The first annual Henry I. Siegel Day proved to be the great community undertaking that it was heralded to be. With George Cloys of Union City representing the Governor of Tennessee Buford Ellington and personal greetings read from Governor Bert T. Combs of Kentucky, a score of other dignitaries extended greetings and best wishes to the Siegel family for the contribution the garment industry has made to Fulton and South Fulton. But more than that! It was a day of fun and relaxation for the management, employees and merchants of the twin cities.

Talent from the Siegel factories, from Radio Station WFUL and from Bruceton, Tenn. entertained the guests all afternoon. Radio Station WFUL broadcast the entire afternoon's activities and Station Manager Mrs. Paul Westpheling was assisted in presenting the talent and guests by Mrs. Hendon Wright and Mrs. Nelson Tripp.

Here you see pictured some of the fun and merriment at the giant picnic held under a huge tent on the grounds of the Siegel Factory in South Fulton.

More Talent!

More Fun!

The Driver's Prayer

With the long Labor Day holiday to be celebrated this week-end and with our beloved youngsters scampering off to the schools all over the Nation, we think that death might stalk the highways less if we daily recited the Driver's Prayer. Clip this for your wallet, or paste it on the sun-visor of your automobile, but wherever you keep it, let's ask that the Almighty Father give each of us the courage and the vision each day to consider the lives of others as we sit behind the wheels of an automobile. Here's the Prayer:

Grant me O Sacred Heart a steady hand and watchful eye. From the evils of fire and all calamity.
That no one shall be hurt as I Teach me to use my car for others' need.
Thou gavest life, I pray no act of Nor miss through love of undue speed.
May take away or mar that gift of Thine. The beauty of the world; that thus I may Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear With joy and courtesy go on my way.

Generous Sam Presents Food To Nursing Homes

Sam Siegel, whose kindness and generosity to area citizens has become one of the best kept secrets of his staff and employees, gets something of a "double cross" from the News editors today.

Last Saturday when Sam's guests had eaten their fill of barbecued pork and mutton, barbecued chicken, ham, slaw, fresh tomatoes and all the trimmings he wanted to share his happiness with some people who could not attend the party.

So, the News editors, laden with boxes of all those delicious viands made the rounds of several nursing homes in the area until the wee hours Saturday and presented Sunday dinners to many elderly people in the twin cities.

Sam wanted to, but the News is not permitting this to be a top secret this time.

GRANTED!

Herbert Patton, 1961 graduate of Fulton High School, has been awarded a basketball scholarship to Kentucky State College in Frankfort, Kentucky. The grant covers board, room and fees during the school year 1961-62.

By Dwain McIntosh

When farmers faltered and some failed in the rugged, thin-soiled land "Between-the-Rivers" during days of prohibition, many farmers turned to riskier but more profitable pursuits—making moonshine whiskey.

Tangled growths of underbrush, dense and dark under virgin stands of giant oak and hickory,

We hope that most of you had the opportunity last Saturday to either attend in person or listen on radio to the events of the highly successful picnic at the Henry I. Siegel Company. You know that the Siegel family staged the event to honor their employees and the merchants in the twin cities and I can say without fear of contradiction that it was a wonderful affair and one that created an untold amount of goodwill not only for the Siegel Company, but also for the merchants of the twin cities who are the beneficiaries of the huge payroll expended by this firm every two weeks.

It was the first time, to my knowledge, that such a community affair has been staged in the twin cities with a single employee as the host and I'm here to say that the occasion on Saturday should be the first of many such events to be planned in the future. In fact as I stood there, so many times before the microphone and looked out into the audience and saw so many wonderful people enjoying themselves, I thought that the twin city area would make

Steamer Avalon To Come Chugging Into Hickman To Cruise Sept. 6th

Shades of Huckleberry Finn! Here comes the River Steamer Avalon and it is heading right for Hickman, Kentucky! This big four-deck, semi-glass enclosed steamer—the only one that travels seven rivers—will pull into Hickman on Wednesday, September 6 and will be there for one day under the sponsorship of the Hickman Jaycees.

With a capacity of 1370 passengers, the big ship is heated in the winter and air-conditioned in the summer. Other features include a spacious Ballroom Deck, seven-piece orchestra, tables and chairs and a wide variety of refreshments.

The fun will begin with an after-school cruise from 4:00 till 6:00 p. m. Coupons will be given out in school entitling the children and their parents and teachers to be admitted for only $.60. The regular admission price is $.75 and $1.50.

The famous Moonlight Excursion will get under way at 9:00 p. m. Advance tickets may be bought at several locations in Hickman and Fulton.

Now what better way is there to view the beauty of our own Mississippi River than from the deck of a Sternwheeler that is authentic from her giant paddlewheel on up to her twin smoke stacks and three-toned whistle.

Don't miss this exciting journey into the River life of by-gone days. Be in Hickman September 6 and bring the whole family—children under five ride free!

He was recently named director of the new Garden Products division in Mountain View and has been dividing his time between the local plant and the Mountain View headquarters since June.

Grabill, his wife, Gloria, and their son, Gordon, moved Tuesday to their new home in California. For the past year, they have made their home on Hillcrest Avenue in Country Club Courts.

Other action taken at the meeting included a decision to change team play dates from Fridays to Mondays and to drop the club dues of ten dollars. Each member will be required to pay a one dollar Association fee and a fee of four dollars will be charged for each tournament.

Representing Fulton at the meeting were Mrs. Buren Rogers, vice president of the Association and Mrs. Maxwell McDade, 1962 Golf Chairman.

'Between-The-Rivers' Noted For Iron, Moonshine In By-Gone Days

(Because of the wide interest in the recent meetings of Kentucky, Tennessee and federal officials to discuss the proposed national recreation area in the Kentucky Lake-Barkley Lake vicinity, State Newsman, Dwain McIntosh, delved into the history of the area and came up with the following feature article, which will be continued in next week's paper.)

And a reputation that has stuck down through the years was born. Moonshiners on the long, green stretch of land that separated the rivers saw no "wrong" in brewing and peddling their wares. They contended that it was their corn, they had raised it and they could do with it as they pleased—whether selling it by the bushel or by the gallon.

Of course axe-wielding Federal agents didn't follow that line of logic. They smashed hundreds of provided necessary cover for illicit stills that sprang up in the Western Kentucky wilderness. People in the area between the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers plied their new-found trade with such pride and daring that their bootleg booze was soon labeled as "the best in the world."

So, in their own independent way, they contributed greatly to the rich historical tradition of Trigg and Lyon counties.

The past of the area holds other interesting stories—the taming of a wild frontier by settlers, the boom and bust of a colorful pig iron industry and transition to a national wildlife refuge.

still and made arrests that led to prison terms for many. The whiskey-makers were not easily discouraged, however, for they still had that reputation to uphold, not to mention a chance for quick money. Some bootleggers served as many as three or four terms in Federal penitentiaries.

But time has played the leading role. Few stills are producing whiskey anymore; fires are dead and ashes cold in the ruins of huge furnaces that once filled the skies with boiling black smoke and at night with the glow from molten ore.

The Kentucky Woodlands Wildlife Refuge, which covers about 65,000 acres of the 140,000-acre area, is about the only bright spot in the present over-all picture between-the-rivers.

The rugged terrain and lack of highways, railroads and community facilities within the area limit its industrial potential. The soil is poor; quality of timber does not measure up to par for commercial purposes. No minerals have been found which can be exploited economically, and the whole area has been sparsely developed.

But now the area, about 40 miles long and from six to 12 miles wide, is under consideration as a national recreation area. People of the area can look forward optimistically—tourism is the new hope.

A national recreation area could hardly be more ideally situated. Located between Kentucky Lake and what will be lower Barkley Lake when Barkley Dam is completed, the area will have about 300 miles of cove-studded shoreline fronting on the two reservoirs. It will be easily accessible by boat, conventional highways and the new Interstate Highway System, and within 500 miles of 70 million Americans.

Besides the wildlife refuge already owned by the Federal Government, the Tennessee Valley Authority owns additional acreage in Kentucky. And the TVA, after an extensive study of the proposal, Continued on Page Four

Berlin Crisis Already Keenly Felt In Kentucky

All of Kentucky received a hard jolt last weekend when Washington suddenly announced that 2,900 Army reservists—comprising the 100th Division—were being called to active duty for at least a year and sent to Fort Polk, Louisiana to activate that Post as an Army training center.

The call to active duty affects Division units in communities throughout Kentucky, including Clinton, Mayfield, Murray and Paducah here in the Purchase. Members of these units are scattered throughout the Purchase, and include a few here in Fulton and immediate vicinity.

The impact of the impending Berlin crisis will be felt keenly in Kentucky, indeed, although Kentucky is by no means the only State containing many Reservists and National Guardsmen being called to duty.

It is no easy task to leave one's job, home and family for duty in distant points, even though one signs up for such duty in case of emergency—and hopes it never comes. Every remaining citizen of the Purchase should pitch in and help these men and their families during their coming periods of adjustment and readjustment; these men are shouldering a burden that belongs just as much to those of us who remain at home. Certainly no one knows this better than their fellow reservists who are in other units than the 100th, and whose call has not yet come.

There may be many severe hardships ahead for a lot of men and their families if the Berlin crisis worsens and hundreds of thousands are called to active duty to points far more distant than Fort Polk. But personal hardships aside, most Reservists feel that now is as good a time as any to stand firm ground in the face of Communist threats and make them put up or shut up. If we don't do it now we are going to have to do it sooner or later.

Good Boy, Happy: Root For The Young Fellow!

"It would be a pretty sad circumstance in this country if we didn't root for new young fellows coming along to do things better than the men of the past", Happy Chandler is reported to have said to a reporter in Washington DC recently.

Happy most likely would not want this quotation applied to his political aspirations, but we'd like to preserve his quotation for this purpose. It fits nicely.

pose. It fits nicely.

Chandler was replying to the reporter's question as to whether or not he (Chandler) was rooting for Maris and Mantle to beat Babe Ruth's home record of 60.

As he replied, he was "for the young fellows coming along".

Your Neighbor Is Everybody

SERMONETTE OF THE WEEK

By Richard Madden OCD, Author of Father Madden's Life of Christ

Men are rarely what they seem. They appear lighthearted, noisy, independent. They shout, laugh and slap backs. They are actors. But often in the deep corners of their souls, they harbor tiny little bubbles of emptiness, a vacuum of loneliness that cries to be filled.

Modern man is lonely because he has loved himself too much. And this bitter kink of love easily turns against itself. Only Christlike love, directed outward, away from self can remedy this. When Christ said, Love thy Neighbor, He was not inflicting a hardship on us; He was only giving us the means for greater happiness. He was laying out the way to a fuller life. So if men have chosen to hate others, then they have, in fact, hated themselves.

Day after day the same old story of injury and hatred, and the old wounds of a bleeding world are torn open anew. In typical blindness we forget that when we destroy love in others, we destroy it in ourselves. All that is not love is death. Which is why Christ commanded us to love. He wants to save us from ourselves.

What about our neighbor? He is not the man who lives next door. He is every man. He is all sizes and nationalities and colors. He is the man who precedes you into the last parking space. He is the man who puts the parking ticket under your windshield wiper. Your neighbor is everybody; and although he is not necessarily to sleep. Well, just as we love ourselves, be liked, he is to be loved.

And how are you supposed to love him? The way you love yourself. You make sure that you are well fed and well watered three times a day. You are certain that you get enough that is the way we are to love our neighbor.

If you think it is hard, you're right. It is hard, but not too hard. Besides the only way we can make something of ourselves is by doing hard things, because, when you examine it, the hard things are usually the right things.

It is love that makes heroes and heroines in our day. It is love that promoted the 23-year-old airline stewardess to look for something heroic to do with her life. It is love that made her carry through her resolution, that sent her to a leper colony in the filth of Korea, and then made her write back, "A few months ago I was bored serving cocktails on airplanes to people with well-manicured finger nails; today I am happy serving soup to people with no fingers." It is love that begets greatness, and it is this kind of greatness that begets the sheer joy of living.

We look around us in the world and we find pain and suffering. But God made this world. Why? Simple. So that each one of us, by our love for one another, by our charity and by our dedication, might add our finest touch to His great masterpiece.

100 Years Ago This Week

An historical review of THE CIVIL WAR DAY-BY-DAY
(Material is from publication of exactly one hundred years ago; original wording from references in the Library of Congress, Washington. Reporting in the papers was usually very one-sided; we seek to be fair in coverage and preserve a national balance. . . . ED.)

BY WILLIAM H. McHENRY

By William H. McHenry
Fifth week in August, 1861

The Civil War had become big business by mid-summer of 1861. A nation geared to peace had found itself divided and plunged into war. In the North, every shipyard, iron mill, clothing factory, arms plants and boiler factory was busy turning out the materials of war. In the South, there had been few such factories, but the Confederate war effort, guided by such men as Robert E. Lee, was busy training men to make canisters, haversacks, and repair rifles.

Every tinsmith, tanner, shoemaker, carpenter, blacksmith, tailor, gunsmith, saddler, miller and such were conscripted to work for the military. Powder mills were being built railway shops were being expanded, and Lee was asking for some system to the Southern railroads which would organize the freight and transport services.

There had been many unemployed workers in the North. These men either went into the army, or they became factory workers. The Shenandoah Valley, which was to be the "Grainery of the South," had a labor shortage. During the spring of 1861, the men had formed military companies and had gone off to fight at Manassas. The families left at home struggled to harvest the wheat and cultivate the corn. Virginia counties requested that their men be allowed to come home long enough to plow and plant for the next wheat crop.

Kentucky, during late August, was still officially neutral. Kentuckians were in both armies, but so far the state had managed to keep both the Union and Confederate troops beyond the border. However, it was just a matter of time . . . everyone knew that sooner or later one of the armies would invade Kentucky.

Just South of the Kentucky line in Tennessee where the Tennessee River and the Cumberland Rivers were only a few miles apart, the Confederates were building Ft.

Henry and Donaldson. Cumberland Gap was fortified by the south, and Island No. 10 in the Mississippi just at the northwestern corner of Tennessee. Union forces were building up at Cairo, in nearby Missouri, and across the river from Paducah, in Kentucky. Whoever grabbed Kentucky would be assured of the Kentucky produce for the war effort . . . and that would prove to be considerable.

Cairo, at the junction of the Ohio and the Mississippi Rivers, was considered by military men to be "the most vital spot in the nation" that summer of 1861. History was to prove the truth of that prophecy.

A Confederate soldier, writing home of his life in the army, said "The Yankees have everything just perfect. Guns, ammunition, food, tents, haversacks, bayonets, . . . everything is perfect, and they furnish their men with the best . . . and we furnish ourself from the Yankees!"

North and South, the war was beginning to come home to the people. Every town, large or small, tried to have its company enrolled in the forces. Some units would suffer little during the four years of war, others would be almost wiped out in a single charge. Most companies enlisted for the war and found its ranks reduced month by month, to be increased now and then by enlistment, and to finally end the war with few of the original men left to win or lose.

During the present Civil War Centennial, one of the reactivated units is the "Warren Rifles" of Front Royal, Virginia. The history of the original Warren Rifles is fairly typical of such companies in either army. It is a history of bravery, a self-denial, suffering, and death. The usual such company as organized in 1861 contained 65 men. The local counties usually furnished the sum of $600 for equipping these men with uniform, haversack, blanket, shoes, etc. (But not with a rifle, that would be furnished by the State)

Information Booths Are Success In Kentucky Cities; One Here Soon

In the very near future, Fulton will have its own information booth for tourists and local people alike, located, probably, on Lake Street near the railroad tracks. The booth will be an old Illinois Central caboose, donated to the city by the IC company.

Several other Kentucky towns have seen the need for an information booth. The story of one of these towns—Somerset—is given below.

Somerset is reaping real advantages from the tourist information center operated by the local chamber of commerce north of the city on U. S. 27.

Instances of tourists buying clothing downtown or staying a week because of the good fishing are cited by Mrs. Harold Squier, who operates the booth. She also points out that new motels are being constructed to accommodate tourists.

Mrs. Squier quoted one business-man operating vacation cottages near Somerset as saying a couple staying there noticed a sale at a local clothing store and made $80 worth of purchases. Another couple staying at the same place, bought $50 worth of clothing for their 14-year-old daughter.

Mike Layman, chairman of the Chamber's Tourist Committee, gave this rundown on benefits received locally:

1. The detailed information supplied tourists encourages them to stay in Somerset area at facilities in the price range they desire.

2. Tourists staying in an area purchase clothing, food, gasoline, etc.

3. Additional tourists bring on new construction projects. Somerset now has two new motels under construction.

4. The Chamber discovers what new facilities are needed by listening to requests of tourists.

Mrs. Squier, secretary-treasurer of the Chamber, does regular work for the organization while operating the booth. Thus the cost to the Chamber for the booth is practically nil. When tourists stop to inquire about local facilities Mrs. Squier is ready with the facts.

She has a three-page typed list of accommodations giving the

This amount was less than $10 per man.

During the four years of war there were 120 men enrolled at different times in the Warren Rifles. 27 were killed in action, and three died of other causes. This shows a death-rate of 25 percent killed or died in service. Of the wounded there is no record.

Usually during the Civil War there were two wounded for each man killed. That would mean that for the Warren Rifles, at least fifty men were wounded. And the "Warren Rifles" was just a typical Civil War outfit . . . North or South.

name, address and types of rooms available. She then gives a rundown of additional recreational facilities nearby.

"Tourists are in two classifications—Those who know what they want to see and those who want to know what they can see," Mrs. Squier said. "We serve both as best we can."

"We're trying very hard to build our tourist business on repeaters—persons who are so happy with us, getting what they were promised that they will come back again and again," she said.

The Somerset formula could be used throughout the state, Chamber officials there point out. They have learned that tourists will seldom stop inside a city to seek travel information from local persons but will stop at a clearly-marked roadside booth.

"We're proud to be an example of what should be done to stretch the tourist dollar from one border of Kentucky to the other," Tourist Committee Chairman Layman says, adding that the extra tourist dollars are a big boost for the Somerset economy.

Combs Proclaims Seat Belt Week, In Kentucky

Gov. Bert Combs has proclaimed Sept. 1-7 Seat Belt Week in Kentucky.

The proclamation urged citizens to work with the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Safety Council, the American Medical Association and the Public Health Service in saving lives through the use of these lifesaving devices.

Careful studies have shown, Combs noted, that seat belts greatly reduce injury and death when accidents occur. He said increased traffic is resulting in an increasing number of traffic accidents each year.

Golfing, for all practical purposes is not a spectator sport, in that people don't go to see the players perform. It is an individual sport, sometimes so contagious as to be dangerous. When one member of a family starts battling that little ball around, the other members of the family start to wondering what is so fascinating about the game to keep a person going back again and again for more fun and in some cases more punishment. At the Country Club this summer the members have witnessed golf orphans and widows taking up the game either for protection or for self defense.

It's been lots of fun in the all too few times that we've been at the Country Club to see whole families totting golf bags and joining the more avid members of the family in the sometimes relaxing, sometimes frustrating sport.

A goodly number of the small fry have started playing golf and already they're getting adept at the art. And thus engaging in the sport has made the pastime a family affair.

This past week we saw Nicholas Kish and his two sons playing golf together and from the conversation we heard the young fellows are giving dad a hard way to go. The Kishes are visiting here from New York and have had a long and wonderful vacation with the Clyde Williams, junior and senior, but we suspect that nary a day goes by that some member of the family isn't pursuing the elusive little ball.

We saw the W. R. Butts out there too and while W. R. Butts could take on as many as four rounds a day his fair lady was making every effort to stay along with him. The Butts' are visiting family and friends in Hickman and Fulton and like all returning home folks they seemed to be having the time of their lives.

Of course the regular members of the country club are fast making family affairs of the golf course and avid golfer Mary is doing some practice teaching at Fulton High School in the Science department and we'll bet he can answer all twenty-one questions about science without even a clue.

Kathryn and Carlos Lannom, down Hickman way, have returned from a perfectly wonderful vacation in one of America's most scenic spots, Hershey, Pa. Carlos went to attend a national gathering of the book company for which he is West Kentucky representative and it was nice to have Kathryn go along with him, and we imagine she didn't need any coaxing.

Mary Nelle and Doc Wright are taking off this week-end for a long anticipated visit to Corpus Christi, Texas where they will visit with their son and his wife, the former Ruth Caldwell. From the reports we get from Texas was the younger Wrights are loving that great, big, sprawling State and are planning a trip into Mexico when the "in-laws" get there. Don, you know is a Navy pilot and is flying some kind of a high sounding plane that sounds like something out of science fiction.

Mrs. Glenn Veneklasen and Mrs. Nelson Tripp were hostesses last Thursday morning to a delightful morning coffee at the Tripp home on Maiden Street.

The party honored those Ferry-Morse wives who are being transferred either to or from Fulton. Sharing the honors were Mrs. Les Crosby and Mrs. Rex Grabill, who are moving to Mountain View, California; Mrs. Earl Campbell and Mrs. Joe Sanders who have been transferred here from California, and Mrs. Bob Morgan who has moved back to Fulton from Mountain View.

Coffee, homemade nutbread, cookies and assorted mints were served from a beautifully appointed table, overlaid with a cutwork cloth and centered with an arrangement of multi-colored snapdragons.

The guest list was limited to Ferry-Morse wives.

Miss Jean Todd, bride-elect, was feted at two pre-nuptial parties at Union City last week. A kitchen shower was given in the home of Mrs. Preston-Griggs of Union City last Thursday night and a beautifully planned dinner was given by the wedding attendants on Wednesday.

A pink and white color scheme was carried out in the decorations and refreshments at the Kitchen shower. An arrangement of pink phlox and dahlias interspersed with greenery and centered with two white lovebirds was placed on the entrance table and over the archway hung white wedding bells from which cascaded white satin streamers.

Miss Todd received many nice gifts from the friends and relatives, gathered there to honor her.

Following the delicious luncheon, the guest enjoyed bridge at three tables. High scorer for the afternoon was Mrs. Billy Homra and Mrs. Gene Hatfield was second high.

On Tuesday night of last week, Pamela Greer and David Long were hosts to a "Character Party" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Greer of the Union City Highway.

Fifteen guests came, each dressed as their favorite character and other guests had to guess who they were.

Refreshments of hot dogs, cokes and potato chips were served.

Foster Story Season Ends In Two Weeks

Nearly two weeks remain in which to take advantage of Kentucky's cool summer nights by attending a performance of "The Stephen Foster Story" at Bardstown's J. Dan Talbott Amphitheatre.

The Stephen Foster Story has now reached the halfway point of what is rapidly proving to be another successful season. Labor Day, September 4, will mark the final 1961 performance of the musical drama.

This performance will be the 193rd since the drama's 1959 premiere on the grounds of My Old Kentucky Home State Park.

Critics have acclaimed "The Stephen Foster Story" as author Paul Green's best.

Green, a Pulitzer Prize winner and pioneer playwright of outdoor historical plays, has written a number of successful symphonic dramas. Among his creations are: "The Lost Colony," now being presented at Manteo, North Carolina for the twenty-first season; "Wilderness Road," which ran for four summers in Berea, Kentucky; "The Common Glory" at Williamsburg, Virginia; "The Seventeenth Star," written especially for the Ohio State Sesquicentennial celebration; "The Confederacy," which played two seasons at Virginia Beach, Virginia; and "The Founders," written for the Jamestown celebration in Virginia.

Engineers Say 1-24 Could Run Across Dam Near Cairo

Interstate Highway 24, long a subject of controversy, could be run across a proposed dam on the Ohio River near Cairo, Ill., Army engineers say.

Representatives of the engineers told a public hearing Tuesday night federal law says interstate highways should use proposed or existing facilities for crossing rivers.

The proposed dam — which would replace existing Dams 52 and 53 — would span the Ohio from Mound City, Ill. to a point in Kentucky almost due north of Cairo.

One of the proposals for 1-24 would run the highway through Cairo about 40 miles west of here. Officials of Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Tennessee have been unable to agree on a route for the highway.

Col. James Lewis of the Louisville District Engineers said before the dam could be built Congress would have to authorize a full study.

has indicated that it is sympathetic to the plan and would turn over its land for that purpose.

Another one-third of the proposed area lies in Stewart County, Tenn.

In a report concerning its study of the proposal, the Tennessee Valley Authority states:

"As a national project, the Between-the-Lakes area will be a travel objective for millions. It will have a sustaining influence on State and privately operated recreation attractions on the west shore of Kentucky Lake and on the east shore of Barkley."

"It will stimulate tourist and recreation travel to a far greater extent than would any number of private developments within the area. Its development and use for recreation will be conducive to more industrial development at Calvert City, Ky., and elsewhere in the vicinity."

Both Gov. Bert Combs of Kentucky and Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee have heartily endorsed the proposal. It has also been approved by the National Park Service. Now the U. S. Department of Interior is studying the plan.

Combined with facilities at three Kentucky State parks—Kentucky Dam Village State Park, Kentucky Lake State Park and Cherokee State Park—and Paris Landing State Park in Tennessee, a national recreation area between-the-lakes would undoubtedly make Western Kentucky and Western Tennessee one of the leading playgrounds in inland America.

Quick action on the proposal will allow enough time for many of the significant historic relics to be salvaged before the waters of Barkley Lake climb the banks of the Cumberland and creep into the hollows and lowlands.

Rising water will cover traces of Indians who roamed the river valley centuries ago—from the era of mastodon hunters who came to North America from Asia to the age of the Middle Mississippi Culture Indians who lived in the area until the first contact with white men.

Before white settlers first penetrated the never-never land of wild game, it served for some time as a hunting ground for the Indians. The Shawnees lived north of the Cumberland River, which they called the Swanee; and the Cherokees lived south of the Tennessee River, known in those long-ago days as the Cherokee River.

Bountiful supplies of game led the first white settlers to ford the Cumberland in the late 1700's and carve out a home in the lonely wilderness. The first few pioneers naturally found the bear, deer, geese, buffalo, grouse, ducks and wild turkeys to their liking. But word spread quickly, and soon the ringing of other pioneer axes interrupted their solitude.

Almost a century passed before the dwindling game and limited croplands forced the people to seek other means of livelihood. Again the resources provided an answer. Hills of the river divide were filled with iron ore, and stands of oak and hickory hardwood provided enough charcoal to ignite the pig iron industry.

Iron became king. Thomas Tennessee Watson set the wheels in motion in 1841. The industry was to thrive for almost three-quarters of a century. He secured a patent from the State of Kentucky on unclaimed lands between the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, and extending from the Tennessee line to the mouth of Sugar Creek. Then he bought additional private property west of the Cumberland and east of the Tennessee.

Appropriately the furnace he built on the bank of the Cumberland across from Rock Castle was named Empire.

The following year he sold a half-interest in his enterprise to a fellow Tennessean, Daniel Hillman, Jr. These two industrial pioneers built another furnace in what is now the wildlife refuge and labeled it Fulton. Pig iron production began to get a foothold.

But Watson died in 1846, and Hillman became sole owner of all these holdings. Today the only reminder of Watson and his industrial pioneering is a 15-foot white marble monument which marks his grave on the riverbank near the site of old Empire Furnace.

After Mammoth Furnace was built on Hurricane Creek by two Frenchmen in 1844, the fourth furnace, often referred to as the "granddaddy of them all," was constructed not far from Empire. Completed about 1846, Center Furnace was the pride of Hillman and his young son, T. T. (Tenny) Hillman, who was later to become one of the magnates of the iron and steel industry.

Even from the beginning Center Furnace operated on a grand scale. The Hillmans employed about 100 men at the furnace. Chinese coolies, said to have been the first brought to the United States, and Negro slaves dug the ore from the hills.

Because of the success of Center Furnace, the town of Hematite was born. It provided a post office, commissary, public buildings and housing for those who worked at the furnace. Mules and oxen pulled creaking carts loaded with pig iron along a rail line to waiting steamboats on the Cumberland. The line eventually became known as the "Silver Trail," for not only did the metal go down that route, but the paymaster rode the trail to pay hard-earned wages in silver.

A slight increase was shown in all seven city schools, with South Fulton Elementary showing the largest increase. The biggest single grade in the Fulton system is the fifth grade, combining members at Terry-Norman, Carr and Milton, with a total of seventy-seven pupils.

Total enrollment, arranged according to the number of students, is as follows: South Fulton Elementary, 641; Carr Elementary, 292; South Fulton High, 225; Fulton High, 195; Rosenwald, 182; Terry-Norman, 101; Milton Elementary, 89.

Fulton Education Association Meets At Fulton High

The Fulton Education Association met last Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in Fulton High School with Mrs. M. W. Haws, presiding.

Mrs. Haws gave a warm welcome to the new teachers coming into the system. She gave a complete report of the Kentucky Education Association Leadership Conference which she attended at Murray State College August 6 through 9.

Committees were appointed to meet the needs of the local faculty and school system. The following committees and chairmen were named and others will be named as the need arises.

Teacher Educational and Professional standards — Mr. Charles Thomas.

Ethics Committee — Miss Mary Forsee.

Legislative Committee — Miss Mary Martin.

Finance and Salary Committee — Mr. J. M. Martin.

Program Committee — Mrs. Elizabeth White.

Education Reporter — Mr. Charles Jackson.

A complete plan for the growth and development of the local school organization was presented by Mrs. Haws. Five major goals were introduced and the efforts of the organization will be toward the accomplishment of these goals. They were:

- (1) 100 per cent membership in National Education Association.
- (2) Three programs presented for group participation.
- (3) Continued efforts toward the education of the general public in the support of the sales tax.
- (4) Professional growth of all teachers.
- (5) Personal growth.

An example of the cooperation and enthusiasm of the faculty of Fulton School system was displayed when they accomplished their first goal for the year, 100 per cent membership in the National Education Association. This was the first time in the history of the Fulton Education Association that all members have joined the national organization.

Kentucky is the 24th state to pay a veterans bonus. Twenty-three other states paid $666,000 checks amounting to over 2.1-2 billion before Kentucky entered the field. The Bluegrass State's addition to these figures will be approximately 400,000 checks totaling around $137 million.

some kind of national history if about once a year the whole town got together and broke bread together, and had a "one big happy family affair" it would solve many a problem between merchant, civic leaders and employees.

Churches have such gatherings periodically. Civic and fraternal groups have them, too. P-TA groups, homemaker groups and recreational groups join often to eat together and have fellowship together, but it is not often, perhaps never that an event has been held where all groups of people and friends band together and get to know each other on levels outside of their own groups.

Such an event, family style, community-wise, would not be an easy undertaking as the one last Saturday was not. It took a lot of hard work on the part of several people to get the program together and to prepare that much food, but it was done and it was such fun. The merchants who attended got to meet their customers away from behind the counter. Public officials got to mingle with their constituents without the onus of asking for votes and all the employees got to meet their employers away from the hurly-burly of a work day. Many barriers were broken that previously existed and I feel sure that the Siegel Company reached a milestone in their industry to stage such an event.

Of course, I think the success of the picnic Saturday was the fact that people attended as guests and not as customers. I'm sure that the party cost the Siegel Company a pretty penny, but that's the way Sam Siegel wanted it. But if we could plan a community picnic, with everybody attending as guests and not having to buy a ticket would turn a neat trick from a public relation point of view. So many of us in business spend a sizeable sum each other entertaining from a business standpoint and I just thought that if we all chipped in and bought the food and drinks for our valued friends and customers it wouldn't hit anybody too hard. Do you think?

Somehow I keep thinking that such an undertaking would be a good project for a club like the Junior Chamber of Commerce. These young men and their families have the energy and the vigor to get such an undertaking under way and with all of us pitching in, family-like, it could be the greatest influence we can imagine to make new friends, re-new old ones and sit with a sandwich and a pop bottle in hand and talk to our heart's content.

Our neighboring city of Fancy Farm undertakes an event each year such as the one we've mentioned. However, a small charge is made for the food and justifiably so because that's what the event is intended for, a benefit project. But our thought differs from the Fancy Farm picnic in that we think we should look upon the affair as a "family gathering" and you don't have to pay for your plate as in other money raising projects. To suggest such an undertaking surely leaves many questions and puts obstacles in the way of its fulfillment, but I think it could be done each year and the first thing you know we will all know each other on a first name calling basis and get to know each other as neighbors, friends and help-mates.

I promised myself, for a lot of reasons, that I wasn't going to go headlong into a lot of hard working projects for awhile, but just as Paul and the children imagined, it was only a fleeting thought. Let's dream on this for awhile, especially you Jaycees-without-a-big-project at the moment and see what happens. Merchants and individuals could issue free tickets to their customers and friends and that's one way to keep the free meal department from getting out of hand.

Anybody with me on this idea?

The recent visit of the "Chest Mobile" in Fulton County accounted for 2,117 X-rays of Fulton Countians, the Health Department announced this week. According to the Department, "some of the pictures were 'good', some were 'suspicious' and some turned out just like the person being x-rayed thought they would, as they were victims of a chest disease".

The mobile x-ray unit was donated to the County by the Kentucky Elks Association; The Health Department also tendered this week public thanks for assistance to the many ladies who aided in registrations, and to John Joe Campbell for advance planning in Fulton, and to the Woman's Club in Hickman for their assistance there.

As all you readers probably know, that his writer has said many times that I have a fear of spiders, small, middle-size and the veiled at the huge webs, woven by them. It was covered by the fog, and when the sun came out I'll have to admit they work and work hard to accomplish such a task. Did any of you notice?

Twin-City Politics To Reach Peak In Late September

Politics in the Twin-Cities should really be hot and heavy this fall, as both Fulton and South Fulton residents will go to the polls to elect the men to run their city governments.

The Fulton election will be in mid-September and the South Fulton vote will be taken one month later on October 17. September 16 is the deadline for filing in South Fulton.

The Tennessee residents will be voting on six councilmen and a mayor and at present the estimate for the number of people who will run for councilman runs as high as fourteen. No estimate has been given on the number in the mayor's race.

To qualify for election to either of these posts, a person has to file a petition signed by at least twenty-five registered, qualified voters of South Fulton.

The final selection of the councilmen and mayor in South Fulton will be made in the general election to be held December 5. The Fulton general election will be in November.

Livestock Exhibition Attracts Many Entries For Coming Mid-South Fair

A record-breaking $67,000 in livestock premiums are being offered this year at the Mid-South Fair, Sept. 22-30. Premiums for the entire Fair total over $80,000.

The special feature of the livestock exposition will be the Dixie National Register of Merit Hereford Show, Sept. 28-29. It's the only one of its kind to be shown at any fair this year.

To the Hereford breeder, a register of merit award represents the very best of that breed. A Hereford may earn such a rating only after it or its offspring wins a certain number of quality points over a period of time.

Walter Dilatash, chairman of the Mid-South Fair's livestock committee said, "This show represents the highest honor a polled or horned Hereford can attain."

"Through the first two weeks in August 109 head have been entered in the Hereford show. Usually we don't receive entries for any of the cattle before the middle of August so we're quite pleased with the response," said Mr. Dilatash.

In all there will be eight breeds of cattle exhibited, four beef breeds and four dairy breeds. In addition to the Herefords the best classes include, Angus, Shorthorn and Santa Gertrudis.

Among the dairy breeds, Jersey, Guernsey, Holstein, and Brown Swiss entries will be shown in both the open and junior classes.

There will be halter and performance classes for registered Quarter Horses. An Open Cutting Contest will be featured with a $500 purse plus entry fees of $25 per horse to be added to the purse.

Classes for swine and sheep will round out the livestock exposition.

Health Department Urges Residents Take Polio Shots

The Kentucky State Department of Health recommends the continued use of the Salk polio vaccine, according to a statement made today by Dr. Russell E. Teague, commissioner of health.

The recent announcement by the Public Health Service that an oral vaccine for protection against Type I polio virus has met National Institute of Health standards and has been licensed is most encouraging, Dr. Teague stated. However, he pointed out, this oral vaccine will not protect against Type II and Type III polio and therefore Salk vaccine is still essential for full protection.

The Public Health Service has announced that the oral vaccine they now have on hand will be released only to areas where an outbreak known to be of Type I disease occurs. Even in these areas individuals receiving oral vaccine will need the added protection of Salk vaccine as a safeguard against the other two common types of polio.

Though the development of satisfactory oral vaccine for Type I polio may well represent a vital step toward wiping out polio, the final answer has not yet been reached. Work is continuing toward the development of oral vaccine to protect against Type II and Type III polio.

announced today by R. O. Wilson, Chairman, State Agricultural Stablization and Conservation Committee.

The Chairman explained that barley producers diverting a share of their acreage will receive payments for the diversion and they also will qualify for price support. At the same time, they will be making an important contribution to the Nation in adjusting grain supplies and reducing Government costs.

A barley producer can forego the diversion payments and still qualify for price support if he elects to devote the diverted acreage to one or more of these crops: Castor beans, guar, safflower, sunflower, or sesame. Adjustment in the diversion payment can be made if only a part of the diverted acreage is so used. Special program provisions enable growers of acceptable varieties of malting barley to qualify for price support without participating in the barley feed grain program.

Payments will be made to those barley growers who devote the diverted barley acreage to an approved conservation use. Such growers must also maintain an acreage in soil-conserving crops or practices, including summer fallow and idle cropland, equal to their 1959-60 average acreage in such uses.

Owenton and Owen County are named for Col. Abraham Owen, an early settler who was prominent in the War of 1812. He was killed by Indians in the Battle of Tippecanoe in Indiana.
