A year ago at Christmas our feet had barely touched the sand as we sailed in from all the corners of the world. Then we stood on the beach and saw the ocean before us. We had no choice but to fight, and we did. We were not defeated, we were not defeated, but we were not defeated.

The losses of our fighting men were not in vain. For the first half of the year was lightened by those actions in the Coral Sea, which held up the enemy's advance.

Our fighting men showed the stuff that is in them. They won those victories, but even so, the cost was high. It is truly a sober Christmas for us this year. There will be ghosts at many tables; there will be tears in many eyes.

It is the universal belief this Christmas that we are one Christmas nearer to victory. We shall again know the Joys of peace. We shall again feel the security we have always felt in our Nation and in our right to our safety. We shall again have the freedom to travel and to meet our friends.

Yes, these things which trouble us this Christmas shall pass. No such evil shall last for ever. We shall again know the Joys of peace. We shall again feel the security we have always felt in our Nation and in our right to our safety. We shall again have the freedom to travel and to meet our friends.

Washington, D.C. - The President, speaking today before the American Women's Service in the White House, said:

"I firmly believe there will be two thirds of the voluntary wage reduction this Christmas. But I believe it is the duty of every American to do his part in this great national effort."

The President also announced that the government would give $2,000,000 in gifts to American soldiers held in prison by the enemy. This is the largest amount given by the government in this connection since the war started.
