President Will Address New Congress on January 7 -- May Discuss Peace Problems

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- President Roosevelt, who is expected to depart for the Far East on January 7, the day after he is scheduled to address the 76th Congress, said yesterday that he would discuss the possibility of peace discussions with the Japanese. The President said that he believed the Japanese would be interested in talks with the United States, provided they were conducted in a spirit of mutual respect.

Speaking at the White House, the President said: "I think it is very likely that the Japanese would be interested in peace discussions, provided they were conducted in a spirit of mutual respect." He added: "I believe that the Japanese would be interested in discussing peace, provided they were willing to come to the table with the United States."

GREETINGS TO ADOLF HITLER

"Banks and Railroads... that's a language Hitler understands, and all over the battle fronts of Europe and North Africa our Flying Fortresses are sending Def Fuehrer a message of "Greetings" similar to the ones shown above.

With our boys fighting our battles all over the world, we cannot aspect an old Christmas carol; yet, this Christmas more than any other calls for the remembrance of family and home. So if Santa Claus brings you a "list" on gifts this year, remember the words of one President: "It is not how all we want if our soldiers and sailors return to have all they want...."
