PLYMOUTH, Mich. — AFTER THE STORM — Dave Metz slides off the barrel he was riding at Main and Wing in downtown Plymouth after four inches of rain fell in 30 minutes. Water was 18 inches deep at most intersections and up to three feet deep in many basements of the Detroit suburb. (AP LASERPHOTO)

Gov. Carroll Says

Plane Use Restrictions OK

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Julian Carroll says he would abide by recommendations the Legislature might propose for changes in current policies regarding the use of state-owned airplanes.

In response to a question following Friday's meeting of the Legislative Research Commission, Carroll's press secretary Gary Auxier said the governor would go along with any interim recommendations the Legislature might come up with prior to the 1980 General Assembly.

The LRC was presented Friday with an eight-page letter from Carroll calling on the Legislature to study the question of the use of state airplanes by all public officials and outside groups to determine if any statutory policies should be adopted.

Carroll also called on the LRC, which is composed of the bipartisan leadership of the Legislature, to expand the scope of its inquiry to include the use of state-owned automobiles and the use of the governor's and lieutenant governor's mansions and other similar facilities.

The LRC referred the letter and all related matters to its interim State Government Committee.

Carroll has been embroiled in a recent controversy over his use of state planes on his vacations, including a recent trip to Florida in which four unannounced side trips to the Bahamas were made in a state plane.

The governor has defended his use of the planes, refusing to reimburse the state for the cost of members of his family and friends who flew on the planes.

Carroll reiterated his position in his letter to the LRC, claiming that a lack of guidelines by previous administrations and legislatures has left him to be guided in his actions "only by custom and by my judgment and my conscience — be it considered good or poor."

Carroll said he thought the determination of any future policy regarding the use of state transportation or other facilities was a basic public policy decision that should be made by the Legislature and not the governor.

He said that he felt the issue also went far beyond the current controversy over state airplanes. He noted the other constitutional officers, including his strongest critic on the use of airplanes, state Auditor George Atkins, have free use of state cars, limited only by their judgment.

Carroll also pointed out there are no guidelines regarding the use of his state-maintained home beyond a statutory requirement that he pay the reasonable cost of the food his family eats.

He said that on the advice of his accountant and tax attorney he does not reimburse the state for the other benefits of the home, although his mother-in-law does pay rent for an apartment on the mansion grounds.

"The voids in basic public policy regarding emoluments, at this time, can only be filled by the judgment of the elected official," Carroll said.

However, Carroll warned, "No easy answers are available when we seek to define what is a personal fringe benefit and what is an emolument which is related to the rendering of effective public service by an elected official."

Carroll conceded that there are gray areas regarding the use of state planes that raise numerous questions. He cited several examples during the past year, including flying legislators, federal officials, state university sports teams, private citizens and the news media to various state functions.

On Freezing SALT Talks

Carter Denounces News Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, affirming his commitment to an early strategic weapons treaty, denounced on Friday a published report that his administration has effectively frozen arms limitation negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Carroll called the report in The Washington Post "totally inaccurate" and damaging to both the United States and his own credibility.

He said his basic policy has not changed — "that is, to proceed aggressively with the SALT discussion."

Carroll delivered his unusual personal criticism of the newspaper to White House correspondents summoned to the Oval Office.

The president walked in, carrying a folded-up copy of the Post in his hand. He threw it face-up on his desk and in an unusually firm manner denied that the possibility of freezing the SALT negotiation had been discussed, "even informally."

Carroll said he understood "inadvertent inaccuracies" sometimes crept into news accounts and that he accepted them.

"But this morning," Carter said, "there was an example that I think was serious enough to warrant a direct appearance before you by the president of the United States."

To the fewer than a dozen correspondents on hand, Carter went on: "Before this story was published the reporters were informed the story was totally inaccurate. The editors decided to go ahead with it anyway."

Meanwhile, Paul C. Warnke, chief U.S. strategic arms negotiator, told an audience in Cleveland he had been assured by Carter that the newspaper story was untrue.

"And I have received the statement that he made today, in which he calls the stories about a freeze on SALT totally inaccurate and states that he has instructed me to continue to aggressively pursue the conclusion of a strategic arms limitation agreement, which I plan to do," Warnke said.

A number of press accounts of the arms negotiations have indicated an impasse may be developing in light of heightened U.S.-Soviet tensions over Africa. But the Post story, which was copyrighted, went a major step further by suggesting the administration had decided to effectively freeze the negotiations.

The Post said it had been informed by "authoritative sources" that the net effect of the administration tactics was to reject any new Soviet proposals for the time being. The newspaper did not identify its sources.

Carroll ignored attempts by correspondents to ask him questions.

At the Post, Benjamin C. Bradlee, the executive editor, responded to inquiries with the following statement:

"With the greatest respect, we still believe that our information is correct, that recent decisions taken by the administration have had the effect of freezing SALT negotiations in such a way that agreement this summer is precluded."

The last round of negotiations, between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, was held Wednesday in New York.

Vance told reporters then that none of the basic issues still in dispute had been settled. He said he would meet with Gromyko again, fixing a time and place after "checking our respective calendars."

U.S. Airlift In Zaire Will Begin Within Few Days, Carter Aide Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military transports will begin flying Moroccan troops into Zaire within the next few days — a first sign that a proposed Pan-African peacekeeping force may be taking shape, an administration official says.

In addition, the official, who asked not to be named, said Friday the United States will ferry the remaining French legionnaires out of Zaire's war-torn Shaba province.

Some French troops have remained in the copper-mining town of Kolwezi since they drove out invading Katangan rebels who had crossed into Zaire from Angola last month.

"The operation is expected to be coordinated over the weekend or by early next week at the latest," the official said.

Earlier Friday, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell termed as "very real" the possibilities that U.S. aircraft — expected to be C-141 transports — would be used to airlift the French troops out and fly the peacekeeping force in.

The proposed Pan-African force that may be used in Zaire is envisioned as a compact, highly mobile land and air group, equipped mainly with French weapons, officials said.

The force would be trained and perhaps led by French officers and would be prepared to intervene in crisis situations if asked. The idea for the force was developed at a French-African conference in Paris last month.

Powell said the projected U.S. role could have positive international political considerations, observing that the airlift was "not a consequence which we find objectionable."

Administration officials have said repeatedly that U.S. troops would not be involved in an African security force.

Eighth Traffic Fatality Recorded Here Last Night

Graves County's eighth traffic fatality was recorded last night with the death of a 23-year old Paducah resident.

Kentucky State Police identified the young woman as Linda Stone, 616 Oaks Road, Paducah.

According to a report by investigating Trooper Eual McIntosh, the Stone woman was the occupant of a vehicle which was stopped on Ky. 450 about .6 of a mile west of Symsonia. She reportedly stepped from the stopped vehicle and was struck by another vehicle, which approached from the rear.

State police say charges have been placed against the drivers of the two vehicles.

Graves County Coroner Joe Sanders said the woman's death, which was set at 11:45 p.m. Friday, is the eighth traffic fatality here in Graves County this year.

California Governor Mans Last-Ditch Stand Against Tax Revolt

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a Democrat with presidential ambitions, faces a major challenge on primary day next week — not from a candidate, but from a tax-relief plan.

Brown has turned his attention from the eight unknowns challenging him to Proposition 13, which could make his political life miserable by reducing revenue from local property taxes by 57 percent statewide.

The plan, on which there is a referendum alongside Tuesday's primaries, is the brainchild of Howard Jarvis, a salty-tongued, 75-year-old former newspaper publisher, munitions maker.

Five independent polls show it gaining momentum among voters, and it is expected to pass with a comfortable majority.

Meanwhile, even the race among four Republicans to oppose Brown has taken a back seat to Jarvis' noisy, emotional campaign. The Republican gubernatorial hopefuls are divided 2-2 on the plan.

The plan would cut property taxes, now averaging 2.5 percent of market value, to a maximum 1 percent annually, with limited overrides allowed for existing bonds which would be phased out in a few years.

It would also roll back assessments to March 1975 figures and limit annual increases in assessments to 2 percent, except when property is sold. Then property would be reassessed at market value.

The effect would be to cut property tax revenues for cities, counties and schools from $12 billion annually to about $5 billion — putting Brown, or his successor, in a no-win situation.

Brown could ask for a state tax increase to cover the lost local revenues with state aid. Or, he says, he could allow payroll cuts so severe that there would be an economic recession in the state.

Jarvis says the choices are not that drastic — that savings could be accomplished simply by cutting fat out of government and limiting services to essentials such as police and fire protection.

But Brown and other officials say layoffs could reach 300,000 employees, libraries and fire stations would close, hefty fees would be imposed on parks, garbage and other services, and classrooms would have to double up to operate with thousands fewer teachers.

Brown favors Proposition 8, a more moderate tax cut plan which would allow residential property to be taxed at different rates from other types of property and which would implement a bill passed by the legislature cutting residential property taxes by about 32 percent.

LIONS CLUB SPEAKER — Phil Myers (left) was guest speaker at the recent meeting of the Mayfield Lions Club. Myers discussed the rising cost of home construction. C.W. Harris was program chairman.

3 KSP Detectives Get Commendations For Their Action

Three Kentucky State Police detectives have been honored by the KSP for their actions during a recent arrest.

KSP Detectives Paul Lane, Joe W. Hill and Sam Renfrew received official commendation for "their quick and decisive action without regard for their personal safety" in making an arrest of a "heavily armed subject" without gunfire.

The three detectives were honored during an award ceremony at Trooper Island. The awards were presented by Lt. Governor Thelma Stovall and KSP Commissioner Kenneth Brandenburg.

According to the commendation, Detectives Lane, Hill and Renfrew's action reflects credit upon themselves and upholds the highest tradition of the Kentucky State Police.

A KSP Post 1 spokesman said the detectives were commended after arresting Gary Lynn Smith, Paducah, in northern Graves County.

Smith, according to the spokesman, was heavily armed at the time of the arrest and was charged with parole violations, multiple burglary, bond jumping and auto theft.

Local Nazarene Members To Attend Annual Assembly June 20-23

Local Nazarene church members will attend their annual district assembly and auxiliary conventions June 20-23, 1978.

The assembly of the Kentucky District, which includes 80 churches, convenes at 9 a.m. Tuesday, June 20, and concludes with the evening service on Wednesday. The auxiliary conventions will convene following the assembly as follows: the missionary convention begins at 8:30 a.m. and continues through the evening service Thursday, June 22; the youth convention convenes at 8:30 a.m. on Friday, June 23, continuing through noon; the youth convention convenes at 8:30 a.m. on Friday, June 23, continuing through noon; the Christian Life convention will begin at 2 p.m. on Friday and conclude with the evening service.

All of the sessions are slated to be held at First United Methodist Church, Corner E. Mt. Vernon and S. Central Avenue, in Somerset. Rev. A.A. Farris, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene in Somerset, will be the host pastor.

Rev. Aleck G. Ulmet, district superintendent, will read his fifth report. Other business of the assembly will include pastor's reports, church statistics, elections, and planning for the 1978-79 church year. Reflections from the denominationwide Mid-Quadrennial Conference on Evangelism held in the Myriad Convention Center, Oklahoma City, January 10-12, will be seen in these plans. Church growth seminars have been conducted this year which will result in every church being conscious of its progress and organizing for greater growth. Specific numerical goals for each church will be presented as a part of the denomination's commitment to enroll 250,000 new members in the 1976-80 quadrennium.

Dr. William Greathouse, general superintendent, will preside and speak at the opening of each morning session. He is one of a six-man board of general superintendents, elected at the quadrennial general assemblies, who direct the affairs of the church through the 170 districts in 68 nations of the world.

The Church of the Nazarene is making many changes required by its rapid internationalization. Of the total 625,150 members, 25 percent are outside of the United States and Canada. A growth percentage of 3.3 was reported in 1977. The church now broadcasts around the world in 18 languages.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SPREADING THE GOOD NEWS

The Scripture for this lesson is Acts 13 and 14. Selected verses from the Revised Standard Version of the Bible are printed here.

Acts 14:8-18

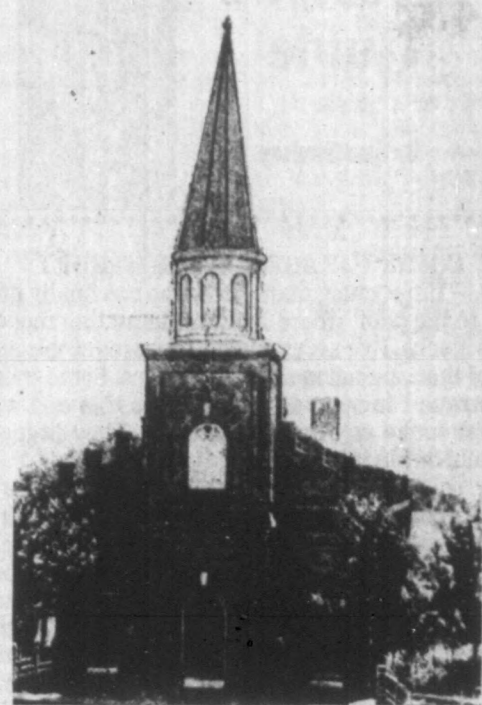

8 Now at Lystra there was a man sitting, who could not use his feet; he was a cripple from birth, who had never walked. 9 He listened to Paul speaking; and Paul, looking intently at him and seeing that he had faith to be made well, 10 said in a loud voice, "Stand upright on your feet." And he sprang up and walked. 11 And when the crowds saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in Lycaonian, "The gods have come down to us in the likeness of men!" 12 Barnabas they called Zeus, and Paul, because he was the chief speaker, they called Hermes. 13 And the priest of Zeus, whose temple was in front of the city, brought oxen and garlands and wanted to offer sacrifice with the people. 14 But when the apostles Barnabas and Paul heard of it, they tore their garments and rushed out among the multitude, crying, 15 "Men, why are you doing this? We also are men, of like nature with you, and bring you good news, that you should turn from these vain things to a living God who made the heaven and the earth and the sea and all that is in them. 16 In past generations he allowed all the nations to walk in their own ways; 17 yet he did not leave himself without witness, for he did good and gave you from heaven rains and fruitful seasons, satisfying your hearts with food and gladness." 18 With these words they scarcely restrained the people from offering sacrifice to them.

Memory Selection: Repentance and forgiveness of sins should be preached in his name to all nations, beginning from Jerusalem. You are witnesses of these things. —Luke 24:47-48

The First Church — 1868

On June 11th we're celebrating our 125th anniversary at the First Christian Church in Mayfield. Our homecoming ceremonies will begin with Sunday School at 9:30. It will be a day filled with reminiscing about the past and our hopes and plans for the future, meeting old friends and making new ones. Plan now to be there, a church spokesman said.

Thought For Today

What Is An Atheist?
R. Charles Blair

Someone has defined an Atheist as one who, at death, is "all dressed up with no place to go." The main trouble with that definition is that it simply is not so, of course. Another definition, a bit better, is "a person with no invisible means of support." But the description I personally consider meaningful is "someone who is running beyond his headlights."

An Atheist is one who insists on that which, by definition, cannot be proven. In the field of logic, one of the most difficult matters is the proving of a negative. The Atheist says, "There is no god of any sort — neither god, nor gods, nor God." In so doing, he is claiming omniscience — a characteristic of standard definitions of deity. He is asking us to believe that he and his partners have fully investigated every philosophical, psychological, and physical unit of the universe and have satisfactorily demonstrated the absence of any sort of Creator and/or Sustainer. The plain fact is, he has not. He has, at best, scratched a bit of varnish from the surface of reality. It takes too much faith to be an Atheist!

Could anyone prove, for instance, that the sun has never "risen" in the West and never will? Even on this matter, of which we have reasonable certainty, absolute proof is lacking. To demonstrate a negative requires absolute knowledge, something impossible if the Atheist is correct. (If there is no God, there can be no absolute knowledge, for there would be no absolute Person.)

Jesus cautions us against using the term "fool" (Matthew 5:22). Yet the Bible clearly describes the Atheist with that very term — "The fool has said in his heart, 'There is no God.'" (Psalm 14:1, 3:11).

If God Himself is willing to characterize the Atheist in such strong language that He forbids us to even use the term, we had best just pray for the Atheist and leave him to the justice of the Almighty. To join these people in their mad quest for certainty, when their main premise makes certainty impossible, is to attempt to square the circle. Like the French thinker Montesquieu, I cannot "share the humility of the Atheist," but prefer to believe in the less incredible position, a personal Creator and personal immortality.

Your Problems By Ann Landers

Dear Readers: Dale D. Armon, President of Pet Rescue, Inc., in Bloomington, Ill., asked me to pass on this message. I do so in the hope you will do more than just read it. Please take it seriously.

With springtime comes the birth of hundreds of thousands of unwanted kittens and puppies. If you care about animals you will have your pet spayed or neutered and kept on a leash. Here are some heartbreaking facts: Every year approximately 60 million abandoned and unwanted animals are slaughtered through humane societies at the staggering cost to the American taxpayer of $500 million dollars!

Approximately 10,000 kittens and puppies are born each hour. Nine out of ten have no homes to go to. Fifty per cent will never live to see their first birthday. These figures do not reflect the homeless, suffering orphans that die of starvation and thirst or those hit by cars.

People will say, "But I can find homes for all of my litter." After they are born, they find it's not so easy. Everyone thinks baby kittens and puppy puppies are so adorable, but somehow they aren't so cute when they become cats and dogs.

Parents, please don't let the family pet have a litter just so you can show your children the miracle of life! All you teach them is that life has little value.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sending you something that appeared in the Washington Post recently and I hope you will read it and take note. It ran in a box on the editorial page and was headed "Some Advice for Ann Landers."

"Ann Landers' recommendation regarding an illiterate husband must be responded to, for the wife who wrote may still be 'in a Dither' about getting him the help she wanted. Ann's suggestion to 'contact a grade school principal and inquire about testing for learning disabilities' may meet the same fate as the wife's attempt to 'get him to go to night school.' (He was not interested)."

"This man may have unfortunate memories or fears about school and has tried to 'fool people' simply because he does not want them to know he cannot read and write. He might seek help if he knew he could have private, free tutorial help."

"The National Affiliation for Literacy Advance of Laubach Literacy International comprises 450 groups actively mending literacy problems with trained volunteer tutors working with non- or new reading adults on a one-to-one basis."

"The individual teaching, based on personal attention and concern for the 'student' or 'learner,' plus interview-testing and the use of easy, controlled, practical, adult materials, has proven a successful method of teaching adults to read for many years."

"In the District of Columbia and Maryland one need only consult the telephone book under Literacy for local organizations committed to reaching and teaching the adult illiterate. With or without a learning disability this husband soon may be able to read and respond to Ann Landers herself. — Lee Collins, Literacy Council of Northern Virginia, Inc. (McLean)"

Dear Lee Collins: Why didn't you write to me? I'm lucky to have friends in D.C. who were thoughtful enough to send me the clipping. The information has been noted and I'm happy to pass the word.

Chas. Templeton Turns Agnostic

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Templeton used to be one of the biggest names on the American evangelistic circuit, propounding the Christian faith to vast audiences across the country. Now, he himself no longer believes it.

How did the change come about? "Slowly," he says. "Slowly the doubts came to the stage that I no longer could deny them. Finally, I had only two alternatives. Stay in the church and be a hypocrite or leave. I left."

It was a transition from advocate to agnostic in a man of the pulpit for 20 years, who had once served as the crack evangelist of the National Council of Churches on behalf of most of the major Protestant and Orthodox denominations in the United States.

Templeton, now 62, veteran of a variety of careers and now embarked on his latest as a fiction writer with a new novel out, "Act of God," published by Little Brown & Co., says he's not anti-church nor anti-belief, but has concluded that the human mind cannot affirm God "except by faith, and I don't have that faith."

"I looked at the world, and it doesn't seem to me that it bespoke a God that could be described as father," he said in an interview.

As a basis of that estimate, he cited the commonly advanced reason for it — such natural disasters as a typhoon that smashes an area, killing thousands, old and young, and leaving others unsheltered, diseased, starving.

"When I see that kind of prodigious waste, it doesn't look to me like the act of a father," he said.

Asked if general human shortcomings, such as not yet sufficiently comprehending weather in advance nor preparing for it in mutual responsibility for one another, might not be a factor in such events, he said if the suffering is due to human ignorance or faults, "man is created that way. And it's man who is put in this dilemma."

Asked if man doesn't by choice partly shape his own situation, Templeton said, "I grant that. But does a baby stricken with disease make that choice?"

Asked if perhaps, in the complex, interdependent web of all human processes, some remote yet harmful element of living habits, diet, strains, neglect or indulgence might possibly have threaded through the race to afflict that child, Templeton said:

"I don't blame God. I don't fault him. I don't see myself now as an evangelist of non-belief. I'm not. I don't want to disrupt anyone's faith. I count those with faith as blessed. The last thing I want to do is argue them out of it."

Templeton, a relaxed, amiable and gracious man, is mostly self-educated, having dropped out of school in the ninth grade. Then a fundamentalist believer, he began preaching in his early 20's as a touring, increasingly successful Canadian evangelist, eventually leading a congregation in Toronto.

After special studies at Princeton Theological Seminary, he became chief evangelist for the U.S. National Council of Churches from 1951 to 1954, traveling the country, preaching to audiences up to 70,000 in places such as Soldier Field in Chicago, the Rose Bowl in Pasadena and Radio City Music Hall in New York City.

Afterward, he remained in the pulpit limelight for three years as head of the evangelism department for the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., from 1955 to 1957, when he quit the ministry.

He went to work in Canadian television, later joining the staff of the Toronto Star and becoming managing editor. He left in 1964 to enter politics, losing narrowly in two elections. He became news director for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., hosting various programs. Finally he turned to novel writing, his first, "The Kidnapping of a President," a 1974 hit.

His new "Act of God" is a suspense thriller about the discovery of what could be the skeleton of Jesus — threatening the basis of the church. It focuses on the moral dilemma of whether good deeds justify unethical means.

"Life is a paradox," he observed in the interview, a mixture of suffering and joy, beauty and horrors, love and hate, death and life. As for its predominant force, he said, "I vote for life."

In gratitude for it, he said he and his family regularly say grace at table for good and the good things of earth. "I want to teach my children to be grateful," he said.

As to whether he might sometime return to faith in a God to whom to be grateful, he said, "I don't think so, but I believe in keeping an open mind. I don't know tomorrow."

Where Have All The Great Men Gone

Where have all the great men gone?
Such noble ancestors once they were,
Such steeples, spires and columns once they built,
Such swords of knowledge, such myriads of fantasies, such sparks of genius that dwelt within.

Where have all the great men gone?
Look my friend, discount it not.
Have we reached an end to such men of old?
Surely not.

On what foundation does our civilization rest?
Are we mere drones and commonplace, not to know the inspiration of the like.

Plato, Socrates, and Homer renowned, how great a light throughout all time.
And with their beauty they transcended our shallow way.
Where have all the great men gone?

But wait, maybe I have an answer known.
Where have all the great men gone?
It's not they're gone, but only died.

Maybe the gods no longer call them;
Maybe the muses no longer ring an echoing call which called them forth.

It's not they're dead, but only sleep.
It's time we wake and call them forth.

MY PUPPY

My puppy is a hound,
And he's big and round.
If he doesn't get his way,
All he'll do is lay!

When we go to town,
People say he's big, bright, and brown!
I love my puppy and he loves me.

And when we're together
We're happy as can be!

COMING OF AGE FOR THE MARKET

Q. — I'm a young man — 29 — who has finally gotten to the point where I can begin putting money into stocks. I've accumulated 10 shares of this and 20 of that, including almost 20 issues. Some friends argue I'm spreading myself too thin and will never make any money that way. They argue I should buy in 100-share lots.

A. — In investing, as in other endeavors, one is most likely happiest "doing his thing." Investing techniques and formulas run all the way from "putting all your eggs in one basket" and then watching that basket "to the standard approach of "diversification — spreading the risk." You can get an argument in favor of as well as arguments against either method. For example, how well can you watch one basket? Can you really analyze an earnings statement and a balance sheet? And, again, in the matter of diversification, it's o.k. to spread the risk but you must then be reconciled to diluting the chances that you'll double your money in a week. (If you study mutual fund records you'll find that funds managing only a few million dollars have been able to score many more sensational gains — at least, short term — than those having a billion dollars or more to invest.)

I can see where a young man just beginning to acquire common stocks would tend to spread himself thin. The normal tendency is to go off in many directions, following will-o-the-wisp tips and suggestions and fancies. It's no crime. And if you are actually interested in business, it can be stimulating to get a lot of reports and statements.

To sum up: You'll learn what suits you best by doing, not by heeding the advice of friends. At 29, you're bound to make mistakes and the sooner you make them the better. You'll have years to correct them — so why worry too much? If you want an old line "book" answer, it is that you have too many issues. But that rule doesn't mean anything unless and until you learn it first hand. Carry on and good luck!

Q. — We're newlyweds, both employed, and feel we can invest $200 a month. Should $100 go into the savings bank and the other $100 into stocks?

A. — I'd favor putting the entire $200 into a savings account — at least until the account gets up to an amount equalling 3 to 6 months' wages. Building an emergency savings account should be done as quickly as possible. After you've reached that comfortable level of savings you might put all the $200 into stocks. (I assume life insurance program has already been established.)

Q. — I am a widow of 70 with about $30,000 invested in some municipal revenue bonds carrying a 4% percent coupon and selling around 68. My broker suggests I sell out and buy corporate bonds which will bring me 7 1/2 percent. I could use more income. I own 2 houses on which taxes and expenses are going up.

A. — From what you tell me, I don't understand what you are doing with tax-exempt bonds in the first place. There is no indication in your letter of a high (over 30-35 percent) income tax bracket. Currently you are getting $41.25 a year on each $1,000 bond. If you bought, instead, $680 worth of 8 1/2 percent (why 7 1/2 percent?) corporate bonds, your income would be boosted to $57.80 from the same money. (Commissions would reduce investable capital somewhat.)

I'm puzzled by the two houses. Do you mean their maintenance is actually cutting into your personal income? If so — out!

Q. — I've read about Ginnie Mae bonds. Are they better than tax-exempts? Where are they bought?

A. — A taxable bond is better than a non-taxable bond if your income tax bracket is not high enough to reduce the taxable income to a figure (net of taxes) below the tax-free income. You buy Ginnie Maes at your broker.

My Answer By Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have read your column for years in the daily newspaper. You have stated many times, in several ways, that "faith only" will save a person. In my opinion, you are failing to give people the whole word of God with your "faith only" doctrine. — R.J.

DEAR R.J.: I preach not "faith only" — but Christ, who is the object of it. I emphasize faith because the Bible emphasizes it. You see, I am incumbent to preach the word of Truth, not my own opinions or your opinions.

The Bible says we are saved by faith. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

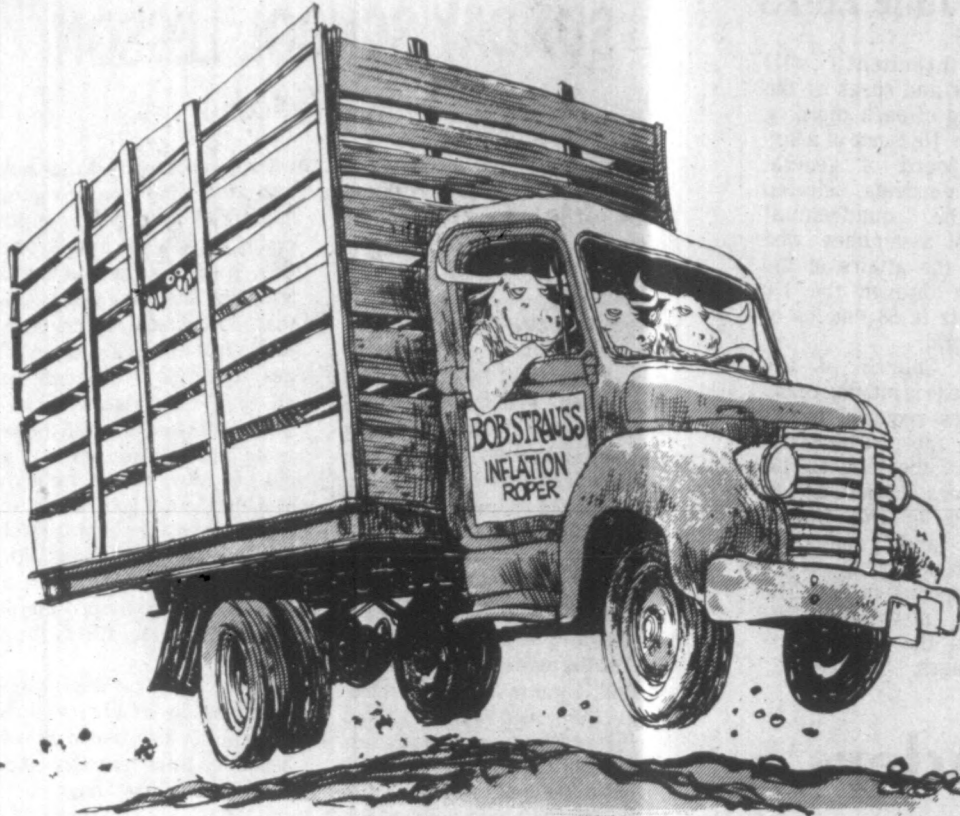

We are justified by faith. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:1).

We cannot please God without faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Hebrews 11:6).

Faith helps us to overcome. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith" (1 John 5:4).

But, of course, I preach other things besides faith. If you listen to my messages, or read them, it couldn't be said that I preach "faith only." I preach repentance, Christian works, love of neighbor and obedience. The Bible is not a one-string fiddle; it is a symphonic instrument of many varied and beautiful sounds.

Our Civil Religion

Four years ago, John Murray Cuddihy, a brilliant and unconventional sociologist who teaches at Hunter College in New York, published a book called "The Ordeal of Civility." It was nominated for a National Book Award and quickly became a semi-underground classic among knowledgeable people.

Semi-underground, because Cuddihy's subject is the "secret life" of our culture. He brings "embarrassing" things out into the open. In that book, Cuddihy focused on Jewishness, and the special collision of Jewishness with modern culture and society.

Now, in his second book, Cuddihy has done it again. The book has just appeared, it is called "No Offense: Civil Religion and Protestant Taste," and it is published by Seabury Press.

The idea that America has a "civil religion" is not new. But that civil religion is customarily conceived of as a bland affair, a least-common-denominator consensus, the public piety of an Eisenhower.

Not at all, says Cuddihy, and his originality lies in part in his demonstration that our American religious consensus is a powerful and aggressive thing — and that it has had a profound doctrinal impact on traditional Protestantism, Catholicism, and Judaism.

Modernity and pluralism, he shows, have "tamed" these ancient and proud religious faiths. They each have been turned into a "humane" American "denomination." They have been forced to renounce, at least in public, their old absolute claims.

Cuddihy studies and analyzes three sets of key, symbolic religious cases. In Protestantism, the key figure for Cuddihy's purpose is the theologian Reinhold Niebuhr. Niebuhr renounced, on doctrinal grounds, all effort to convert Jews to Christianity. He does so in the name of "love." This, of course, would have shocked St. Paul. In Niebuhr, in effect, "love" takes precedence over "truth." And Niebuhr's position has come to be widely accepted among Protestants.

That position, moreover, is an important consequence of pluralism. If pluralism is a fact, and there are a variety of churches and faiths, it becomes more and more difficult to assert as absolute the ancient claims of any of them.

Thus the Catholic theologian John Courtney Murray renounced, again on theological grounds, the ancient Catholic claim that there is no salvation outside the Church. Murray also accepted pluralism, not as something merely provisional, but as a second-best circumstance, but as desirable in itself. The Catholic Church became the "Catholic" Church, its universal claims politely laid aside. It became another American denomination.

In order to enter into the American circumstance, the Jews, for their part, were required to stop asserting their ancient claim to be the Chosen People of God. Even though that claim was central to traditional Judaism — analogous to the absolute claims of Scripture for the Protestant, or the claim of universality for the Catholic — the claim to Chosenness became, well, impolite, implausible, under the modern circumstance.

Cuddihy's subject, looked at in one way, is the price that has to be paid for modernity, civility, pluralism. Fierce passions must be tamed. The process has a tragic character, as the ancient faiths begin to mind their manners.

Cuddihy has fascinating things to say about the sociology of modernity, and about, for example, Marxism, a zealous, "uncivil" political faith which Cuddihy regards as a doomed protest against the modernization process.

This book is a major work, and takes its place beside the earlier "Ordeal of Civility" as a major contribution to our understanding of modern culture.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, June 3, the 154th day of 1978. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands — now New York.

On this date: In 1808, Confederate President Jefferson Davis was born in what is now Todd County, Ky.

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor married Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore, Maryland in France.

In 1942, in World War II, Japanese warplanes raided Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

In 1962, 130 people were killed in the crash of an airliner at Paris, France, including members of an art group from Atlanta, Ga.

In 1966, a Surveyor One spacecraft was relaying back pictures of the lunar surface after making America's first soft landing on the moon.

In 1973, a Soviet supersonic airliner crashed during an international air show near Paris, killing the six crewmen and seven French villagers.

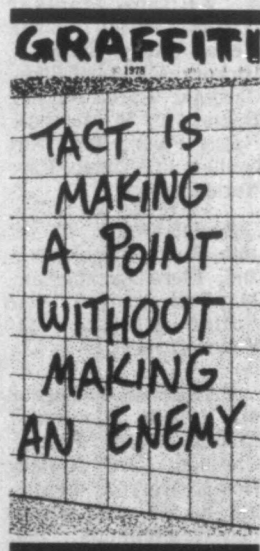

Ten years ago: The Supreme Court ruled that opponents of capital punishment cannot be automatically excluded from juries unless they say their opposition would prevent them from making an impartial judgment.

Five years ago: Israel released 56 Syrian and Lebanese war prisoners in exchange for three captured Israeli pilots.

One year ago: Italian film maker Robert Rossellini died in Rome at the age of 71.

Today's birthdays: Actor Tony Curtis is 53 years old. Former budget director Bert Lance is 47. Poet Allen Ginsberg is 52.

Thought for today: From the sublime to the ridiculous there is only one step — Napoleon Bonaparte, 1769-1821.

The Kennedys: The American Stuarts?

WASHINGTON — A question: For the last decade and a half, what one specter, what recurring political fear, has haunted each of our three elected presidents?

Runaway inflation? A sudden Russian attack? Perhaps, but those have been disembodied fears. Since 1964, our presidents have also shared a more personalized apprehension.

We know from various chronicles that this concern, ultimately fully justified, gnawed at Lyndon Johnson. And Richard Nixon took the threat so seriously that attempts to head it off may have helped pave the way for Watergate. As for Jimmy Carter, his apprehensions in this same direction are at least implicit in current actions.

And just what is this common concern, worrisome enough to unnervethree presidents over a decade and a half? Very simple: Camelot nerves; Kennedy phobia; fear that another Kennedy brother was ready and well-positioned to recapture the presidency — to reclaim the throne, as it were.

I am entirely serious. Any serious political chronicle of the Vietnam era will confirm the Kennedy phobia of Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon. And Jimmy Carter's must follow from a combination of his occasionally stated disdain for the Kennedys with new poll data (now from Harris as well as Gallup) showing Edward Kennedy leading the president in 1980 trial heats among Democratic voters. Health-policy watchers already report the White House bending over backward to placate Edward Kennedy on national health insurance. The ability of one family to cause such fear — the succession of younger brothers picking up the banner and the claim of dead older brothers — is more the stuff of European than American history. It smacks less of presidency, almost, than of monarchy.

Gaelic romanticists will be reminded of the British House of Stuart. For some 30 years after the death of Queen Anne, the last Stuart to reign, exiled Stuart claimants continued to strike occasional fear into the hearts of the stolid Hanoverian kings who took over the 18th century British monarchy. In 1715 and again in 1745, French-based Stuart claimants — first James (the "Old Pretender") and then Bonnie Prince Charlie — raised the standard of rebellion against Kings George I and George II. Both times they failed, but during the 30-odd years in question, the Stuart threat was never far from the minds of either British monarch. The merest hint of a Stuart rising was enough to send British agents in France scavenging information from Versailles to the channel ports — and doing so with the same feeling and apprehension that motivated LBJ's FBI cronies and Richard Nixon's Watergaters two and a half centuries later.

If the Stuart pretenders never succeeded, it was in part the lack of substance and leadership qualities beneath their cloaks of romance and glamor. One could suggest, unkindly, that Bonnie Prince Charlie showed approximately the same qualities at Culloden Moor, his critical defeat, that Edward Kennedy demonstrated at Chappaquiddick.

But there was more to it than that. Intense loyalty to the Stuarts among a devoted band of followers, and romantic attachment among a much larger population group, arose out of the tumultuous nature of the 17th century period during which the Stuarts had ruled — exciting years of revolution, religious warfare, regicide and restoration. In the end, however, most Britons spurned the idea of an 18th century Stuart restoration for precisely that reason — better to be bored under the dull, inept Hanoverian kings than to resurrect yesteryear's fervor and fratricide by putting the Stuarts back on the throne.

Do not dismiss the Stuart analogy. The Kennedy presidency and memory, like the Stuart memory, has been mythologized and romanticized since that November 1963 day when bagpipes skirted dirges as the dead president's body went to its grave. The successive appeal of three brothers over a period of a decade and a half has no parallel in American political history. A comparison with the Lees, Harrisons, Tafts or Roosevelts is really no comparison; the Kennedy phenomenon is totally different and unique. Even today, 15 years after John Kennedy's death and 10 years after Robert Kennedy's, Edward Kennedy's presence in American politics haunts the presidency.

"A Conservative View"

The Old Urge To Let 'Er Rip

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SAN DIEGO — Almost every motorist who ever has been stuck in freeway traffic on a sweltering summer day knows the urge that overwhelms him when he turns off and sees a mile of gloriously empty highway ahead. It is the old urge to let 'er rip, and to hell with the consequences.

Californians this week are feeling the old urge. They have an opportunity on June 6 to vote for Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann amendment to the state constitution. After metaphorical hours of being trapped in high taxes, extravagant government, and a blood-sucking bureaucracy, they see the glory road. Their pent-up resentments and frustrations are ready to burst. Call them irresponsible, which is what Gov. Jerry Brown calls the proposition, but don't discount human nature. The taxpayers are yearning to toss sobriety to the winds and take a chance on the cops.

The pending amendment is primarily the brainchild of Howard Jarvis, a crusty old character in California politics, but it bears a close relationship to other tax limitation proposals that are spreading throughout the nation. The proposals vary in approach and terminology, but they share this common conviction: The only way to restrain big-spending governments is to deny them the money to spend.

Yes, that is simplistic, and "simplistic" is among the softer adjectives that opponents have applied to Proposition 13. The amendment would have the effect of compelling a reduction of almost two-thirds in property taxes. This would be accomplished by limiting such taxes, which now average 2.8 percent of fair market value, to not more than 1 percent of "full cash value." The hypothetical family with a $100,000 home (and you would be astounded at the number of $100,000 homes in today's real estate market) is now paying $2,800. After Jarvis the family would pay $1,000 only, and the assessed valuation, prior to sale, could not be increased by more than 2 percent per year.

Depending on whose estimate you believe, local property owners would save $5 billion to $7 billion a year. Another way of putting that is to say that local governments would lose $5 billion to $7 billion a year. Neither statement is precisely accurate. The homeowner who now deducts $2,800 in computing his federal and state income taxes could deduct $1,000 only in the first year post-Jarvis; moreover, as state levies and non-property local levies were increased, in a frantic effort to make up the Jarvis gap, homeowners indirectly would pay part of their savings in different ways.

Those on the payroll of county and city governments, especially the teachers, have fallen into spavins and heaves. Governor Brown is roaming the state predicting "chaos" if the Jarvis proposal passes. He calls it a "rip-off" and a "consumer fraud". Here in San Diego, in a patent scare tactic that may have lost more than it gained, the Board of Education in April sent pink slips to 1,940 teachers telling them they would not be hired in the fall if Proposition 13 should pass. This doubtless galvanized the teachers, but a San Diego doctor who had been lukewarm to Jarvis said he and his colleagues were so incensed by this "transparent intimidation" that they began working for it.

Emotions are running so high that both sides have lost credibility. The Jarvis amendment, though it contains certain safeguards, is not artfully drawn; it almost certainly would have adverse consequences not foreseen by its exhilarated supporters. On the other hand, the hysterical cries of "chaos" and "cutbacks" are mostly the howls of political mountebanks who see their powers abruptly circumscribed. California's state treasury is running swollen rivers of surplus; its legislature would have abundant time and money to address whatever crises might follow in the wake of Jarvis.

Last week's California poll showed the outcome too close to call. Much will depend upon the last-minute "no" campaign by the teachers, public employees and other opponents. If their campaign induces a return to the old submissiveness among taxpayers now eager to revolt, Jarvis could expire like a muscle spasm.

Let me venture only two predictions: If Jarvis passes, the good effects will outnumber the bad. If Jarvis fails, in one form or another Jarvis will return.

To Your Good Health By DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send any material you have for my 11-year-old girl who should be starting her menstrual periods very soon. She needs all the available information to explain everything.—Mrs. B.B.

Some girls menstruate at 11 years, but it's likely to be a year or two before you daughter actually starts. You, as her mother, having been through this, are the best one to advise and to discuss it with her. She should be alerted to avoid embarrassment should it happen outside the home.

Books may confuse her at this age. You can begin casual discussion, putting out leading questions to find out what she knows. Be ready to answer directly any questions she has. She undoubtedly has accumulated a store of information and misinformation on the subject already—from older sisters or schoolmates. Your chief role may be in setting the facts straight for her.

Begin with your own education. There are many books in the library on the subject. Some mothers end up learning as much as the youngsters. Emphasize that this is a natural event for all women and not to be regarded as a disabling "curse," and illness, or unclean.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My brother has a job where he stands and walks a lot. Also he puts in 60 to 80 hours a week. He's been complaining about the calves of his legs hurting so much he can hardly walk at times. We beg him to see a doctor, but he always says he has no time. Can you please tell him what he can do and if there is any medication that he can take? He is 57 years old and a hard worker. He doesn't drink, but he does smoke.—J.P.

That's stress enough to tax the strongest legs. Foot mechanics may be a factor. He should be fitted for shoes to make his standing and walking more comfortable. Also, he should cut down on quit smoking, which can cause blood flow deficiency especially in the legs. His doctor will want to check the general circulation to the legs, which can be a factor at this age. In the meantime an aspirin three or four times a day with a five-grain quinine capsule in the middle of the day might help. If he is going to continue this rigorous schedule he had better seek an ounce of prevention, which only his doctor can prescribe depending on the cause of his leg discomfort. See my booklet, "How to Stop Leg and Foot Pains." For a copy, send 35 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of this newspaper.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like some information on aneurysm of the abdominal aorta. The first tests showed it to be seven centimeters. Three months later it was 3½ centimeters. What would reduce it? The doctor was going to operate, but decided it was too risky (hypertension, two heart attacks, and a kidney operating only on one-third power). Any suggestions as to what route I should take?—C.R.

An aneurysm is a localized bulging-out of a weakened blood vessel wall. Those of the aorta in the abdominal region are the most common, and are usually caused by arteriosclerosis (hardening). Men are more apt to get them than women by a 10-to-1 ratio. They can range in size from small (3 to 7 centimeters) to large (10 to 15 centimeters). For otherwise healthy patients surgery is generally recommended for aneurysms greater than 6 centimeters. The smaller ones do not usually rupture. The surgery involves removal of the weak section and replacement with a synthetic graft. Aneurysms do not decrease in size. The only explanation here would be a variation in techniques used to measure it. Sometimes in very thin persons a preliminary miscalculation can be made in the relative size of an aneurysm.

In any event, your two heart attacks, and your kidney problem would place you in a high risk category for such surgery. I'd follow the doctor's advice. A second opinion might ease your mind and settle matters.

Confidential to D.W.Y.—Hygroton (chlorothalidone) is a potent diuretic and can cause loss of minerals (such as potassium). In this it is no different from any potent water-release medicine. The question is not whether your own doctor is right and the other wrong in predicting mineral loss. Rather it is whether you are being checked periodically while taking it to see if there is any loss. It's just that simple. There should be no great argument about it.

Arthritis-sufferers can be helped. Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis," write to him in care of this newspaper. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

P.S. To The News:
SALT II 'Equality'?
By
Phyllis Schlafly

Flushed with its "victory" in putting over the surrender of the U.S. Panama Canal to a small-time dictator, the Carter administration is grinding up its team of lobbyists and propagandists to put over another treaty-surrender to a big-time dictator.

The administration's SALT negotiations have made more concessions to the Soviet Union in order to produce an agreement to limit each side to 2,500 missiles and bombers. In the Newspeak of the accommodation artists, this is called "arms control," but it is really a cynical numbers game.

Because of public reaction to the humiliating inferiority of the 1972 SALT I agreement, under which the United States is permitted to have only two land-based and sea-launched intercontinental nuclear missile launchers for every three that the Soviets have, the administration knows it has no chance of approval for any treaty unless it sounds equal.

So the proposed SALT II agreement will limit strategic delivery vehicles to an equal number for each side.

The joker is that it will not limit the carrying capacity of either the individual vehicles or the total missile force.

According to the proposed agreement, both sides have agreed not to develop, test or deploy ICBMs with a launch-weight greater than the heaviest ICBM each have deployed on the date the treaty is signed. This agreement will limit the United States to a throw-weight of 8,000 pounds (the weight of the Titan missile, of which we have only 54), while the USSR will be allowed a throw-weight of 16,000 pounds (the weight of the SS-18).

Most of our land-based missiles are the Minuteman ICBMs. Their throw-weight is classified, but is probably no more than 2,000 pounds. In any event, the Minuteman III, our latest and most powerful model, carries three MIRV warheads of only 170 kilotons each (a kiloton is 1-1,000th of a megaton).

Thus the SALT II "equality" is like saying that two transcontinental freight-moving firms are equal when each one has 2,250 "delivery vehicles," but one firm has all 50-ton tractor-trailers operational, and the other has nothing larger than half-ton pickup trucks.

Just as the throw-weight of an individual missile is the measure of what it can do, the total throw-weight of a missile force is the measure of what the entire force can accomplish.

If your missiles have sufficient throw-weight, such as the Soviets' giant SS-18, you have the option of either delivering a single 50-megaton warhead (the equivalent of 50 million tons of conventional explosive power), OR delivering to separate targets eight MIRV warheads of more than three megatons each.

The SALT I numbers inferiority was put over on us in 1972 on the rationale that we didn't need to worry about the Soviets' larger numbers of missile launchers, their far-greater throw-weight and their vastly greater megatonnage because U.S. missiles were more accurate.

Aviation Week and Space Technology reported last month that the Soviets have tested ICBMs accurate enough "to impact less than 600 feet from target, providing a hard-target kill capability" against our Minuteman force.

Another joker in the proposed SALT II agreement is that the Soviets have silo-reload capability and we do not. We have only as many missile launchers as we have silos. The Soviets have an unknown number of reloads concealed near their silos, which they can use because of their cold-launch pop-up technique.

Do you wonder why our President does not reject Soviet SALT II demands or do anything to stop Soviet conquests of Afghanistan and much of Africa?

With Soviet submarines prowling our long coastlines, with Soviet missiles on their gigantic unsinkable missile carrier named Cuba, with many more powerful ICBMs in Russia well defended against our subsonic bombers and small Minuteman warheads, our President doesn't dare.

Legislators Must Decide Uses Of State Aircraft

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The question of the use of the state's 13 aircraft by Gov. Julian Carroll and his family and other state officials will move into the legislative arena Friday.

That is when the Legislative Research Commission meets, and the bipartisan leadership of the General Assembly is expected by then to have on hand a letter from Carroll asking for a review of policies on use of the state aircraft.

Democrats dominate the LRC and Carroll also is a Democrat, as is state Auditor George Atkins who has been in the forefront of criticism of the handling of plane trips. Atkins is finishing an audit of the situation.

Kentucky Republicans, after a brief surge of denunciation, generally have been keeping a low profile in the dispute.

Almost a decade ago, former GOP Gov. Louie Nunn underwent criticism, too, after buying a large plane that could not use many state airports.

The LRC last month delayed consideration of a Republican member's motion to study policy on use of planes, but one source indicated Wednesday Carroll's letter would receive a more positive reception.

At the last meeting, Sen. Clyde Middleton, R-Covington, unsuccessfully requested a staff study of a series of questions he posed.

On straight partisan lines, the LRC voted 7-5 to delay consideration for a month, which prompted Middleton to quip, "It's all right to take it up in June, but not this month."

The new controversy over state planes began about two months ago when it was learned that the governor, his family and friends had flown to the Bahamas on vacation without publicizing the fact.

Subsequently, four flights to those islands during the past 16 months have been confirmed and Atkins, a political foe of the administration, has called on the governor to pay for personal trips — which Carroll has refused to do.

The story since has come out in bits and pieces — with disclosures by various sources that state planes also were used for possible personal purposes by Atkins, who gave the state a $456 check which Finance Secretary Russell McClure is holding indefinitely.

McClure says he is looking into what he calls many probable additional personal trips for which Atkins may owe.

Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall, a non-administration Democratic candidate for governor in 1979, said she has paid for any personal trips taken.

State Commerce Commissioner Terry McBrayer, the administration's preference for governor, has reimbursed the state for taking his young son along on a few trips which he said were official business.

Meantime, the governor has refused interviews on his personal use of the craft and also to answer written questions.

Carroll has referred to the controversy as a tempest over nothing and his followers have accused Atkins of creating the issue for political gain.

The auditor in turn has said the matter boils down to a moral question and the need for clear state policy on plane use.

Nothing in the statutes currently seems to cover the conduct of air trips of any nature by top state officials, least of all the governor.

Athlete Of Year

'The Goose' Is SEC's Best

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Kentucky basketball star Jack "Goose" Givens looked fondly at the tall trophy he won as Southeastern Conference Athlete of the Year and said, "I beat a lot of great individuals. It is a great honor for me."

Givens was selected Friday night over football, track and swimming standouts nominated by the nine other SEC universities as their outstanding athletes.

His well-chiseled face broke into a broad grin as SEC Commissioner Boyd McWhorter announced Givens as the winner of his latest of a string of honors since leading the Kentucky Wildcats to the national collegiate basketball championship with a 41-point scoring spree against Duke in the title game.

Givens said he was nervous through the introductions and film clips of all 10 nominees.

"I believe there was more tension than the night of the NCAA tourney final game," Givens said with another flashy smile.

The award wrapped up his collegiate career with a trophy, a gold and silver tray plus a $2,500 scholarship for his university.

"Now it's just a matter of waiting for the pro draft," Givens said. "I'll make my decision after that."

He's already made his first $10,000 as a pro in a barnstorming series of basketball games around his native state with three other seniors from Kentucky's national champs.

Kentucky Coach Joe Hall called the selection of Givens as the conference's best a natural. "He's a most deserving young man — a better person off the floor than on — and that's no discredit to his ability as a basketball player. He's such a super person."

Givens' sisters, Barbara and Paulette, had their first plane ride when they came here for the award dinner and smiled proudly at their 6-foot-4 brother.

"He's a superb brother," said Paulette. "We are really proud of him."

As Givens said, he beat out classy competition, including five from football, Louisiana State tailback Charles Alexander, Alabama wide receiver Ozzie Newsome, Georgia linebacker Jeff Lewis, Mississippi defensive end George Plasketes and Vanderbilt plinketer Ed Smith; two track quarter milers, Auburn's Willie Smith and Mississippi State's Evis Jennings; and two from swimming, Tennessee's Andy Coan and Florida's Chris Snodde.

Borg Advances In French Tennis

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, with machine-like power and precision, crushed American Rick Fagel 6-0, 6-1, 6-0 Friday in his bid for a third French Open tennis title.

The 21-year-old Wimbledon champion had little trouble matching Fagel's big whipping forehand and took just 65 minutes to cut down the 24-year-old Columbia University graduate from Miami.

Borg's effortless, nearly error-free performance was similar to the top form he showed earlier this week at Roland Garros Stadium in dispatching France's Eric Delbecq.

The stylish, blond Swede, who won the Italian Open last week, won the French open title in 1974 and 1975, and now appears the heavy favorite to defeat defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, seeded No. 2.

Vilas was forced to five sets on Thursday by Billy Martin of Palos Verdes, Calif. Despite a final set comeback, Vilas was far from impressive.

Borg meets Italy's Paolo Bertolucci in the third round of the $400,000 competition Sunday. Borg has beaten the Italian twice before without a loss.

"It was easy," Borg said after his match with Fagel. "I felt I was going to be playing well. I was thinking I'll make the passing shot before I even hit it."

American Harold Solomon and Italy's Corrado Barazzutti also won Friday and Mexico's Raul Ramirez eliminated Italian Antonio Zugarelli. Solomon, the No. 8 seed, of Pompano Beach, Fla., polished off Chile's Prejux Prajoux 7-6, 6-3, 7-6, 3 in a match begun late Thursday and completed on Friday.

Barazzutti, 25, beat Gianni Ocleppo of Italy 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3 and fellow countryman Bertolucci, 26, sneaked through to defeat George Hardie of Long Beach, Calif., 5-7, 6-1, 7-7, 6-6, 1.

Defending women's champ here Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia also notched a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Betsy Nagelsen of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Wright Widow Heirs Part Ownership Of Calumet Farm

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Warren Wright Jr., heir apparent to Calumet Farm, has left his interest in the famous thoroughbred farm to his widow, Bertha Wright.

Wright's will, signed Nov. 11, 1974, said his personal property and estate were worth more than $1.1 million.

Wright, who owned an insurance agency and died May 19 at 58, did not receive interest in Calumet Farm because he died before his mother, Mrs. Gene Markey, who has control of the farm.

Wright's 19-page will was probated May 26. It said his late father granted him power of appointment over half of a residuary estate, which included Calumet Farm, upon Mrs. Markey's death.

His father also gave him power of appointment over three-fifths of the remainder of a trust estate.

The younger Wright directed that Second National Bank and Trust Co. act as trustee and executor of his estate.

The bank was to control the assets of the residuary and trust estates and was to pay regular installments to Wright's widow for the rest of her life.

Upon Mrs. Wright's death, the money was to be placed in trust for Wright's children, grandchildren and interests selected by Mrs. Wright.

Wright's personal property was listed as a $270,464 trust estate at Second National Bank; 12 shares of Monsanto stock, valued at $600; 702 shares of Texaco stock worth $16,848; and interests in oil royalties totaling $30,000.

He also listed a $770,000 personal estate and $30,000 as income from his personal estate.

His son, Warren Wright III, was left an emerald ring with two diamonds and a life membership in the Keeneland Association.

Automobiles, household furniture, fixtures, cemetery lots or vaults and other personal effects were left to Mrs. Wright.

TALL SHIPS RACE

NEW YORK (AP) — Starting from Honolulu on June 24, a group of the fabled tall ships from the 1976 Bicentennial will race in a special competition for the Cutty Sark Trophy.

The ships will sail first for Victoria, British Columbia. After visiting Vancouver and Seattle, the tall craft will begin the second stage of the race as they head for San Francisco.

Fregosi Will Take Look Before Changes

By The Associated Press

"The main thing I want to do is to take a look at everybody on this club before I start changing things," Jim Fregosi said.

If the California Angels don't start making some changes in a hurry, their new manager will.

One nice change might be a victory. The Angels have lost six in a row, most recently a 6-1 setback Friday night by the Boston Red Sox.

It wasn't as bad as the 17-2 shellacking the Angels suffered at the hands of the Chicago White Sox on Wednesday night, the straw that broke club owner Gene Autry's back and sent Dave Garcia from the managerial ranks to the unemployment line. But there wasn't much good to look at, either.

After watching Butch Hobson drive in four runs, three of them with a towering homer, after watching unbeaten Luis Tiant baffle the Angels on six hits in the six innings he worked (they had seven in all), after watching Nolan international soccer, was the hero of Italy's 2-1 win over France in Group 1. He scored one goal and created the chance for another after France had taken a spectacular first-minute lead.

The two other teams in Group 1, Argentina and Rossi was the brightest star of the day as Italy hit form in the new stadium at Mar del Plata.

But it was the French who gave the crowd of 42,000 its greatest thrill. They scored a classic goal in the first 30 seconds — one of the fastest in the history of the World Cup.

Didier Six raced down the left wing, outpacing two Italians, and sent over a perfect center which Bernard Lacombe headed inside the far post.

"It was very beautiful," Italian Coach Enzo Bearzot said afterwards. "I could not blame any of my defenders for such a fine goal."

But the Italians, playing with fine spirit and teamwork, gradually took charge of the game. Rossi levelled the scores in the 29th minute after feverish excitement in the French goal area.

Franco Causio headed against the post, Roberto Bettega's shot was blocked on the line, and finally Rossi drove it home.

It was 1-1 at halftime. Italy sent in Renato Zaccarelli as a substitute at the start of the second half, and he responded by scoring the winning goal in the 52nd minute, shooting on the turn.

Rossi's rise to fame has been a storybook affair. He erupted on the Italian scene this season and was top scorer in the league, leading Lanerossi Vicenza, one of Italy's more unfashionable teams, to second place in the championship.

Bench's Homer In Ninth Lifts Reds Over Pirates

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer

It was a week between swings for Johnny Bench but the Cincinnati slugger proved that hitting home runs is like riding a bicycle. Once you get the knack of it, you never forget.

Bench came off the bench in the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night and ripped a dramatic pinch home run off, lifting Cincinnati to a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh and Jim Rooker. The victory kept the Reds 1½ games back of first place San Francisco in the National League West.

Bench has hit 297 home runs in his career but Friday night's game-winning shot, his 10th homer this season, was his first ever as a pinch hitter. That's because the Cincinnati slugger is rarely out of the regular lineup.

But he's been sidelined for a week because of muscle spasms in his back suffered in a slide at home plate and the Reds have been getting along without his big bat. He took a muscle relaxant before the game against the Pirates and Manager Sparky Anderson decided to give him a pinch swing for reliever Dave Tomlin in the ninth as a "one-shot thing."

Giants 6, Expos 5

Willie McCovey's two-out double in the 10th inning scored Terry Whitfield with San Francisco's winning run against Montreal.

Whitfield, who drove in two runs for the Giants, had walked and moved to third on a single by Darrell Evans.

The Expos had tied the game in the ninth on a two-run homer by Ellis Valentine. Earlier, Larry Parrish had ripped a three-run homer for Montreal.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 2

In the first meeting this season between the 1977 division champions, Richie Hebner led Philadelphia to its victory with a homer and a single, driving in two runs. Bake McBride had a leadoff homer for the Phillies.

Ron Cey and Bill Russell homered for Los Angeles.

Astros 2, Cardinals 1

Jose Cruz slammed a two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, lifting Houston past St. Louis.

John Denny was working on a three-hitter until Enos Cabell stroked a one-out single and Cruz followed with his homer. Until then, the Astros had managed only one run in the last 34 innings.

Padres 5, Mets 4

Dave Winfield's three-run homer was San Diego's margin over New York. Randy Jones got the victory with late help from Rolfe Fingers, who escaped a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the ninth by feeding a double play pitch to Elliott Maddox to record his 12th save.

Cubs 2, Braves 1

Manny Trillo drilled a bases-loaded single in the 11th inning, delivering Chicago's winning run against Atlanta.

"That was the only ball I didn't hit good," said Trillo, who also had a double and a triple in the victory.

Greg Gross started the winning rally with a walk and raced to third on a single by Bill Buckner. Larry Blittner was intentionally walked and after Bobby Murcer lined out, Trillo delivered the winning hit.

Bench's Pinch-Hit Homer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Bench, his aching back feeling "real loose" for the first time in a week, made the first pinch hit home run of his career.

The ailing Cincinnati catcher belted a two-out solo homer on a 2-2 pitch in the ninth inning, giving the streaking Reds a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Friday night.

"I'm not the best pinch hitter around. It's not one of my favorite things," said Bench, guessing that he has a career batting average under .100 as a pinch hitter.

"I was thinking during the game, before my career is over I'd like to get a pinch hit homer," said Bench, 30, who has almost 300 career homers.

Bench, now with 10 home runs this season, had not played since last Saturday at San Diego when he was used at first base. He was injured about 10 days ago while trying to elude a tag on a fallaway slide at home plate.

The victory was the Reds' 11th in 15 games and kept them from falling further behind the torrid division-leading San Francisco Giants.

Bench said he received a muscle relaxant for his stiff back prior to the game and "started feeling better in the third."

With the score tied at 2-2 in the ninth, Bench said Manager Sparky Anderson indicated he might use Cesar Geronimo as a pinch hitter for the third batter up, pitcher Dave Tomlin.

"I went with John strictly as a one-shot thing," said Anderson, who called the victory "very important."

'The Impossible Dream' Isn't, Says Star Of Sonics' NBA Win

SEATTLE (AP) — The Impossible Dream, says Paul Silas, isn't impossible anymore.

"This team is so young. It has so many things to improve upon. But we're here," said Silas, Seattle's veteran forward, after the SuperSonics' nail-biting 98-94 National Basketball Association championship series victory over the Washington Bullets Friday night.

"We're one game away," continued Silas. "We can do it, we can do it."

The victory before a wild sellout crowd of 14,098 at the Seattle Center Coliseum gave the Sonics a 3-2 lead over the Bullets in the best-of-seven playoff finals.

Seattle can cap its incredible journey through the playoffs and win the whole thing — the NBA championship — with a triumph in Game 6 on Sunday at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md.

If Washington wins Sunday, the seventh and deciding game would be played here Wednesday night.

Guards Fred Brown and Dennis Johnson combined for 50 points and the Sonics got some clutch rebounds and free throws down the stretch in Friday night's victory that left the Bullets teetering on the edge of the playoff cliff.

"I'm not happy with tonight, but we got what we came here for," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, referring to the Bullets' victory in Game 4 Tuesday night that gave them a split of the two games here.

"Tonight's game would have been gravy. We knew we had to get back to the Capital Centre for Game 6," Motta said.

The Sonics, seeking the first championship in their 11-year history, blew a 15-point lead in losing Tuesday night and saw an 11-point bulge dwindle to a single point Friday night.

But this time, as the noisy crowd yelled "We're No. 1," the Sonics met the challenge and held on to win as Gus Williams calmly sank five free throws in the final four minutes.

"The difference tonight was that we were a little smarter down the stretch," said Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens. "One thing you can't do when a team makes a run at you is walk the ball up the court. When we got back to executing and our running game, our shots came back."

Seattle was coasting with an 83-73 lead with seven minutes to play when suddenly the Bullets began finding the range. Bobby Dandridge made three baskets as Washington outscored Seattle 10-1 to close the gap to 84-83 with 4:20 remaining.

Williams sank two free throws to make it 86-83.

After Charles Johnson hit a basket to again bring the Bullets within one again, Brown hit a long jumper for Seattle.

Kevin Grevey, Washington's leading scorer with 22 points, hit one free throw with 3:14 to play, but fouled out shortly thereafter, depriving the Bullets of their best outside threat.

The Sonics converted eight of 10 free throws in the last 2:15 to preserve the victory. Williams and rookie Jack Sikma hitting three apiece and Silas sinking two.

Brown pumped in 26 points and Dennis Johnson added 24 for Seattle. Williams added 13 and Silas and Marvin Webster 10 each.

"I just hit a few shots tonight," said Brown, who canned several off-balance jumpers that kept the Bullets at bay.

"We weren't letting him (Brown) shoot," said Motta. "He made four shots when he double-pump faked. He missed three shots down the stretch to give us a chance."

"A shooter shoots, what else can I say," said Brown. "Hopefully, I'll do the same thing Sunday in Landover."

Motta said the Bullets' lack of patience on offense in the late going hurt them.

"I was trying to slow it down when we got it down to one point," he said. "When we got it down to one, we should have gone to our set offense and been a little more patient. We couldn't keep them off the free throw line down the stretch."

Dandridge added 21 points for Washington. Elvin Hayes had 17, but only five in the second half.

Emporia State Wins NAIA Baseball Title

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Emporia State (Kan.) jumped to an early 7-2 lead and held onto it for an 8-6 victory over Missouri Southern Friday night to give the Hornets the first NAIA baseball title in the school's history.

The Hornets jumped on Barry Jenkins, Missouri Southern's ace righthander, for three runs in the third inning. Darrell Alexander tripled and scored on a single by Randy Weimer.

Pete Villaescusa doubled Weimer home for the second run and Emporia picked up its final run of the inning when Brian Moyer doubled home Villaescusa.

Emporia State padded its lead to 7-2 in the fifth with another three-run explosion. Fred Riesgo singled and Moyer doubled. Jeff Stanley followed with a two-run triple, then scored on a sacrifice fly.

Missouri Southern closed to the final margin on a two-run double by Greg Curran in the seventh.

The Lions had a chance to tie the contest in the eighth, putting runners on first and second with no one out. But Jeff Purcell got Randy Cable to fly out, then struck out Steve Spatz and Chuck Valentine to end the threat.

It was the third meeting in the NAIA world series between the two Central States' Conference members.

'Reincarnated Arnie' Leads Kemper By One

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — By the time the second round had ended, Arnie's Army at the Kemper Open golf tournament had swelled to more than a thousand strong, but one fan in the galleries seemed to speak for all of them.

"You've been reincarnated, Arnie," the fan shouted as veteran Arnold Palmer approached the 15th green Friday. And Palmer could only smile.

He was still smiling when he reached the clubhouse Friday in possession of a 7-under-par 137 for 36 holes in the $300,000 PGA event at the Quail Hollow Country Club.

"There's one way I could be more pleased, and that's to be another 6 strokes ahead," Palmer said after his 2-under-par 70 for the second round put him 1 stroke ahead of Craig Stadler and defending Kemper champion Tom Weiskopf. "But on the other hand, I'm leading, and that's unusual."

It had been two years since the 48-year-old Pennsylvanian led a tournament after 36 holes. And it has been five years since Palmer's last tour victory. That was not lost on the fans as Palmer's lead began to take shape on the leader boards at Quail Hollow.

The galleries on other greens grew increasingly sparse as Palmer neared the final hole. Palmer seemed to appreciate all the attention, but said later that he was feeling more pressure than he had in quite some time.

"It's no secret that I want to do well here," Palmer said calmly as he sipped a beer. "That adds a certain amount of additional pressure, and maybe that's good. I haven't felt that in a while."

Palmer has a house overlooking the 15th fairway of Quail Hollow and business interests, including a car dealership, in the Charlotte area. But the main reason he has considered himself "back at home" this week may be his familiarity with the Quail Hollow course.

He notched three birdies and only one bogey Friday on the 7,160-yard, par-72 layout. One of the birdies, which he scored with a wedge on the 11th hole from a bunker 40 feet out, touched off an ovation that could be heard all the way to the clubhouse.

"I'll take any kind of an advantage I can get," Palmer said later. "Most of these guys have played this course maybe not quite as much as I have."

One who comes close is Tom Weiskopf, who has won three Kemper titles here. He fired a 67 Friday to reach the midway point with a 6-under-par 138.

"I don't know why I play well here, but I feel very comfortable," Weiskopf said. "When you win two or three times on a course, it gives you confidence, and I think that's important."

Craig Stadler, who had not had the benefit of that kind of confidence, eagled the par-4 ninth hole Friday en route to a second-round 67 of his own and a share of second place.

"A little luck never hurts...an eagle feels good anytime," said the former U.S. Amateur champ, who celebrated his 25th birthday Friday. "It does fire you up. I'd like to go back out and play the third round right now."

Ten players finished the second round 2 strokes in back of Palmer, including Hale Irwin, who had a second-round 68 after pulling a muscle under his ribcage on the practice tee Friday morning.

In all, 82 of the 150 entrants reached the midway point in 145 or better to survive the cut. Among those who did not were Jerry Heard, the winner of last week's Atlanta Classic, and PGA champion Lenny Wadkins.

Kim Young, a 23-year-old Texan, aced the 196-yard-eighth hole with a 5-iron, but missed the cut by 4 strokes. And veteran Dave Hill was disqualified Friday after he discovered an error on his first-round scorecard.

Lexington TC Wins State Prep Baseball Tournament

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Tony Mack earned his second pitching victory in as many days and drove in a pair of runs Friday night to lead Lexington Tates Creek to an 8-4 win over Elizabethtown for the Kentucky High School baseball championship.

Mack, voted the tournament's most valuable player, relieved Tates Creek starter Bred Redmon and held E'town to one run and three hits the rest of the way. Mack went the route Thursday in winning a 2-1 decision in the semifinals over two-time defending state champion Owensboro.

Tates Creek decided the game in the top of the sixth, breaking a 4-4 tie with a three-run outburst. Toto Gilbert doubled and Landon King walked to start the uprising, and each runner advanced when a pickoff attempt by E'town catcher John Nusz sailed into centerfield.

Mark Mangione broke the tie with a sacrifice fly, Mack followed with a double to drive in King and Dave Carroll finished the fireworks when he doubled in Mack.

It was the first state baseball title for Tates Creek, which denied Elizabethtown its third title. The Panthers won previously in 1970 and 1975. Tates Creek finished the season 24-9 while Elizabethtown finished at 28-9.

Matt Knowles had the big hit for Elizabethtown, a two-run homer in the third inning. E'town starter Ricky Hart absorbed the loss.

Missouri Man Wins Ky. Lake Bass Tourney

BENTON, Ky. (AP) — L.F. "Shorty" Evans of Houston, Mo., caught 13 pounds 5 ounces of bass Friday to net the $14,120 top prize in the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society's Kentucky Lake Invitational Tournament.

The 65-year-old mortician, who led all three rounds, became the oldest angler ever to win a BASS tournament in the organization's 11-year history. He finished more than nine pounds ahead of Raleigh, N.C., insurance executive Paul Chamblee, who was runner-up with 47 1/4 pounds. Chamblee earned $2,380.

Bobby Murray of Nashville, Tenn., received $1,780 for finishing third with 45 pounds 6 ounces and Bo Dowden of Natchitoches, La., took fourth with 42 3/4 pounds. He earned $1,485.

Roland Martin of Broken Arrow, Okla., slipped from runner-up spot in the second round,

Near World-Record In Oregon

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Sophomore Greg Foster, running despite a trick knee, raced to an American record of 13.22 seconds and missed the world mark by only one hundredth of a second in winning the 110-meter high hurdles title at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships Friday.

The 19-year-old Foster, from Maywood, Ill., the second consecutive NCAA high hurdles champion from UCLA, erased the American mark of 13.24 by Rod Milburn of Southern University in 1972 and barely missed the world mark of 13.21 by Alejandro Casanas of Cuba, set last year.

Foster nipped freshman Renaldo Nehemiah of Maryland at the tape.

Nehemiah's time of 13.27 seconds was a world junior's record, breaking the mark of 13.57 set by Robert Gaines of the United States at the 1976 Olympic Trials in Eugene.

The junior marks apply to athletes 19 years and under, but Foster was not eligible because he will be 20 during this calendar year.

Three other meet records were broken during the second day of competition of the three-day meet at newly refurbished Hayward Field at the University of Oregon.

Clancy Edwards of Southern California won the 100-meter dash in the meet record time of 10.07 seconds, ending the bid of Harvey Glance of Auburn for a third straight title.

Scott Nielson of the University of Washington captured the hammer throw for the third consecutive year with a record toss of 237-5, and Auburn's 400-meter relay team of Tony Easley, James Walker, Willie Smith and Glance set a meet record of 39.49 seconds in winning its semifinal heat.

Meanwhile, James Lofton of Stanford won the long jump at 26-11 1/4, a mark that exceeded the NCAA record of 26-11, but will not be recognized because it was wind-aided.

Other winners Friday were Mike Musyoki of Texas-El Paso in the 10,000-meter race in 28:30.91, after favored Henry Rono of Washington State withdrew because of a foot injury; and David Laut of UCLA in the shotput at 66-1 1/4.

Musyoki beat a field of 32 in the 10,000. He got a break when Rono, who has the fastest time of the year in the event, was forced to scratch because of a foot injury, ending his bid for a possible triple. Rono is the favorite in Saturday's 3,000-meter steeplechase and 5,000. He set meet records in both events in Thursday's qualifying and holds the world record in both.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Whenever we eat at a place where they serve plastic knives, forks and spoons, we save them. They make wonderful markers in a garden, even for pots and plants.

Just identify the seeds being planted with a felt pen on the fattest part of the plastic utensil and stick it in the dirt in its proper place. Then, to be sure the markings remain for a longer period, cover with clear acrylic spray.

Plastic knives are the best markers for outside gardening, while forks and spoons are satisfactory in flower and plant pots. The more variety in color, the better for attractiveness. — Ruth Krueger

This is one more good use for these free utensils.

Save 'em, folks, and if you don't have a garden, flowers, etc., maybe you could give them to a neighbor who does. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

When the freezer is full and you're not sure what's in there, how about taking inventory. Make a list (in pencil). Then tape it to the side of the freezer. When you remove a package, cross it from the list. When you add one, add it to the list — in pencil.

It's nice to always know just what is in that freezer, and it sure helps me. — Bruce

DEAR HELOISE:

While shopping for bedspreads for my twin beds, I found them quite expensive, and couldn't find just the color I wanted, either.

Then I looked at those lovely floral sheets and found that the full size would be just right for each twin bed.

I also found colors to match or blend with my lavender wallpaper and drapes. Neighbors say they dress up my room! — Grandma

DEAR HELOISE:

It always looks so nice for a new homemaker to have handles match on kitchen utensils, such as large spoons, forks, mashers, and other things used in preparing food. But, if a person keeps them in a drawer, it is a nuisance to open the drawer and see all handles alike.

I have found that I prefer that all the handles have different shapes and colors. Then I can simply reach for the handle I recognize for the utensil I want. — Lois McClusky

You are right as rain, Lois. I too can glance in my drawer and tell quickly which is what I want from the hodgepodge I have. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a 13-cent idea. Suppose I decided not to mail this letter after affixing a stamp to the envelope. Can I get my stamp back?

There seems to be no feasible way to get a stamp off an envelope, but it's easy to get the envelope off the stamp. That's right!

Don't pull on the stamp. Just double back the envelope at the edge of the stamp — the two papers separate quite readily.

Work around the stamp, being careful not to let the stamp bend — keep it flat.

The stamp comes off unrumpled, unfeathered. A drop of muckage and it's worth 13 cents again. — A Man in the Ladies Department

Bodies Are Believed Those Of Missing Elderly Couple

PINEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The bodies of an elderly man and woman were recovered Thursday from Clear Creek near Pine Mountain State Resort Park, and officials said they are apparently those of a Cincinnati couple who disappeared last week.

Charles Arnold, 78, and his 81-year-old wife, Winnifred, have been missing since last Wednesday.

Bell County Coroner James Durham said the bodies were too decomposed to identify, but he said a prescription bottle found on the man's body carried Arnold's name.

"There's no doubt in my mind as to who it is," Durham said.

He said there also is sufficient dental work on the man's body to allow it to be identified.

According to Durham, there were no signs of foul play. Police said both bodies will be sent to a police pathologist in Louisville to determine the cause of death. The man's body was discovered near a saw mill by an employee who called state police. A search of the area turned up the woman's body a short time later.

The couple was reported missing when they did not check out of the park lodge on time. Police found their car and personal belongings, but there was no trace of the couple.

Since then, police, national guardsmen and volunteers have been searching for the couple.

The Arnolds were said to be avid hikers, who had hiked in Kentucky, Virginia and North Carolina for almost 50 years.

Arnold was a retired personnel consultant for the Kroger Co.

An psychic, who was not identified, had joined the search Wednesday after he said he had a vision about where the couple could be found.

Cancer Clinic For Women Here On June 8

A cancer test (Pap) clinic for women will be conducted at the Graves Co. Health Department on June 8th.

In announcing the clinic, a Health Department spokesman gave the following comments:

"Cervical cancer is the second leading type of cancer in women, and over 200 women in Kentucky die from it each year. These are needless deaths because when detected at an early stage, cervical cancer is almost 100 percent curable."

"The pap test is a simple, painless test which detects cancer of the cervix months and even years before visible signs occur. To protect her life and the lives of her family, it is important that every woman have a pap test at least every year."

"All women are urged to take advantage of the tests offered by the Graves County Health Department," the spokesman said.

The next clinic is Thursday, June 8, 1978. Call 247-3553 now for an appointment.

UNLOADING AT HORSE PARK — Marlan Conley, (right), of the Kentucky Horse Park and Jim Symmes of Sallee Horse Vans lead two Hackney horses into their new home at the park near Lexington. Along with four Belgian horses, the Hackneys Wednesday became the first horses to live on the park. The Belgians will take visitors on a horse-drawn tour while the Hackneys will be used to demonstrate carriages of the past. Conley, director of the park's horse-drawn tours, said the park hopes to purchase representatives of every commonly-used draft horse breed for visitors to see when the park opens in September.

Navy Seabee Found Russian In Secret Snooping Room

MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. Navy Seabee's sudden confrontation with a Russian manning a secret room packed with surveillance gear climaxed the latest round in the American Embassy's long war against Soviet electronic snooping, sources reported Friday.

The surprise meeting in the basement of a nearby building — prompting the startled Russian to flee in surprise — came after American security officers discovered an array of Soviet bugging equipment hidden in a shaft in the embassy's south wing.

American investigators traced the wires from the intelligence-gathering devices down the vertical shaft to a tunnel leading into an apartment building adjacent to the embassy, the sources said.

Finally, one of the Navy men assigned to the embassy to handle construction in classified areas was sent into the tunnel, and had a face-to-face showdown with the Soviet eavesdropping specialist monitoring operation of the bugs.

Embassy personnel then bricked up the tunnel.

American officials in Moscow and Washington were reported examining the sophisticated surveillance devices and trying to assess the degree to which the embassy's security had been breached.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Thomas Reston said the United States had lodged a formal protest with the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Symsonia PTA To Sponsor Supper, Singing

The Symsonia PTA organization will sponsor an ice cream and cake supper and gospel singing on Friday, June 9th, at the school.

The supper will begin at 6 p.m. with the singing to follow at 7:30 p.m. The Tabernacle Inspirations and the Harvesters will be the featured singing groups.

Tickets will cost 50 cents per person. Proceeds will be used to purchase school playground equipment, a spokesman said.

There was no immediate comment on the incident by the Soviet government or news agencies.

An official in Washington, who asked not to be named, said there was regular physical penetration of the embassy by Soviets without the knowledge of the United States.

"We're still trying to figure this puzzle out," he said. "We're doing a technical assessment of the problem right now. But it might take some time to determine precisely how it works."

He said the equipment might be linked to the mysterious Soviet microwave bombardment of the embassy.

Since the early 1960s, the Soviets have been aiming microwave beams at the embassy's upper floors, which contain the offices of ranking diplomats and a variety of electronic intelligence-gathering equipment.

The peak strength of the radiation has been focused in the vicinity of the ambassador's office on the ninth floor, located about 80 feet from the shaft where the bugging gear was discovered.

Earlier speculation about the purpose of the microwaves has included possible use of the beams to energize Russian bugging devices or to try to foil U.S. electronic eavesdropping efforts.

The sources here said the latest bug-hunting episode began late last week when security men running a routine check spotted a suspicious wire behind a radiator in one of the apartments on the fourth or fifth floor of the embassy's south wing.

The telltale wire led into the ventilation shaft where the bugging devices were secreted. Near the top of the shaft, the sources said, investigators found a dish-shaped antenna connected to the surveillance gear. The investigators followed the shaft down to an underground tunnel. The tunnel passes under a room where Soviet employees who clean the embassy are allowed to change clothes and then into the basement of the adjoining apartment building.

It appeared the bugging devices inside the shaft had been maintained regularly by Russians coming in via the tunnel, the sources said.

There have been several previous efforts in the history of the present American Embassy to ferret out Soviet bugs. The embassy was originally built as an apartment building and turned over to the United States in 1952.

Strike Force To Probe Coal Fraud Cases

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A federal prosecutor said Friday that a strike force of the U.S. Justice Department will coordinate an investigation of coal fraud in eight states, including Kentucky.

The investigation will concentrate on a number of coal-fraud schemes, including interstate transportation of stolen mining equipment and violations of federal securities regulations, said Donald E. Foster, a prosecutor in the Justice Department's fraud section.

A Kentucky investigation of such schemes began last November. State officials said Friday that the probe has resulted in the arrest of seven persons and the recovery of $1.1 million in stolen mining equipment.

Foster said in a telephone interview that the federal effort began after Gov. Julian Carroll and other coal-state governors wrote U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell requesting a coordinated state-federal investigation to stop coalfield crime.

Foster said he is planning a meeting of U.S. attorneys from a number of states to coordinate investigations.

In addition to Kentucky, attorneys from Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, West Virginia, Illinois, Pennsylvania and California will be involved.

Eight Members Of Family Die In Apartment Fire

COHOES, N.Y. (AP) — Seven children and one man were killed in an apartment house fire in the Albany suburb of Cohoes, said Cohoes Police Sergeant John Szymaszek.

The names and ages of the victims were not immediately available but the children were said to be from different families.

The blaze at the four-family building started at about 11:30 p.m. Friday and was still burning several hours later, according to fire department officials.

Jerusalem Bus Is Bombed On 11th Anniversary Of Capture Of City

JERUSALEM (AP) — The death toll rose to six today in a Palestinian bomb blast on a city bus apparently timed to mark the 11th anniversary of Israel's capture of Jerusalem.

A 17-year-old Israeli youth died during the night. Five others, including 30-year-old Richard Fishman of Silver Spring, Md., a medical student in Israel, died in the bombing Friday.

The attack came as Israel prepared to celebrate the 11th anniversary Sunday of its capture of East Jerusalem, including the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest shrine.

The eastern half of the city was taken from Jordan during the Six-Day war on June 7, 1967, but Sunday marks the anniversary in the Hebrew calendar.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek said he hoped the attack would not mar the festivities. "I would not want these bastards to let our festivities be in any way diverted," he said. "That would be the success they would pray for."

Twenty persons were injured when the bomb exploded Friday in rush hour traffic as the bus turned into a suburb near Yad Vashem, Israel's memorial to the 6 million Jews exterminated by the Nazis.

The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut said its Al Fatah faction was responsible for the blast and that the 13-pound bomb was planted by "an underground squad" that escaped.

However, Israeli police said they arrested several suspects.

The American victim was identified as Richard Fishman, 30, of Silver Spring, Md. A U.S. Embassy official said Fishman was registered as a medical student in Israel.

The other victims were two 15-year-old girls and two males, aged 12 and 18. Three children were among the wounded.

The bomb ripped the rear of the bus apart, shearing it into tangled shreds and sending hunks of glass and sheet metal hurtling through the air like shrapnel.

Police described the bomb as an 81mm mortar shell with a watch-operated detonating device. They said the death toll would have been much higher had the rush-hour bus been full.

"Thank God the bus was half empty," said Avraham Flazner, a former Chicago resident who suffered a minor shoulder wound. "When I heard the explosion I got up and walked away. I was in a daze. I was lucky to be sitting in the middle of the bus."

Rescuers said a decapitated teen-age girl was among the dead and wounded found scattered in the wreckage.

Yaacov Barashi, manager of a taxi stand about 50 feet from the explosion, radioed his fleet and a dozen taxis transported the victims to hospitals within minutes.

"When I went up in the bus there were screams and passengers were jumping out," said taxi driver Yitzhak Bayanzl. "We took out the rest as fast as we could."

It was the 11th bombing in the Israeli capital this year, raising the toll in Jerusalem terrorist attacks to seven dead and about 80 wounded.

House Approves Tuition Tax Credit Bill Despite Opposition By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may still have his way despite House passage of sweeping tuition tax credit legislation strongly opposed by the White House.

The 237-158 House vote approving the bill Thursday was 27 votes short of the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a presidential veto, expected if the measure finally clears Congress.

The legislation, which provides credits against college, elementary and secondary school tuition, now goes to the Senate, which has shown itself even more favorable to tuition credits than the House.

The House-passed measure would allow a taxpayer to subtract directly from his income tax 25 percent of his tuition outlays, within limits.

The maximum credit in the case of college or other post-secondary tuition would be $100 this year, $150 in 1979 and $250 in 1980, for each student. At the lower educational levels, the maximum would be $50 this year and $100 in each of the next two. The program would end after three years unless Congress renewed it.

Pending in the Senate, with the approval of the Finance Committee, is a measure providing credits up to $500.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said he does not think a veto could be overridden.

He said House leaders might bring up a bill embodying Carter's proposal to expand existing college aid programs by $1.2 billion and making families with incomes up to $25,000 eligible for some benefits.

The House, which unlike the Senate had never before passed a tuition tax credit bill, not only did so Thursday, approved the measure after first broadening what had been only a college tuition credit to include tuition at the lower educational levels. That change carried by only 15 votes — 209 to 194.

Because the credit would apply to private and parochial elementary and secondary schools, the House action raised a constitutional issue about which Carter has expressed particular concern.

The president has said that he was inclined to veto any tuition tax credit measure that was costly and unconstitutional.

The House measure, which appears to fit that description, would cost in lost taxes an estimated $635 million in its first full year and $1.2 billion in two years.

And an opinion by the Justice Department says that a measure including elementary and secondary tuition credits would probably be declared unconstitutional.
