs of progress in the mill for Fulton. There is not one Fultonian in a thousand who would do anything to impede that progress. And yet there are many men who could and would serve their city and gladly so, were it not for the fact that they fear a "no-holds-barred" campaign.

It need not be! It must not be! And though we cringe at the thought that our Fulton may be the subject of some unfavorable publicity, we're not going to withhold one line of information that will tend to bring to a head a festering sore that has plagued us all, for all too long.

SERMONETTE OF THE WEEK

God Wants You

By Rev. Leo J. Trese

Author of Many Are One

THE DIRECTOR of a proposed "supercolossal" movie was choosing an actress for the leading part in the picture. He sat at his desk with dozens of photographs spread before him. Eventually the director put his finger on one photograph and said to his secretary: "There is exactly the type I want—phone the woman and get her in here."

It is quite a jump from Hollywood to heaven, from a movie director to God. Yet here is an excellent example of the reason for your existence. Back in the limitless reaches of eternity God made His plans for the universe and did His casting for the parts that must be filled to the end of time.

In His divine mind God "looked over" the pictures of all the souls, limitless in number, whom He could create. When He came to the image of you He stopped and said, "This is a person who moves me to love. This is a person whom I want with Me through all eternity. This is a person whom I need for such-and-such a part."

BY WILLIAM H. MOHENY

First Week In August

In Missouri, there were two Confederate Generals, Price and McCulloch, who led large bodies of troops. By the first of August, 1861, the men united to drive Lyon's Union army from Southwestern Missouri.

The Southerners had no fixed ammunition. Some of the men were armed with shotguns, others with flintlocks, and only a very few had the newer muzzleloading percussion cap rifles. Neither General Price nor General McCulloch had a "cent of funds."

They had plenty of lead, powder and paper. The soldiers rolled their own paper cartridges, and the artillerymen made a small forge and cast their own cannonballs.

Across the state line in Arkansas were "several thousand good soldiers," but those men were under the command of General Hardee. Hardee had written the textbook on military tactics which was used by both Union and Confederate soldiers who were studying the science of war. Hardee's men did not fight in the Wilson's Creek campaign . . . Hardee was a West Point soldier and he was not about to lead untrained soldiers into battle!

After Price and McCulloch had combined their forces, they had almost 11,000 men. They had just been joined by 700 of the Ozark mountain men who brought their own rifles and hunting knives. Those men, at least, knew how to shoot.

There were no uniforms in that Confederate army. Officers wore bits of colored cloth pinned to their shoulders, and private soldiers as often as not called their officers "Jedge."

One company officer knew no military commands, but in private life he had been a lawyer. When this officer wanted to deliver an order to his company, he addressed them in courtroom fashion with a "Hear ye, hear ye!"

General Sterling Price, former governor of Missouri, and former Unionist, did not want to lead this group of men into battle, but he knew that to save the State of Missouri for the South, the Union General Lyon must be stopped. Said Price to McCulloch: "Let's go find Lyon."

Said McCulloch: "He won't be hard to find."

Lyon had staged almost a one-man campaign in Missouri. Five months before he had been a mere Captain in the regular army. He had been left in command of St. Louis when Gen. Harney went to Washington. Harney had been taken prisoner by the Confederates at Harper's Ferry while a passenger on the B & O Train. Taken to Richmond, Harney had been courteously treated by the Southern generals, allowed to continue to Washington, then had returned to St. Louis. Harney was not trusted, it was feared he might turn over to the South the arsenal at St. Louis, so almost by accident Lyon had been in charge.

Lyon had accepted the challenge. In May he had captured the Missouri State Guard camp of militia. Immediately afterwards his men had put down a riot with much bloodshed. 28 citizens of St. Louis had been killed. Lyon had sworn the German military companies had been killed. Lyon had sworn the German military companies of St. Louis into the Union army, and had taken command, in the name of the Union, of all of Missouri.

Washington had allowed Lyon a free hand, and he used it to the utmost.

On June 13, 1861, Lyon with 2,000 troops surprised the new militia camp at Booneville. The State and practically unarmed. The men had just come to Booneville to be organized when Lyon's forces scattered them. Many of these men returned to their homes. Gov. Jackson was driven from the State, and Missouri found it impossible to secede. The State legislature later elected a new governor, but the State had a Confederate government in exile.

Now, after those short months, Lyon was leading a small army of Union soldiers into the mountains of Southwestern Missouri to try to keep Price and McCulloch from joining forces. Lyon had 5,400 men. They were well-equipped, but there was a fatal flaw; Lyon had become too powerful for his Government back in Washington. Rather . . . he had become too powerful for some members of his government.

Confederate Gen. Pillow had occupied New Madrid in Mo. Fremont had taken over Harney's job as commander of the Department of Missouri, and Fremont had to defend Missouri from several attacks at once. Fremont had reinforcements to send to Lyon, but he decided the aid was needed in other places more. So Lyon did not get help when he knew he was facing the combined power of Price and McCulloch. On the morning of the Battle of Wilson's Creek, the morning when Lyon was killed, he complained briefly that reinforcements had not arrived. He said "we are forgotten." Lyon was not to be forgotten by history.

After the war, Confederate Col. Snead, Aid to Gov. Jackson, said of Lyon: "In less than five months he had risen to command of the Union Armies in Missouri, and had dispersed the State government, of the State, had almost conquered the State, and would have completely conquered it had he been supported by his government."

Diary of Doin's

(Items gathered along Fulton's merryway for your pleasure and your scrapbook)

Last week the West Kentucky spotlight was focused on its most famous son, Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr, Jr. Wherever he went, what he did, whatever he said was news. It goes on like that not only in his own home county, but wherever he goes all over the world. While the spotlight was shining on our friend and neighbor we could not help but look beyond the flash bulbs to the petite, winsome lady who manages to keep a few paces behind him in distance, yet mighty close to him in thought, word and deed. For all the excitement that the able and charming Secretary stirred in his home-town, it was Dorothy Stahr who captivated our admiration and we are sure that the Secretary of the Army would have it that way.

During their all too short stay in Kentucky on this trip, it was our happy privilege to be at many pleasant gatherings with the Stahrs, and you can just rest assured that we took every opportunity to engage her in conversation, for to do so, is to know a vivacious, sparkling, and charming lady who never meets a stranger, be he potentate or King.

Dorothy Stahr calls herself a Yankee. And for all practical reasons of geography she is that, having been born way up East. But if you didn't know it, you'd immediately size her up as one of the South's most gracious ladies. In any part of the country, or the world for that matter, she is a gracious lady, but her inimitable characteristic of disarming people and making them feel completely at ease is as Southern as Magnolias and honey chile.

She's had some right good training in the ways of the South having lived in Lexington for ten years and married to a Southern gentleman of the old school. But for all that, Dorothy is home folks to all of us and she knows as many people, almost, as Secretary Stahr does in the area where he was born and went to school. We were somewhat amazed when we first greeted each other again and she said: "Where's Paul?" When we told her that he was at Reserve Officer's Camp she recalled the pleasant evening she first met him at a Hawaiian dance at the Country Club here. Now that might not seem an unusual thing to you, but when you consider the hundreds of people she meets officially and socially, it seems a little uncanny that she remembered just the evening and the occasion for having met the better half of the family.

Dorothy was thrilled to death about all the activity incident to the big celebration in Hickman and Fulton honoring her husband, but she was just as eager to talk about all her exciting life in Washington. The Stahrs are almost weekly guests at the White House, officially and socially. She speaks glowingly of the Kennedys (President Jack and his lovely Jacqueline) and she told us something of a White House social function. If refreshments are served at the White House they are served at exactly eight o'clock. Dinner is exactly at nine o'clock and you're at home nearly always at ten thirty. Mrs. Kennedy adheres to this schedule to the letter, Dorothy said, and there's no getting away from it for just a few minutes, she said.

Being wife to a Cabinet officer is a great responsibility, don't you ever think that it isn't, but Dorothy looks upon her wifely duties just as any American lady. She has a full time governorship for the children, the loyal and devoted Mrs. Matthews, but it is Dorothy who puts breakfast on the table at seven o'clock for the Secretary and for their oldest child, Stephanie. Dorothy says that none of them are very talkative at that ungodly hour, so almost by rote she prepares them food, sends them off with what you might call a cheery greeting and then, says she, she goes back to bed and sleeps like Rip Van Winkle until exactly ten thirty when the maid comes each day. The Stahrs live in a three-story, five bedroom, four bathroom stone house in the area around the Shoreham Hotel in Rock Creek Park. Dorothy remodeled the third floor for an extra bedroom, and that's all she had to do to the newly built house. She likes some modern and some old things around the house and loves to be fixing up all the time.

We asked her about Washington's new "hostess with the most-est" Gwen Cafritz, since Perle Mesta is not on the scene much anymore and the famous Evelyn Walsh McLean is now deceased. She thinks Mrs. Cafritz a dynamic lady and surely a hostess who knows how to get congenial people together and she talked of some of the wonderful parties there. When we asked if the money for such entertaining is ever going to run out she told us how Mr. Cafritz is undoubtedly making money faster than Gwen can spend it and that seemed a very happy situation to be in.

The Stahrs often are invited to embassy parties and she told us something we didn't know. She said that for dinner at the embassy a long, floor length evening gown is a must and nobody, but nobody violates this fashion rule. She knows, says she, because the first one she ever went to she wore a ballerina length gown and she felt like she was being stared at all evening. Now that's an interesting bit of news in case you ever get to an embassy party.

Saturday night in Fulton Dorothy was presented with several gifts on behalf of the Jaycees, the Chamber of Commerce and others. When she opened the box containing the silver punch bowl that was presented to her by the Chamber of Commerce she exclaimed over it so much we just couldn't help but know she was genuinely pleased. She kept saying it was what she had always wanted, she knew when she was going to use it and just couldn't be grateful enough for such a nice and thoughtful gesture. Besides a country ham presented to them here and in Hickman and more country hams and gifts presented to them at Camp Breckinridge, the Stahrs were presented a beautiful reproduction of the original painting of MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME. Both the Stahrs kept admiring it so and were so pleased with it it was just plain heartwarming. They're two of the greatest folks we ever saw.

Dorothy told us that she and Elvis were leaving in October for an official trip around the world. She told us they were going to Honolulu first, and not knowing directions any more than we do, we lost her after that. But they're going to circle this old globe and we're sure the world is going to be a better and happier place after having met this dynamic couple who gave a real spark to our routine existence and surely an occasion to remember for many years to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cardwell have returned home after being the house guests of her sister's family, the Virgil T. Dotsons of Knoxville, Tennessee. They were entertained at several parties and gatherings while there.

Gail Bushart, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Glynn Bushart, celebrated her tenth birthday last Thursday afternoon with a party at her home on Court Drive. Twenty one little girls attended.

Bunco was enjoyed with Ginger Edwards winning the prize for the most points; Carmen Weeks, most buncos and Sharon Moore, low.

The lovely birthday cake featured a golf course, complete with green, tee and fairway. Ice cream and cake was served and favors of yo-yo's were given to each guest.

It's like we said in the Diary . . . Dorothy Stahr is a deed. Here Secretary Stahr slices one of the several few paces away from the Army Secretary's lime-hams presented to him during his visit to Kentucky, but with him every step in thought, word and lucky.

because WFUL and the telephone company operate under the same regulations of the Federal Communications Commission. It is my honest belief that tampering with the telephone to give out wrong information over the radio is just as criminal as wire tapping. And that's a Federal offense with Federal prosecution.

When I think of the whole miserable incident I'm not so concerned with the actual commissioner of the alleged prank as I am of the warped thinking that pervades the youngsters' mind to do something that they must know is wrong. If we parents permit this kind of wrong-doing, I just wonder if we're not inviting them to go on to larger acts of dishonesty and thereby, in effect, sanction such wrong doing. On the other hand are we guilty of a failure to provide enough teen-aged recreation that they resort to such ghoully tactics just to have something to do. A lot of youngsters are lucky enough to play golf during the long summer days. Many enjoy the swimming pools for a part of the day. Some are still engaged in the fast diminishing art of reading good books. But, even as adults get bored with too much recreation, so do children - tire of the leisurely life.

It remains for those of us most concerned to think of something to keep their minds occupied with worthwhile activities. Recreation is no panacea to keep idle minds working. It takes some hard work, with some kind of remuneration to keep them active and alive. There must be an answer. What is it? We've got to find it before next summer rolls around, that's for sure. I know some men and women with children at the difficult age who will help. Will you?

The third class is expected to be quite a bit larger following opening of the University's Medical Center hospital.

SCHOOL PEOPLE WORK TOWARD 'LEADERSHIP'

More than 40 school officials from four Kentucky counties attended a week-long workshop at the University of Kentucky College of Education to work toward formation of "leadership teams" in their counties. K U Company Receives Many Safety Awards

Kentucky Utilities Company has the best safety record among the nation's electric companies, according to information supplied by three major safety organizations.

The three agencies—the National Safety Council, Bureau of Safety and Edison Electric Institute—granted K. U. a total of 25 awards covering various safety achievements during 1960 and the first half of 1961. This puts K. U. in first place in the number of awards received during the 18-month period, according to the agencies' records.

Among the awards presented at a recent division managers' meeting in Lexington were: Ten from the National Safety Council—seven awards of merit, two public utilities contest awards and the award of honor; the N. S. C.'s highest award and the only one given to an electric utility in 1960; Seven from the Edison Electric Institute—six safety achievement awards and an injury frequency reduction award; and eight from the Bureau of Safety—seven achievement awards and an injury frequency reduction award.

The awards covered total man-hours without lost-time injury, life-saving, motor vehicle safety, accident reduction and overall safety.

This is the first time that K. U. has received the National Safety Council's award of honor for outstanding safety performance and first place awards in the council's public utilities contest.

TVA Rate Increase Called Publicity Stunt; Utilities Say No Cut Made

Electric-utility executives said Thursday that the Tennessee Valley Authority's 8 per cent rate cut announced Tuesday was nothing more than a "cheap publicity stunt."

In fact, a spokesman for one major power system said that the whole action "smacked of Madison Avenue."

A group of leaders of the investor-owned utilities, queried Thursday, charged that the big Government power system had not actually cut its rates at all.

They emphasized that the new rate schedule, called the "Norris Centennial Rate" in honor of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, actually had no effect on the wholesale rates that T. V. A. charges its distributors.

The T. V. A. itself issued a statement Wednesday in which it acknowledged that the new lower electric power rate is "a retail rate to consumers and in no way affects the wholesale rate at which T. V. A. sells electricity to the local distributors in its region."

Edgar H. Dixon, president of Middle South Utilities, Inc., termed the original T. V. A. announcement "seriously misleading and not of sufficient significance to warrant the great amount of publicity that it attracted."

He emphasized that T. V. A. only announced that it would allow its distributors to install a fourth rate to the three previous rate schedules if they so desire."

A spokesman for Kentucky Utilities Company said T. V. A.'s action was about the same as if an individual car dealer cuts his prices by $100 and the car maker decided to take full credit for the price cut.

A. J. Wagner, one of the directors of T. V. A., denied in a telephone interview Thursday night from Knoxville, Tenn., that the rate cut was a publicity stunt.

"We simply made the announcement on the 100th anniversary of Senator Norris' birthday as further proof of the viability of the act written by the late senator and his associates, he said."

Local Woman Will Collect Heart Fund Contributions

Memorial contributions to the Heart Fund, in memory of persons who pass away because of a heart ailment, may be made in Fulton County through Mrs. Bertie J. Pigue, Dottie Shop, Fulton, according to Jackson D. Guerrant, Danville, chairman of the board of the Kentucky Heart Association.

When such a memorial contribution is made, an acknowledgment will be sent promptly to the family of the deceased, Guerrant said, although the amount of the gift is held in confidence. The contributor also will receive a prompt acknowledgment.

Memorial gifts are tax-exempt, and will be reported as part of the final annual total of contributions to the local Heart Fund.

In announcing the appointment of Mrs. Pigue as Fulton County Memorial Gifts Chairman for the Heart Fund, Guerrant said that "we of the Kentucky Heart Association are deeply grateful to her for assuming this important responsibility in the fight against heart disease."

State Job Ruling Changed For Some Clerical Positions

State Personnel Commissioner Walter R. Gattis has announced that his department has instituted a policy of allowing experience to substitute for formal schooling in many clerical jobs in State government.

He said under the old rules many competent workers were turned away for lack of formal education even though they had, through experience, mastered to a great extent the type of job they were applying for with the State.

Most of the jobs affected are in messenger, typist and stenographic categories. He said that a high school education would not be a prerequisite for certain posts if a job applicant can show experience time comparable to the number of years of high school lacking.

Gattis cited one example of how the rule would help. He said his department had sought a switchboard operator several months back and had heard from an applicant with 15 years experience in such a position.

Yet, under the State's job specifications, she could not qualify as a switchboard operator because she had not graduated from high school. He said under the new rules they had hired the applicant and that she is doing a very competent job.

Gattis emphasized that the new policy would not affect the technical and supervisory positions. He said the new ruling placed more emphasis on the merit examinations given by the department.

According to the Kentucky Geological Survey at UK, at the beginning of 1960 there were 40,164 producing oil wells in the state. Kentucky's average production of crude oil is more than 327,000 barrels a day, with a total yearly value of 74 million dollars. Kentucky ranks 15th in the nation among oil producing states.

Absentee Law Needs Changing Says Governor

Kentucky's statewide elections last fall showed that some changes are necessary in the State's absentee voting law to eliminate opportunity for fraud or chicanery, Gov. Bert Combs declared in an address to the Lexington Lions Club.

"Free and honest elections are essential to the function of democratic government," the Governor declared, adding that "we must encourage voting and facilitate the casting of ballots, but with adequate safeguards."

Governor Combs said he plans to make recommendations to the next General Assembly for further safeguards in the absentee voting law, following a thorough study of the existing statutes.

"The absentee ballot law should be as nearly fool-proof as possible in all aspects of its administration," the Governor said. "It should, so far as humanly possible, guard against dishonest or fraudulent procedures and should be free from technicalities that make its administration difficult," he concluded.

Wright Nominated For Commissioner

Charles Wright of Fulton, Route 1, was one of two men nominated for appointment as commissioner of the Kentucky Soil and Water Resource Commission.

One of them will be appointed to that position by the Governor and the Commissioner of Conservation to serve a four-year term.
