Churchill Says Invasion Now Is Imminent

Prime Minister Tells Congress War Plans

WASHINGTON, March 29. - Winston Churchill, as he concluded his address to Congress today, emphasized the importance of the forthcoming operations of a peculiar character, and hinted at a large scale amphibious operation. He also said he had set his heart on the invasion of France

Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill

Churchill, who has been in the United States since the beginning of the month, concluded his address to Congress today with a speech which was widely interpreted as an announcement of plans for an invasion of France. He said in part:

"I have made it clear to the world today that the invasion of certain parts of France is going to take place."

Churchill added that the announcement of plans for an invasion of France was made possible by the progress of the Allies in the Middle East and the European theater.

"The invasion of France," he said, "will be a major operation, and will require the co-operation of all the Allies."

Churchill also mentioned that the United States would play a key role in the invasion, and said that the operation would be "the greatest event in the history of the world."

Churchill's address to Congress was met with enthusiastic applause, and President Roosevelt said in a prepared statement that he was "highly pleased with the speech of the Prime Minister, and I have every confidence that the invasion of France will be a success."

The address to Congress was the first time that Churchill had spoken to Congress since his return to the United States from his recent trip to the Middle East.

The invasion of France will be the largest operation of its kind in history, and will require the co-operation of all the Allied powers.
