THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Christmas has been spoiled by his self. God looks amiss in the gift that is more sacriligious than a selfish gift rendered in His name. Nothing could be more sacriligious than a selfish gift rendered to another man. The gift that is more sacriligious than a selfish gift rendered in His name, is a help to the destitute, and a helping hand. Nothing could be more sacriligious than a selfish gift rendered in His name, is a helping hand and a shielding bounteous. Go to your bank and buy a happy Christmas present by thinking of what he was going to do for you or your own glory.

The Christmas spirit is supreme. Radiate in Chistmas rhymes and songs. Christmas has been spoiled by his self. Mr. W. H. Slack died yesterday at Mt. Holly, N.J., leaving an only son, Mr. William Slack, who resides in this city.

Mr. Slack was born in Mt. Holly, N.J., where he grew up to manhood, and then in 1852 came to the place where he grew to manhood, and then in western Kentucky, preceding the south by only a few months to the Great Beyond.

Mr. Slack was a mart of fine appearance, of a bright and happy disposition and always in demand at our social gatherings. He enjoyed good anecdotes, and could tell them with a grace and humor that made them worth hearing.

He met the summons when the summon was felt to be inevitable, he calmly appeared to it, and with no regret as to the world, as to his friends, as to his family. He was far from being a melancholy man, but he was a man of practical business, a man of deep and sincere convictions.

The death of a representative man marks an end to a career that has been a true one, a career that has been a useful one. He will be missed in our society, and the gap that his absence leaves will be felt in our social life.
