Preparoing their Final Order on

Louisville, Nov. 22.-A case-won for the railroad commission in Kentucky will be ordered by the Kentucky supreme court. It is o probable early. While it is possible that the final order will be issued in January, it is probable that the case will be held pending the court's review of the decision of the commission.

The railroad commission in Kentucky is one of the largest in the country, and its decisions are expected to set a precedent in other states. The case is one of the largest ever heard by the commission, and it will be of great importance in the future history of railroad regulation in Kentucky.

Nothing is known of the parties involved in the case, but it is expected that the commission will issue a statement on the subject in the near future.

The commission's decision will be one of the most important in its history, and it is expected that the case will be closely watched by railroad and public officials.

It is probable that the commission will issue its final order in January, and it is expected that the matter will be settled in a reasonable time.

Oddities I saw lately the following:

The leap year 1st necessity in or.

This is really a curious and odd situation, considering how many full moons occur in a year. The day is made up of the motion of the earth around the sun, not by man. The leap year was introduced to keep the calendar in step with the seasons. The Gregorian calendar, which is the one we use today, includes a leap year every four years, except for century years that are not divisible by 400. This system was developed in 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII to correct the calendar's drift in relation to the equinoxes and solstices. The date of March 21, which was the beginning of the year under the Roman calendar, is now moved to January 1.

The leap year also affects the length of the month of February. In a common year, February has 28 days, but in a leap year, it has 29 days. This is because the Earth takes about 365.25 days to orbit the Sun, and the extra 0.25 day is accounted for by the leap year. The leap year helps to keep the calendar in alignment with the solar year, which is the time it takes for the Earth to complete one orbit around the Sun.

The leap year is not just a matter of adding an extra day in February. It also affects other months, as the days of the week shift each year. For example, in a common year, the first day of October will fall on a Monday, but in a leap year, it will fall on a Tuesday. This is because the leap year causes the calendar to shift forward by one day of the week each year, which is why we have a 7-day repeating cycle in our calendar system.

The leap year also has implications for leap seconds, which are added to civil time to keep it aligned with astronomical time. Leap seconds are necessary because the Earth's rotation is slowing down, and the length of the day is gradually increasing. The extra day in February is just a reminder of the ongoing process of our planet's rotation.

The leap year is just one example of the many ways in which our calendar system is designed to be as accurate as possible. It is a testament to the ingenuity of our ancestors who devised this system to keep track of time and to align it with the cycles of nature. While the leap year may seem like a simple addition of an extra day, it is a profound example of the way in which we strive to understand and control the passage of time.

THE MYSTERY OF THE LEAP YEAR

Under the heading "Curious and Oddities" I saw lately the following: "The leap year is not a matter of adding an extra day in February. The Fisher Gang.

The communication in this issue of The Register from an "Honorable Republican" purports to give us the salient features of the late actions of the Fisher Gang, who are said to have had the audacity to make quicker than lightning to the new, that which is in the nature of a kind of a publishable and desirable combination and isn't the republican ticket, it is supposed, who has, of course, a number of things to tell the voters. The various questions, of course, are to be brought before the voters. It is not supposed to be that all of the republican tickets will have a very damaging effect upon the political prospects of the Fisher Gang, but it is supposed that there will be a very damaging effect upon the political prospects of the Fisher Gang. It is supposed that this will be a great blessing to the voters and to the people of the city. It is also supposed that the Fisher Gang would be very much benefited by the fact that they have had a very damaging effect upon the political prospects of the Fisher Gang. It is supposed that this will be a great blessing to the voters and to the people of the city.
