SUDDEN STOP — The rear wheels of a two-ton farm truck loaded with sawdust came off Friday afternoon on the Symsonia Highway, approximately four miles from Mayfield, and the results are pictured. The driver was listed as Rickie Satterwhite. Two passengers, Jeremy Satterwhite, 3, and David Richardson, 14, were treated at Community Hospital. Satterwhite was treated and released, while Richardson was admitted for treatment.

Rolled Out Of Control

Scientists Correct Wayward Skylab

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists working to keep the Skylab space station from crashing back to Earth got the 85-ton vehicle stabilized Friday after a tense 90 minutes when it rolled out of control.

Ground controllers said late Friday afternoon they were moving ahead with preparations for a final maneuver Saturday intended to delay the vehicle's drop from orbit, which could lead to its breakup with debris possibly striking a populated area.

Early Friday, the Houston control center sent a critical command which tilted the unmanned space station so that its solar panels continually point at the sun. That allows the panels to generate more electricity for the vehicle's controls and instruments.

But later, while controllers were sending up routine commands, the station, the world's largest man-made satellite, began rolling out of control. Officials said an unexplained signal from the on-board computer had changed the position of the control gyroscopes.

That caused small steering rockets to fire and sent the spacecraft tumbling. The delay in regaining control was caused by Skylab passing out of range of ground-based radio.

A series of commands from the ground corrected the gyroscopes' positions and stopped the rockets, said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Bob Gordon.

He said they may go ahead with Saturday's maneuver about 3 a.m. CDT, about 4½ hours earlier than planned.

Controllers will send a series of new signals to fire small steering rockets to tip the space station so it orbits parallel to Earth, small end forward rather than nose up.

The parallel position will reduce atmospheric drag on Skylab, and could add from six months to a year to its orbital life.

By October 1979, the space shuttle is expected to be ready, NASA said, and astronauts can fly to the station to attach a small rocket that would boost Skylab into a higher, longer-lasting orbit. The rocket could also be used to guide the station into a re-entry path that would guarantee break-up over an unpopulated ocean area.

If Saturday's maneuver fails, NASA estimates Skylab will fall out of orbit sometime between early 1979 and early 1980.

Computer calculations indicate that when Skylab dives back into the atmosphere it could spew debris over a track 3,000 miles long and 100 miles wide. As many as 400 pieces, some weighing 300 pounds, could survive the searing heat of re-entry, and strike Earth at speeds of 200 mph.

Skylab's 242-mile-high orbit passes over most of the world's major metropolitan areas, but it spends 75 percent of the time over water, thus reducing the possibility of land impact, NASA said.

One source said that decision will require "judgement calls" in some cases, meaning some of the possible violations Jaworski listed are not as clear-cut as others.

The source said Jaworski also recommended possible perjury action against two former congressmen, who were not named.

By President Carter

Water Rights Bid Renewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's call for construction of 26 new water projects includes 20 already in the House public works appropriations bill, and six others that are small scale.

None of Carter's proposed projects is as big as the Glen Canyon Dam in Utah, the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway in Mississippi or the Central Arizona Project. Two don't even resemble water projects.

Rep. Harold T. Johnson, D-Calif., chairman of the House Public Works Committee, summed up Carter's water project proposals this way:

"I think it was a gesture saying that he will agree to new starts, to full funding."

Carter announced his proposals on Friday — the first time in four years that a chief executive has called for starting construction on water projects. The 26 proposals would cost an estimated $718 million.

It was a sharp turnaround for Carter, who early in his administration had angered Congress and some states by attempting to kill water projects.

Carter's biggest proposed project, one that is not included in the House bill, might best be described as a campground.

The Corps of Engineers project, known as the Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area, does not include dams, irrigation ditches or dredging — traditional work for a water project.

Instead, Carter proposed spending $140 million to acquire land in Kentucky and Tennessee to preserve "as a natural free-flowing stream the Big South Fork of the Cumberland River, major portions of its Clear Fork and New River stems, and portions of their various tributaries."

The only construction or earth moving will consist of "day-use facilities, historical sites, primitive campgrounds and access roads" in the river gorge area. "Lodges and other facilities will be provided in the adjacent areas," the corps said.

By the same token, the $78 million "Lower Snake River Fish and Wildlife Compensation Plan," which is included in the House bill, sounds more like a conservation project.

Most of the money will be spent to buy land along the river in Idaho,

Oregon and Washington, with construction limited to fish hatcheries and "subsequent development of these lands for wildlife."

Rep. Jake Garn, R-Utah, commented after hearing of Carter's 26 proposals that "I hope he does not consider this announcement the maximum he will accept, but rather the minimum on which to build."

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee that deals with water projects, said he viewed Carter's announcement with mixed feelings.

As for the fact that 20 of the 26 "new" projects already are in the House public works bill, California's Johnson said, "He's coming in a little late."

The other five Carter projects not included in the House bill would add a fifth hydroelectric unit at Hartwell Lake, Ga., $18.4 million; enlarge Metlakatla Harbor, Alaska, $6.9 million; build a seawall and levee to stop flooding at Point Place, Ohio, $6.3 million; deepen the harbor at Two Harbors, Minn., $260,000; and expand the West Bench Irrigation District in Montana, $3.1 million.

Committee Ponders Next Step In Korean Influence Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee may decide next week whether proceedings are warranted against former Democratic Whip John J. McFall and three other Democratic congressmen in connection with contributions from Tongsun Park, sources say.

All four congressmen say they did nothing wrong, but special counsel Leon Jaworski and his investigators cited House rules which they might have violated, according to the sources, who are familiar with the investigation.

Only the committee can decide whether Jaworski's information warrants proceedings that could lead to House disciplinary action against McFall, of California, and Reps. Edward J. Patten of New Jersey and Charles H. Wilson and Edward R. Roybal of California.

One source said that decision will require "judgement calls" in some cases, meaning some of the possible violations Jaworski listed are not as clear-cut as others.

The source said Jaworski also recommended possible perjury action against two former congressmen, who were not named.

National Pattern

Arson Seems On Upswing In State

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Arson is on the upswing in rural areas and in smaller cities across the country, and Kentucky is no exception, a federal fire prevention official said Friday.

"There's no easy solution," Richard Strother of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration told about 40 Kentucky firemen and fire chiefs, city officials and arson investigators attending an arson seminar here.

"Arson begins with need — for money, revenge or a thrill," Strother said. "The new approach is to remove those incentives."

"Arson will continue as long as it's good business," he added, noting that the conviction rate for deliberately set fires is much lower than for other serious crimes.

Strother said 1975 insurance industry statistics indicate that arson accounted for 21 percent of all fires in the country, resulting in losses amounting to more than $1.2 billion.

More deaths result from intentionally set fires each year than from all natural disasters in this country, he said.

In the past, federal, state and local officials have concentrated on controlling traditional causes of fire: carelessness or faulty or antiquated electrical wiring, or natural causes such as lightning, he said.

Arson has been ignored or overlooked because of the lack of accurate statistics, he said.

He is a local problem, and local officials must compile data on the problem as it exists in their community.

Strother said there are a variety of reasons for arson.

A group of Texas housewives set grease fires in their kitchens so they could collect insurance for redecorating, he said.

He said a professional arson ring in Boston bought up buildings and arranged to have them burned to collect inflated insurance benefits.

Strother said society must make it harder for arsonists to reap the benefits of insurance.

"Why must we take $40 out of our pockets every time we buy fire insurance and give it to arsonists?" he asked. "It's the responsibility of the public and community officials to say that should not be."

Strother said there is a severe shortage of trained arson investigators, and that the federal agency has instituted an 80-hour training course in an effort to standardize investigation practices.

Arson prevention requires public support and cooperation from a wide range of people including law enforcement agencies, fire departments, prosecutors, bankers and insurance agents, he said.

Neighborhood involvement is also important in arson prevention, he said.

The seminar was sponsored by the Kentucky Municipal League and the National League of Cities.

Graves Co. School Board Rescinds Motion To Increase School Taxes

The Graves Co. Board of Education has withdrawn a motion to raise county school taxes.

Meeting in regular session Friday night, the county school board voted unanimously to rescind its motion of April 14th to increase local county school taxes, following a recommendation by Graves Co. School Superintendent Gyndel E. Garnett.

About one week ago, Garnett announced that he would recommend the school tax motion be withdrawn after a citizens petition opposed the measure.

Motion No. 179 authorized the board of education to adopt a local ad valorem school tax rate to meet the minimum requirements for participation in the State Power Equalization Program for School Funding for the school year beginning July 1, 1978, with the total local ad valorem school tax rate not to exceed 10 cents.

In effect, the motion would have authorized a tax increase of 4 and one-half cents on the local level, Garnett said.

At the May 12 board of education meeting, a group of citizens appeared with petitions designed to block the board action and force a referendum in November.

Garnett said that after examining the petitions, many signatures appear to be in error, many petitions forms appear to be in error, and many signatures are believed to have been obtained via information irrelevant to the intent of the board's action in its adoption of the Power of Equalization resolution.

Garnett concluded by saying that with due respect to the signers of said petitions, who acted in good faith and otherwise, he will recommend that the board rescind motion no. 179.

If the board upholds Garnett's recommendation to rescind the motion, the question will not appear on the November ballot, he said.

Southern Educators Discuss Methods To Head Off School Taxpayer Revolt

KEY BISCAINE, Fla. (AP) — To avoid attack in the impending tax-payers' revolt, higher education must establish stronger links with the public, says West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller, chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board.

Rockefeller, elected here Friday as the SREB's chairman for the next year, said in an interview that higher education "could get gouged" as the type of taxpayer sentiment shown in California Tuesday spreads nationally.

"People are tired of taxes, and state budgets are going to be hurt. Higher education could get gouged," he said.

Rockefeller said the overwhelming approval of Proposition 13, which rolls back property taxes by more than half in California, "doesn't necessarily mean voters are going to take a ball bat and say no to everything."

However, funding decreases caused by tax reductions scare education supporters because "the public doesn't identify itself with higher education. Education immediately cuts out a lot of people because most people don't go to college."

"We must show the taxpayers that what is done in higher education is for the general benefit," he said, warning the SREB conference that "we have a major selling job to do."

As an example, the West Virginia Democrat said, "A doctor in a small rural community is an example of pumping back the benefits of education, even to people who don't have an education."

"The voters will support education as long as they realize that the lasting progress of our states will be no faster than that of higher education," he said.

Rockefeller said more continuing education programs — programs that offer career training and non-degree courses for post-graduates — should be available to enable as many people as possible to take part in education.

North Carolina Gov. James Hunt, the outgoing SREB chairman, agreed that education faces "an uncertain period" and that continuing education and other programs that result in greater involvement must be expanded.

Israeli Attack Devastates Base

AAQBIYE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli commandos landing in darkness from the air and sea devastated a Palestinian seacoast base in this fishing village Friday. Israel called it a pre-emptive attack on guerrillas planning seaborne terror raids on Israel.

Abu Jihad, commander of Al Fatah guerrillas in Lebanon, said the garrison was caught off guard. He said its defenders killed 10 Israelis and lost five "martyrs."

The military command in Tel Aviv, however, said only two Israeli lieutenants were killed and eight raiders wounded in a brief but bloody attack that destroyed what it said was a guerrilla naval base. It said the attackers counted eight Palestinian bodies and believed more were killed when the Israelis dynamited the base.

Independent United Nations sources said four Israelis were killed. Local hospital officials said they saw the bodies of five Palestinians.

"Of course they caught us off guard," said one of about 40 guerrillas milling around the ruined camp later in the day. "Everyone was asleep except for two guards."

"More of us would have been killed if we had been in the main house at the time," said one of the defenders, pointing to a bullet-scarred building in the center of the walled compound. "We were sleeping under the trees," said the guerrilla, who refused to be identified.

Palestinians said the bodies of six Lebanese laborers were buried under the rubble of one dynamite-demolished house, but this could not be confirmed until the wreckage was cleared.

Jihad told reporters 19 guerrillas manned the outpost. The Israeli military spokesman estimated the number at 30 to 40. Jihad denied it was a naval base or a staging area for attacks on the Jewish state.

"This is not a major base at all. We have some people here just as we have them scattered all around the area," said Jihad, No. 3 man in the hierarchy of Al Fatah, largest guerrilla faction in Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

In Tel Aviv, the Israelis said they had evidence the coastal base was being used to prepare for attacks on Israel "in the near future."

Critical Shortage Of Blood Is Noted

The summer slump in blood giving has already reached the Nashville Region and the Paducah area, according to latest information received here from the Paducah Red Cross Blood Sub-Center, Rufus Harris, Local Blood Program chairman, stated today.

With so many families on vacation and farmers busy crop planting, this Bloodmobile visit could be a crucial one, Harris pointed out. He urged the able-bodied who are available and have time to respond to the plea for donors and to donate blood if at all possible.

The need for blood runs high during the summer months. Accidents on the highways, in the home and on the farms take many lives. Every seventeen seconds, there's a call on the Red Cross to supply this precious life fluid. Only you can supply it. There is no substitute, Harris said.

Bloodmobile days will be this coming Tuesday, from 1 to 7 p.m. and on Wednesday, June 13 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Location will be the First United Methodist Church.

Donors requiring transportation are asked to dial the Bloodmobile telephone number 247-3921. Red Cross Youth will provide baby sitting service for small children of mothers who plan to donate blood, Harris stated.

To date 200 persons have made advanced pledges but at least 305 persons will be needed to visit Bloodmobile during the two days to reach the goal of 265 pints of blood. At least 15 percent of all donors are rejected for health reasons at each bloodmobile, Harris said.

Latest to pledge are: Sheila Clark, Steven W. Allen, Robert W. Berry, Wilhelmina Bowlin, William R. Brown, Robert C. Buckman, James W. Canter, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby G. Canter, Vickie

Gail and Danny Bell, Sandy Cope, David L. Cornman, Mrs. Darrell DeMoss, Thomas E. Diehl, Edda C. Prince, Frieda Pritchard, Gayna Puckett, John Purcell, Joe Owen Pyle, Wendell Ramage, James W. Reynolds, Donald W. Rodgers, Gerald Rodgers, Leon Rogers, Larry B. Lain, Theresa B. Lancaster, Lunelle W. Leonard, Steve Ray Lewis, Alan Wray Indstrom, Willard D. Long, John Manscill, William L. Mathis, Jerry Wilson Mayes, Ron N. Mays, Carl L. Melton, Margaret M. Miller, Roscoe G. Barnes, Neta Brewer, Michael Goodwin, Charles W. Jackson, Bill N. Adams, Jeretta Adams, Carol Adkins, Tommy Adkins, Gary Alexander, Richard Lynn Allen, Linda Anderson, L.J. Andrews, Rebecca Arnold, James Arvin, Nancy Ballard, Ima Lou Barnes, Mildred Barnett, Charles J. Baugh, Rayford Beadles and Hillard J. Bean.

Messenger Congratulations To...

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry David Ray, Hickory, route 2, on the birth of a daughter, Janice Faye, on June 3 at Community Hospital.

To Your Good Health

By DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the best time to have a child's ears corrected? My boy's ears protrude markedly and we would like to spare him the embarrassment from children, who you know can be cruel about such matters. How much can they be corrected? We would appreciate your comments on this. The boy is three and a half years old, so I suppose he has a couple of years before he becomes sensitive about the problem. Why is it boys seem to have this problem more than girls? — Mrs. O.W.

The procedure for correcting prominent ears is called "otoplasty," and is highly successful, often resulting in near perfect correction. While it is usually best to have such surgery done after ears have fully developed, it can be done quite early. The relatively simple surgery is best done in the summer before school begins.

The problem apparently afflicts girls as much as its does boys. Girls are more apt to have their hair longer than boys, and so the defect is usually covered up. The long hair trend of the recent past was probably welcomed by many young men with prominent ears.

A plastic surgeon can instruct you as to the details of the operation, which involves weakening of certain cartilage behind the ear.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You had an article a few months back that interested me very much. It had to do with having a ream job on arteries to prevent stroke. I believe it was in the neck. My question is would this work for a person after he had a stroke? Would it help? — H.D.

I doubt that I used the term "ream job." The procedure to which you refer is an "endarterectomy." It is an opening up of the artery (usually the carotid artery) that serves the brain. It can be done if tests show the artery "clogged" with material such as cholesterol plaques. While effective in preventing strokes from occurring, it will not undo the brain damage from a stroke. It might help prevent future strokes, however. I can always leave it up to my readers to come up with colorful (albeit non-medical) phrases to describe various procedures. You may want to read my booklet dealing with a stroke. For a copy, send 35 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of this newspaper. It discusses prevention.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: During a routine checkup the doctor noticed that my 16-year-old daughter had an enlarged thyroid. An endocrinologist gave her blood tests and thyroid scans. He told us recently that her calcitonin level has been steadily increasing and that removal of her thyroid is now indicated. He said research shows that there is a strong correlation between high calcitonin and later thyroid cancer. In your opinion does high calcitonin in the blood plus the enlarged thyroid justify its removal in a 16-year-old girl? — N.H.

Calcitonin is a hormone produced by the thyroid gland. It is often produced in excess with thyroid cancer. The surgery appears advisable. If you have doubts seek a second opinion to ease your mind about your decision. Your present doctor will understand your qualms.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please give me a definition of aseptic necrosis of the femur. — L.H.H.

This is a disintegration or destruction of the thighbone, the large bone extending from the pelvis to the knee. The disturbance is usually due to a faulty blood supply to the area, often resulting from an injury. Aseptic means that germs (infection) are not present. You'll recognize the root of the word from the term "antiseptic" (against infection).

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a female who has had a sex change operation to become a male produce children as a male? — M.R.

No, because no sperm will be produced. While I'm at it, I'll answer H.S., who asked the question in reverse (male to female). No ova (eggs) are produced.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that wrapping food in aluminum foil can cause young men to become sterile. I have two sons and I'm very concerned. — Mrs. M.P.

I would be, too, were it true. It isn't.

Your thyroid plays a critical health role for you — in everything from eyesight to fertility. Dr. Thosteson explains this important, and misunderstood, gland in his booklet, "Your Thyroid: How It Works For You." To get a copy, enclose 50 cents and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope to him care of this newspaper.

Nash Is New Presbyterian Pastor Here

The Rev. James H. Nash

James H. Nash, who was formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Somerville, Tenn., has assumed pastorate of Mayfield's First Presbyterian Church. He and his family moved to the church manse on Backusburg Road last week.

The Rev. Nash, a native of Atlanta, Ga. is 43 years of age. He graduated from Baylor University, Waco, Texas, and received the master of divinity degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, in 1959.

He went to the Somerville church in 1972, after pastoring several churches in Georgia, and was received into Western Kentucky Union on June 1, to serve the Mayfield church.

Nash is currently enrolled in McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, in the doctor of ministry course of study. He is married to the former Barbara Louise Moseley, and they have two teen-age sons, Robb and Rick.

While in Georgia, Mr. Nash was founder and first president of the R. T. Jones Memorial Hospital Volunteer Chaplains' Association, served on associational and state Baptist Convention committees, and was a member of the Cobb County Inter-racial Board.

He was a two-term member of the Christian Education Committee of the Presbytery of Cherokee, and a member of the task force on leadership development for the Synod of Georgia Christian Education Committee.

In 1972, he was a commissioner to the Presbytery Church in the U. S. General Assembly, served on numerous committees in the Presbytery of Memphis, and was actively involved in area mental health organizations.

At the time of his transfer to the Western Kentucky Union, Nash was moderator in nomination for the Presbytery of Memphis. He lists his hobbies as photography, genealogy, and gardening.

Installation services for the new pastor are set for June 18.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

RESOLVING CONFLICT

The Scripture for this lesson is Acts 15. Selected verses from the Revised Standard Version of the Bible are printed here.

Acts 15:1-2, 22-31

1 But some men came down from Judea and were teaching the brethren, "Unless you are circumcised according to the custom of Moses, you cannot be saved." 2 And when Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and debate with them, Paul and Barnabas and some of the others were appointed to go up to Jerusalem to the apostles and the elders about this question.

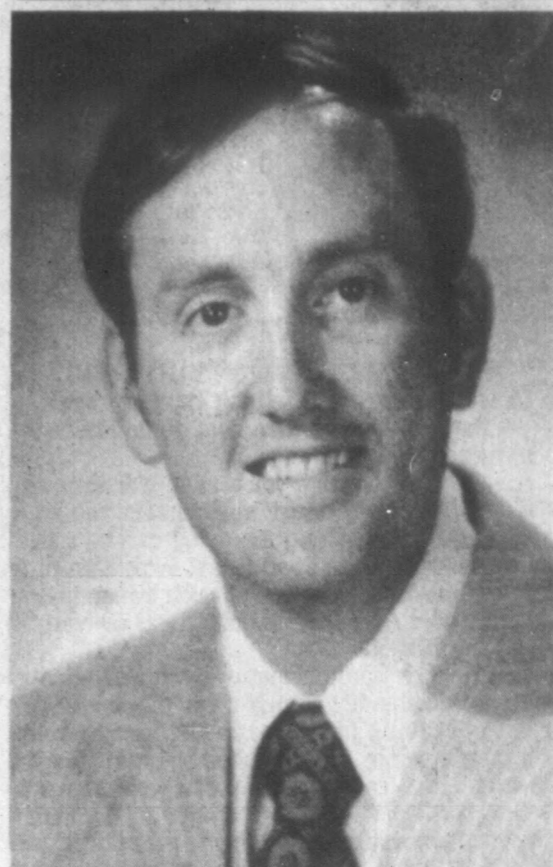

22 Then it seemed good to the apostles and the elders, with the whole church, to choose men from among them and send them to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas. They sent Judas called Barsabbas, and Silas, leading men among the brethren, 23 with the following letter: "The brethren, both the apostles and the elders, to the brethren who are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia, greeting. 24 Since we have heard that some persons from us have troubled you with words, unsettling your minds, although we gave them no instructions, 25 it has seemed good to us, having come to one accord, to choose men and send them to you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, 26 men who have risked their lives for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ. 27 We have therefore sent Judas and Silas, who themselves will tell you the same things by word of mouth. 28 For it has seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things: 29 that you abstain from what has been sacrificed to idols and from blood and from what is strangled and from unchastity. If you keep yourselves from these, you will do well. Farewell."

30 So when they were sent off, they went down to Antioch; and having gathered the congregation together, they delivered the letter. 31 And when they read it, they rejoiced at the exhortation.

Memory Selection: There is no distinction between Jew and Greek; the same Lord is Lord of all and bestows his riches upon all who call upon him. —Romans 10:12

The Rev. David C. Lewis

The Rev. Lewis Associate Pastor Of First United Methodist Church

New associate minister of the First United Methodist Church of Mayfield is the Rev. David C. Lewis, who assumed his duties here this week.

The Rev. Lewis will have as Christian education as his main responsibility in the local church, with emphasis on youth ministry. He will also have some worship, administrative and pastoral responsibilities.

Mr. Lewis is a graduate of Lambuth College and Duke Divinity School, and has served as associate minister and youth director in the Adamsville, Tenn., larger parish minister of the Union Grove Circuit. While at Duke, he was minister of the Bethel and Camp Ground charge.

His wife, Jan, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, and is a registered dietitian. She is a native of Henning, Tennessee.

The Rev. and Mrs. Lewis will reside at 1237 Ridgeway Street.

Your Problems By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Years ago you ran something in your column called "The Meanest Mother in the World." I was a high school kid then, and believe it or not, I saw my mom in that column and it changed my whole life.

Now my kids are growing up and I'd love to have them read it. Forgive me for not tearing it out but it was a long time ago and I wasn't smart enough to look that far ahead. Thanks a million. —We Admire You In Lafayette.

Dear Lafayette: Here it is—"The Meanest Mother In The World." And thanks for asking.

"I had the meanest mother in the world. While other kids had

Jury Rules Hughes 'Will' Is A Fraud

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A jury ruled Thursday that the so-called Mormon will, a handwritten document purported to be the last will of eccentric recluse Howard Hughes, is a fraud.

The jurors returned their verdict in a packed courtroom at 8:25 p.m. PDT. They had deliberated 11 hours since receiving the case Wednesday.

There were gasps in the courtroom as the clerk of the court read the verdict — "We the jury ... find that certain three-page document written on lined legal paper ... was not entirely written by Howard R. Hughes."

The verdict was a stinging defeat for those who had proposed it as an authentic will.

The decision shattered the hopes of former gas station attendant Melvin Dummur, who stood to win one-sixteenth of the vast Hughes fortune — estimated at between $169 million and $2 billion — if the will was accepted for probate.

He had delivered the will to Mormon Church headquarters shortly after Hughes' death and denied forging it.

It was also a bitter defeat for attorney Harold Rhoden, the associate of former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich. Rhoden, who was designated substitute executor by Dietrich, had invested two years and thousands of dollars trying to prove the will authentic.

candy for breakfast, I had to eat cereal, eggs and toast.

"While other kids had soda pop and candy for lunch, I had a sandwich. As you can guess, my dinner was different from other kids' dinners, too."

"My mother insisted on knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on a chain gang or something."

"I am ashamed to admit it, but she actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work. We had to wash dishes, make the beds and learn how to cook. That woman must have stayed awake nights thinking up things for us kids to do."

"She always insisted that we tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

"By the time we were teenagers, our life became even more unbearable. No tooting the car horn for the girls in the family to come running. She embarrassed us by insisting that the boys come to the door to get us."

"I forgot to mention that most of our friends were allowed to date at the mature age of 12 and 13. Our old-fashioned mother refused to let us date until we were 15. She really raised a bunch of squares. None of us kids was ever arrested for shoplifting or busted for dope. And who do we have to thank for this? You're right, our mean mother."

"I am trying to raise my children to stand a little straighter and taller and I'm secretly tickled to pieces when my children call me mean. I thank God for giving me the meanest mother in the world. Our country doesn't need a good five-cent cigar. It needs more mean mothers like mine."

Dear Ann Landers: On our 25th wedding anniversary ten years ago my wife gave me an envelope which contained the mortgage to our farm marked "paid in full." What a shock!

She explained that she had saved all those $10 bills I had left on the dresser after our beautiful lovemaking during the long, cold winters in New Hampshire.

Had I known she was doing this, Ann, so help me, I would have given her all my business. — Sorry Now

Dear Sorry: The first time I heard that knee-slapper I laughed so hard I kicked the slats out of my cradle. Even the Yalies come up with better ones. I notice the postmark on your envelope is "Notre Dame." Hmmm...!!!

What's prouder? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting—What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

WHAT IS AN AGNOSTIC?

R. Charles Blair

Few people claim to be atheists. Since "the fool has said in his heart, there is no God," and few people wish to be considered fools. Atheism is not an attractive position. Since it is seriously illogical, it attracts only a handful of followers at the most.

However, many people are practical atheists; they behave as if there were no God. And many logical people, unwilling to become Christians but too reasonable to claim that they can prove there is no God, choose what is called "agnosticism."

Just as the term "atheist" means "no God," so the word "agnostic" means "no knowledge," especially about God. The agnostic is a self-confessed ignoramus — not a bad position to take where evidence is unavailable, of course, and fine for one who is beginning to study. We may agree with Tennyson's statement that "there lives more faith in honest doubt than in half the creeds," when we realize that mere formal agreement with a creed may be the death of faith while honest inquiry may be its birth. To be an agnostic at 19, in college, may begin a great Christian life. To be an agnostic at 90 is folly. It does not indicate a lack of evidence, but a lack of sincere searching. Others — C.W. Lewis, B.H. Carroll, General Lew Wallace, and multitudes more — have begun in honest agnosticism and concluded with superb Christian testimonies.

Agnosticism is not new. It influenced Confucius, the Chinese sage, and his Greek contemporary Socrates. When a disciple asked Confucius about the spiritual world and "the gods," he said: "We have not yet learned how to serve men; how can we serve God? We have not yet learned of this world; how can we know of other worlds?"

And Socrates remarked, "It may be that the Deity can forgive sins, but I do not know how." When he was ready to drink the cup of hemlock, he said to his followers, "The time has come for us to part, me to go into death and you to go on in life. Which is better, no one knows."

This is the highest wisdom available to the natural man. Apart from divine revelation, we do not know of the world to come, or how to serve

God, or how He can forgive sins. But I must courteously say to the agnostic, "If you do not know the answers, do not stand in my way. Move aside, and let me seek one who at least claims to know, so that I may consider the answers offered. Don't claim my allegiance if you do not claim to have the answers I seek; don't ask me to follow you if you don't know" where you're going.

Agnosticism is intellectually respectable, but morally reprehensible. It must refuse genuine commitment, and will lead to despair — unless it finds the answer, Jesus, the Christ.

Kansas Girl Wins Spelling Title

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peg McCarthy, a 13-year-old seventh-grader from Topeka, Kan., won the National Spelling Bee contest today with the word "defecation."

The runner-up was Lyn Sue Kahng, a 12-year-old eighth-grader from San Diego, Calif., whose Korean parents always thought their children would be at a disadvantage with English.

Lyn Sue missed the word "crescive," leaving out the "c."

Peg then spelled it correctly and went on to spell the winning word.

Peg cried a little when she realized she was the winner and grasped a big loving cup. One of her prizes is $1,000. When asked what she was going to do with it, she replied, "put it in the bank."

She said she had studied old lists from previous bees and that her mother would pronounce the words for her in preparing for the spelling contest.

The judges at the bee say the contestants this year are — as always — bright and eager.

LOVE

Love is a beautiful four-letter word.

Love has many meanings. Love, God's gift to man, yet God is love.

Love, the husband and wife kind; Love, as you feel your unborn child move.

Love, when you see that child born.

Love, when the first word or step is taken. Love, as they begin their first day of school;

Love while you wait, when they're out on a date;

Love, as the tears fall, when they graduate.

Love, when you see them walk down the aisle. Love, when they start their new life.

Love, when you hold your new grandchild. Love never grows old, never gets cold.

Love is all that you can give. Love, for them, as long as you live.

Investor's Guide

By Sam Shulsky

WHAT A WARRANT WON'T GIVE YOU

Q. - Please write something about warrants. I can't find anything on them and would like to invest in some.

A. - How do you know you would? Warrants are not a typical investment medium but rather a speculative device. And the going can be rough since they do not represent part ownership of a corporation, only an option on such ownership. A warrant does not pay dividends; it has no vote in company affairs.

Example, a communications company has a warrant outstanding which gives the holder the right to acquire, until Jan. 2, 1982, one share of common stock by turning in the warrant plus $24 in cash. In a recent market, the common was selling for 38¢ and the warrant for 17¢. If you felt the common shares were going to soar during the next four years, you could get a "ride" on 100 shares by putting up only $1,700 for 100 warrants instead of $3,875 for 100 shares of the stock.

Of course, there are offsets. (there always are). If you pay $17 for a warrant and will have to pay $24 additional to acquire a share of common you will, in effect, have to pay $41 for a share now selling at 38¢ - which means you are now paying a premium of more than $2 a share. Furthermore, your $1,700 investment (for 100 warrants) will earn no dividends whereas the common pays $1.40 a year.

Again, if the stock doesn't climb above $41 by the time the option expires, you will have a loss on your speculation, and if it should happen to settle to below $24 by the time the warrant expires your entire $1,700 will be gone.

Warrants are not simple. In addition to the bare bones explanation above there are often complicating factors, such as the use of other securities as part payment for common shares and also complicated changes in the life span of the option. So, if you think you have a something-for-nothing opportunity, look again, - and consult a broker expert in these matters before you put your money down.

Q. - I read a lot about two-, three- and four-year certificates of deposit at good interest rates. But what good are they to a retired person who needs income now?

A. - These certificates do pay out interest now. There's no law that says the interest must remain in the account.

Q. - In a recent column a person living on Social Security said she wanted to invest $4,000 in order to derive income from municipal bonds. And you replied: "You can't use tax exemption, so why take the lower income from municipal bonds in order to get that exemption?" Please explain.

A. - Social Security income is not subject to income taxes.

If this lady's only other income is to come from this $4,000 it should be invested at the highest interest rate obtainable with low risk: let's say an 8 percent Treasury bond or an 8 1/2 percent corporate bond or preferred stock. The $320 to $350 thus earned would represent no tax problem to this investor since, as her only taxable income, it is far below the point where even the lowest income tax bracket becomes effective. Why, then, should she invest the $4,000 in, let us say, high-quality 6 percent tax-exempt bonds for income for only $240 a year. The tax exemption means nothing to her. She won't pay any taxes either way.

My Answer By Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Our daughter has become active in a Bible study group that meets in homes. We are thankful for this, but she does not seem interested in going to church. Do you think this is all right? - W.B.

DEAR W.B.: From what you indicate in the rest of your letter, your daughter has only recently shown any interest in spiritual things. Apparently, this Bible study has been the means of bringing her to faith in Christ, and for that we should be thankful.

At the same time, it would also be good for her to establish ties with a church. There are several reasons for this. For one thing, I believe the Bible tells us to join with other Christians not just to study the Bible, but also for worship and praise and mutual encouragement. "And let us consider how we may spur one another on toward love and good deeds. Let us not give up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but let us encourage one another" (Hebrews 10:24-25, New International Version). You will remember that Jesus attended public worship "as his custom was" (Luke 4:16).

Also, as a new Christian, your daughter will want to witness for her faith in Christ. Her attendance at church would be a witness to some of her old friends who do not know Christ. She may even find people attending the church who have a deep spiritual hunger which she can help meet.

I am thankful for the thousands of Bible study groups that have started in the past few years across our nation. They are not a substitute for church, but God can certainly use them to bring about a deeper faith in many lives. As your daughter continues to study the Word of God, I believe she will see the place of the Church as presented in the Bible and will want to become involved. She will learn the truth of the Psalmists' exclamation, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord" (Psalm 122:1).

How Much 'Fairness'

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Attempts to regulate the airwaves in the "public interest" have had the opposite effect. The Federal Communications Commission, the regulatory agency for radio and television, has its own special brand of bias.

The nature of this bias is carefully documented by Dr. Kenneth Kolson in an article in The Administrative Law Review entitled "Broadcasting In The Public Interest: The Legacy of Federal Communications Commissioner Nicholas Johnson." Mr. Johnson's influence on broadcasting was truly contrary to the real public interest.

Mr. Johnson was appointed to the FCC by President Lyndon B. Johnson and served seven tempestuous years. In that time, he espoused the cause of numerous counterculture or protest groups that wanted to be heard on radio or tv, upholding the alleged "right to access."

Among other things, Mr. Johnson urged his colleagues on the FCC to require broadcasters to provide rebuttal time to the opponents of Chevron ads which argued for construction of the Alaska pipeline and to a labor union that wanted to urge citizens to boycott a department store being struck.

Dr. Kolson writes: "From Mr. Johnson's point of view, all speech, no matter how obnoxious, is protected by the first Amendment." He upheld the right of a station to broadcast an interview that contained obscene language.

The majority on the Commission rightly concluded that "However much a person may like to talk this way, he has no right to do so in public arenas." Mr. Johnson, however, was all for the absolute right of free expression, no matter how filthy and lacking in value.

Part Of A Series

Changing County Government

(First part of a six-part series on changes in county government. These are a result of 1978 General Assembly actions becoming effective June 17.)

If you've gotten a speeding ticket lately, the first of many changes in the county courthouse has hit you. The county judge doesn't hold "court" anymore. The sign on his office door (and it may be in a new location) reads county Judge-Executive. So "what's new?" you may ask. "What's in a name?"

Judge-executive marks a historic shift in Kentucky county government. Judges and magistrates don't hold court anymore, but they're still the folks to see about graveling a road, cleaning out a ditch, fixing the park shelterhouse or getting the trash picked up around the dumpster sites.

How they go about taking care of your problem may be no different; then again, it may be a lot different.

Counties have served well the Kentuckian's individualism-his or her need for a sense of place and of local control over public affairs.

But, more recently, counties across the country have been viewed as a weak link in the chain of government, unable to respond adequately to demands for services of a municipal character.

Kentucky county government now can respond. Judges and fiscal courts are just beginning to explore what can be done.

The change comes from a series of actions taken by the 1978 General Assembly. The legislature has said:

The judge-executive is the chief administrative officer of the county. He carries out the daily business and presides at fiscal court meetings.

Fiscal courts are legislative bodies. The magistrates will approve budgets, appointments, contracts and pass ordinances covering a whole range of functions, regulatory or service, because:

Counties have home rule. Fiscal court decides if the county wants or needs a park system, or garbage collection, better dog control, or a county-wide fire safety code for homes.

Counties will adopt an administrative code.

As part of its revamping of county government's powers and duties, the legislature also repealed many statutes "permitting" counties to act in a given area. The "home rule" grant of power allows a county to select

Dr. Kolson gets to the heart of the evil in the regulatory approach in his statement that "Mr. Johnson and others who have glibly arrogated the term 'public interest' for their own exclusive use reflects a distinctive political ideology which, if it were recognized for what it really is, would constitute a controversial issue of public importance."

This "distinctive political ideology" is manifested in the FCC's use of the Fairness Doctrine and in the programming on National Public Radio.

The FCC uses the Fairness Doctrine to compel broadcasters to run "anti-commercial commercials" and to carry programs that cater to politically designated minorities.

Hispanics are an officially designated minority. People of Baltic or East European origin aren't regarded as a minority, and, therefore, aren't given the special attention lavished on certain other groups. Anti-business and anti-technology groups get a big play and frequent quotation on National Public Radio. Groups that support free enterprise are ignored. This is the double standard in action under the guise of "tolerance."

Dr. Kolson points out that some observers believe that "Mr. Johnson, and those who share his beliefs, propose to turn the American broadcasting industry - and the printed press as well-into an arm of the state." Certainly, the apostles of fairness and tolerance - liberal style - have standards that are fantastically skewed in favor of their own groups, projects and goals. They practice an effective form of censorship.

Dr. Kolson's article is a timely analysis. It turns a strong spotlight on anti-freedom factors affecting broadcasting in America.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, June 10, the 161st day of 1978. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1610, the first Dutch settlers in America landed on Manhattan Island.

On this date:

In 1776, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia named a committee to draft the Declaration of Independence.

In 1898, U.S. Marines invaded Cuba in the Spanish-American War.

In 1940, Italy declared war on France and Britain.

In 1942, the Nazi Gestapo killed 173 male residents of Lidice, Czechoslovakia, to retaliate for the assassination of a German official.

In 1945, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower received the Soviet Union's highest award, the Order of Victory.

In 1971, the United States lifted a 21-year-old embargo on trade with China.

Ten years ago: A large majority of U.N. members voted initial approval of a U.S.-Soviet sponsored draft of a treaty to curb the spread of nuclear weapons.

Five years ago: The Soviet Union announced stricter controls on the movement of Americans in the Moscow area.

Today's birthdays: Prince Philip of Britain is 57 years old.

"A Conservative View"

The High Court And Press Freedom

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va. - The Supreme Court delivered its stunning opinion last Wednesday, authorizing search warrants for newspaper files, and on Thursday morning I made a symbolic little trip to the Scrabble dump. By this time, half of my Laetrile file is six feet deep in a sanitary landfill in back of Clifton Clark's barn, and nuts to you, Mr. Justice White.

To be sure, nobody in law enforcement gives a hoorah about my Laetrile file, but it provides an example of the kind of mischief this decision will produce. Some months ago, after I had been defending the principle of free choice in the Laetrile controversy, some people on the West Coast write me in lively detail about their smuggling operations. They sent a sample of Laetrile. Their letters were evidence of a criminal conspiracy and the sample was plainly "contraband," the fruits of crime.

Federal prosecutors are so sick of the Laetrile business that they have little inclination to look for evidence anywhere, but let me pursue the matter for purposes of illustration. If in the course of a smuggling investigation, customs agents and postal inspectors got wind of a Laetrile sample sent to me through the mails, they could now get a search warrant from some amiable federal judge. They could arrive at my office without warning, present the warrant, and start rummaging through the files. At that point, there would be nothing - quite literally nothing - that could effectively be done to stop them.

Mr. Justice White's opinion for the Court's 5-3 majority is one more manifestation of that regrettable hostility held by so many judges toward the press in general. Only Mr. Justice Stewart indicated any real understanding of what this case was all about. His dissenting opinion clearly, starkly delineated the dangerous situation his colleagues have created.

These were the facts: Back in 1971, students rioted at Stanford University. Several police officers were hurt in the ensuing violence. In the belief that a photographer for the Stanford Daily had taken some pictures from which the assailants might be identified, the infuriated cops obtained a search warrant, entered the newspaper offices, and searched everywhere for evidentiary photographs. They found nothing, and departed. The newspaper sued for violation of civil rights, and two lower courts held that the Fourth Amendment bars such third-party search warrants, especially of newspaper property; when there is no intimation that the third party may be accused of crime.

The Supreme Court reversed. Mr. Justice White's opinion curiously combined tartness and decisiveness with an astonishing ignorance of the real-world nature of the news-gathering process. He and his four colleagues had no conception of what they were doing.

Until the Stanford case came along, the virtually invariable rule among law enforcement officials had been to rely upon subpoenas in third-party matters. If police have reason to believe that the "fruits, instrumentalities, or evidence" of a crime is in possession of some third party not personally involved, there ordinarily is no problem. A bank president, for example, can be served with a subpoena directing him to produce certain canceled checks. He produces them. And that's that.

This is, of course, the procedure that should be employed if local police or federal agents believe a newspaper has material in its possession that bears directly upon criminal action. A subpoena can be complied with; or it can be resisted by a motion to quash. Through the orderly safeguards of a full court hearing, the necessity of the subpoena can be explored, and the privacy of newspaper files can be preserved.

The Court's opinion in the Stanford case brushes all that aside. With astounding naivete, the majority expresses its confidence that neither police nor judges will abuse their newly found power to harass newspapers and to rummage through their files. Mr. Justice White innocently supposed that considerations of reasonableness and specificity will be observed. His eminence perhaps was born yesterday.

Editors, publishers and investigative reporters everywhere must now consider the peril of the peremptory knock and the hobnailed boot. There is no need to panic; it will take time for cases to develop. Meanwhile, let us look to our files. Metaphorically speaking, we can always run down to the Scrabble dump.

Jeffrey Hart Says

Coverting Jews

This is a very touch subject, but readers of this column know that touchiness has never been an inhibition. My assumption has been that anything is discussible, given common sense, love, and good humor.

Last week, President Carter's sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton, canceled an appearance before a New York group consisting of ethnic Jews who accept Jesus Christ as the Messiah foretold by the Old Testament prophets.

Why did she cancel? Answer: She was bullied, culturally and politically.

I would like to set aside here any peculiarities of the local Jewish-Christian group involved. It is called B'nai Yeshua and operates in Stony Brook, Long Island. This group has been charged with using brain-washing tactics. Maybe so, but frankly I am skeptical.

The issue of converting Jews to Christianity has become one of the most explosive, though little discussed, issues around.

Ruth Carter Stapleton's projected appearance was widely denounced on the ground that she might, just by speaking, convert some Jews to Christianity. This censorship is simply unacceptable, and it is poisonous to relations between Christians and Jews.

Thus, Rabbi Marc Tannenbaum, the national inter-religious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, charged that Stapleton's Christian proselytizing threatened the existence of the Jewish people. "There are only 14 million Jews in the world today," he commented. "We cannot afford to lose one or 10."

There is both pathos and tragedy in Rabbi Tannenbaum's remark.

He seems to be saying that converting a Jew to Christianity is the equivalent of exterminating him. But why should a Jew not change his mind, see things in a new and different way? Are Jews not free individuals like other free individuals?

In its tragic dimension, the rabbi's remark strikes at the heart of Christianity. After all, the first Christians were converted Jews. The rabbi thus seems to be saying that Christianity has no right to exist.

It is extremely interesting that some prominent Protestants have been publicly disavowing any mission to the Jews. Thus, in the midst of the Stapleton controversy, she was indirectly attacked by the Rev. William L. Weiler of the National Council of Churches. He charged that the Long Island group of converted Jews is trying to "exploit Judaism and make Jews the object of evangelism."

The same could be said of St. Peter or St. Paul. What is this Protestant minister talking about? Does he really mean to say that a Christian cannot talk, with love and respect, to a Jewish friend about Christianity? About something that the Christian values supremely? Is this not an ultimate refusal of love?

Yet Mrs. Stapleton, a fundamentalist Protestant, who knows all about the text of scripture, and about the duty to evangelize, caved in to these cultural pressures. "I am a Christian," she said, "and my faith stems from my perception of God's love through Jesus Christ. Yet I have never attempted in any way to negate the faith and practices of any other group, however far they may be removed from my own personal beliefs."

Does Mrs. Stapleton think Christian claims are true or not? Presumably she thinks they are true, and that the Resurrection was not just a matter of her "perception."

Is it not a catastrophic failure of love to cancel conversation on these issues? What in the world do so-called Jewish "spokesmen" have in mind?

Study Says Many Patients Injured By Negligent MD's

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Many more patients are injured by negligent doctors than ever filed medical malpractice claims, despite complaints by physicians that such claims are excessive, says a study released today.

The Rand Corp. report also says "a clear subgroup of physicians" is repeatedly careless and accounts for the bulk of the claims.

"Many more incidents of malpractice occur, it appears, than result in a claim for damages," said the study. "At most only one out of every six or seven incidents can be expected to result in a claim."

The study was co-authored by Dr. William Schwartz, a Tufts University professor of medicine who says he is bracing himself for reaction from fellow physicians.

"I am not looking forward to the possible wrath of some of my colleagues. This report challenges the conventional views and that is always painful. That always stirs up a reaction," Schwartz said in a telephone interview from Boston.

The study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, rejects most arguments used by physicians against the malpractice system.

The study said that despite occasional million-dollar settlements, the average malpractice award during 1974 did not even cover the patient's losses in medical expenses and lost earnings.

It also challenged the argument "that 'good' physicians are sued as often as the 'bad'."

The report said a four-year study of 8,000 Los Angeles-area doctors showed that fewer than 1 percent of them "accounted for 10 percent of all claims and 30 percent of all payments made by the (malpractice) insurance plan."

"There seems to be a clear subgroup of physicians who are repeatedly negligent," Schwartz said. "A very small percentage of doctors were responsible for a disproportionate number of claims."

The report suggests that a primary value of malpractice claims is to deter future negligence. But, it said, "the signal to the physician, as determined by the number of claims and size of awards, appears to be insufficient for ideal deterrence."

Schwartz said the signal is weakened because most victims of malpractice do not go to court.

"It may not be clear to the patient that a bad outcome was due to the doctor," he said. "But also, many patients are reluctant to sue their doctor because he's been kind to them during their illness. And then, of course, suing is just a very unpleasant activity."

Dr. Milton Friedman, Nobel Prize winning economist, concludes that "if your income goes up by 10 percent, your taxes will, on the average, go up by about 15 percent." That is why, he explains, despite several supposed tax cuts in the last decade, Americans paid the same percentage of total personal income taxes in 1976 as in 1966.

The tax cuts passed by Congress were wholly offset by the tax increases caused by inflation. Friedman uses the word "fraud" to describe the way politicians get credit for voting tax reductions while we pay higher and higher taxes.

Of course, the best solution for this problem is to cut federal spending. But efforts to do that have not been encouraging. An alternate solution is to adjust the tax rates to compensate for inflation increases, a procedure called "indexing."

This procedure would tie the key provisions of the Income Tax Code to the consumer price index. Although your tax would rise when your income rises, you would not pay a greater proportion of your real income to the federal government unless a specific tax increase is voted by Congress.

The concept of indexing is not new. It's the same principle used in fixing automatic pay increases that rise with inflation for all federal employees.

Those who live on the taxpayers' money have protected themselves against inflation by indexing. It's time the rest of Americans were protected, too.

Politicians Try To Read Echoes Of California Taxpayer Revolt

WASHINGTON (AP) — While California's overwhelming approval of a tax-limiting referendum is being read as a sign of national demand for tax relief, legislation that would cut federal income taxes is bogged down once again in Congress.

Two days ago, Rep. Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., the House speaker, told reporters there certainly would be a bill providing a tax cut of about $20 billion, and that the House Ways and Means Committee would be back at work on it today.

But the meeting was never called. Committee sources said behind-scenes discussions among Democrats produced nothing even close to an agreement that could be written into legislation.

With Congress pressing to adjourn by early October for the election campaign, and with energy and other priority legislation still hanging fire, questions have been raised whether any tax cut bill has a chance of passing this year.

There is speculation that if none is enacted by adjournment, President Carter might call a postelection "lame duck" session to press for a tax cut.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the Ways and Means chairman, confirmed in an interview there is no meeting of minds on the committee.

"I think we'll work something out," he said, but refused to say how long it might take.

Although Carter has agreed to scale down his tax cut proposal from $25 billion to about $20 billion, roughly the level favored by committee leaders, Ways and Means tax writers are divided over a number of proposals, none of which apparently commands majority support.

Some members don't favor any new tax cuts this year, but prefer only to continue the reductions approved last year. Those cuts are to expire Dec. 31 unless Congress reapproves them.

If Congress does nothing, not only will there be no tax cut in 1979 but taxes actually will increase by about $9 billion, as previously scheduled. Besides dismaying voters whose hopes have been raised, this would deal a double blow to Carter's economy-stimulating program.

Before the committee is a proposal that would, in effect, wipe out increases in the capital gains tax voted over the past nine years. The proposal runs counter to Carter's long-range plan to phase out entirely the special treatment of capital gains, the profit on assets sold after being held a year or more, and to tax the gains like other income.

Reducing the tax on capital gains has substantial support in the committee, especially among Republicans, and strong backing from business.

It is hotly opposed by liberal Democrats, some of whom say that if it is written into the bill, they will switch in favor of no new taxes.

A number of committee members are still determined to roll back part of the increase in Social Security payroll taxes, especially stiff for high-income families, that is scheduled for next year.

The committee has voted down proposals to do this, but rollback supporters have served notice they will try again, when and if a general tax relief bill is taken up.

If they lose in the committee, they say, they will take their fight to the House floor.

An elaborate tax package being circulated early this week among committee members included proposals for about a $1 billion reduction in capital gains taxes — half the original proposal — rate cuts and exemption increases for individuals somewhat offset by eliminating some existing tax advantages, and a scaling down of corporate income taxes.

There were hopes that this package might provide a basis for compromise, but it apparently has not attracted enough support.

The tax-writing committee thus is back where it has been most of the time since Carter made his tax cut proposals in January — rejecting much of the president's plan and trying through informal discussions to forge substitutes.

Federals Sue Exxon Co. For Over-Charging Crude Oil Customers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, accusing the world's largest petroleum producer of overcharging crude oil customers $183 million over a three-year period, is suing Exxon Corp. for the money and interest.

The suit was filed Thursday in U.S. District Court here and is a followup to a probable violation notice issued against the Houston-based corporation by the Energy Department six months ago.

Paul L. Bloom, a department attorney, said the government decided to go into the courts now instead of proceeding along administrative lines to achieve "the earliest possible resolution" of the case.

Presumably, he said, the company would have appealed an administrative decision to the courts at any rate. The suit is the result of an audit of Exxon records for the period running from late 1973 through 1976. Exxon officials were not available for comment on the suit.

When the government's notice was issued last January, Exxon denied the overcharges. The company claimed the government was trying to apply price ceilings retroactively using "standards not in effect when our decision and commitments were made."

The Exxon suit involves the sale of crude oil after the government established a two-tier pricing system to protect against windfall profits and promote domestic oil development after the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

Under the tier system current crude oil production was divided into "old" oil and "new" oil. New oil is the quantity drilled which exceeds production capabilities before the tier system was established. The barrel price of new oil was $11.28 when the alleged violation occurred. That price was about $6 higher than what could have been charged for "old" oil.

The Energy Department alleged that Exxon at its Hawkins Field in Wood County, Texas shut down a number of wells and then shifted the production of those wells to a smaller number of new wells, using gas injections into the oil field.

Schedule Of Nixon Visit In East Ky.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon will spend two days in Kentucky to dedicate a recreation center in Hyden named in his honor, according to U.S. Rep. Tim Lee Carter's office.

Carter's office said Nixon will arrive at the London-Corbin airport at 2:40 p.m. EDT on July 1. A public airport reception is scheduled.

A motorcade through Hyden will precede the dedication, which is scheduled for 1 p.m. EDT in the new 2,500-seat gymnasium which is also being named for Nixon.

Carter's office said the former president will be accompanied by his aide, Col. Jack Brennan. Mrs. Nixon will not attend.

Tickets for the dedication are being issued by the Leslie County fiscal court and are available through county Republican Party chairmen throughout Kentucky. There is no charge for the tickets.

Where Nixon will stay while in eastern Kentucky was not disclosed.

P.S. To The News:
Indexing
Income Taxes
By
Phyllis Schlafly

Inflation is picking the pockets of Americans at a galloping rate.

Workers are earning more dollars but realizing less in real income. Inflation is forcing wives into the labor market and husbands to moonlight with a second job, just to make ends meet.

Most Americans are aware that inflation is caused by government deficits. When the federal government spends more than it receives in tax revenues, it rolls the printing presses and thereby cheapens the value of the dollar. Congressmen like this because the additional tax can be imposed without facing the consequences of voting for a tax increase.

What isn't generally realized is that government makes a double profit out of inflation because it pushes the taxpayer into a higher tax bracket. You not only pay more taxes; you pay a higher rate of taxes.

Economically, the taxpayer suffers a loss when this happens, but the government realizes a windfall profit. Not only does the government get more spendable income, but it gets it in a way that avoids those unpleasant, politically-damaging roll-call votes.

Let's take some examples to see how this works. Say your wage in year one is $5,000 on which your tax is $98, so that your real income is $4,902. Five years later, your wage is $7,013 and your taxes have jumped to $404. But inflation has eroded your purchasing power so that, although the dollars in your pocket after taxes have risen 35 percent, your real after-tax income has declined 4 percent.

Suppose your income is $13,000 in year one, on which you paid $1,380 in taxes. Five years later, your income has risen to $18,233 and your taxes have gone up to $2,566. But inflation has eroded your purchasing power so that, although your after-tax income appears to have put 35 percent more dollars in your pocket, your real income after taxes has dropped 4 percent.

If you think you are on a treadmill where you fall farther behind financially with each wage increase, you are. The progressive income tax pushes you into a higher bracket and your taxes increase at a faster rate than your real income. You are spending more and enjoying it less.

Dr. Milton Friedman, Nobel Prize winning economist, concludes that "if your income goes up by 10 percent, your taxes will, on the average, go up by about 15 percent." That is why, he explains, despite several supposed tax cuts in the last decade, Americans paid the same percentage of total personal income taxes in 1976 as in 1966.

The tax cuts passed by Congress were wholly offset by the tax increases caused by inflation. Friedman uses the word "fraud" to describe the way politicians get credit for voting tax reductions while we pay higher and higher taxes.

Of course, the best solution for this problem is to cut federal spending. But efforts to do that have not been encouraging. An alternate solution is to adjust the tax rates to compensate for inflation increases, a procedure called "indexing."

This procedure would tie the key provisions of the Income Tax Code to the consumer price index. Although your tax would rise when your income rises, you would not pay a greater proportion of your real income to the federal government unless a specific tax increase is voted by Congress.

The concept of indexing is not new. It's the same principle used in fixing automatic pay increases that rise with inflation for all federal employees.

Those who live on the taxpayers' money have protected themselves against inflation by indexing. It's time the rest of Americans were protected, too.

In Decision Over Norton

Holmes Collects WBC Champ Title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes went out in the 15th round aiming to please the crowd and finished as the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion with the closest of decisions over Ken Norton.

Holmes, 28, from Easton, Pa., admitted he didn't figure the fight was so even that all the judges had it scored 133-133 after 14 bruising rounds.

"I thought I'd already won it," Holmes told newsmen. They had to wait for him while he took an exuberant jump in a swimming pool, wearing his championship belt, and later soaked in a hot tub.

"I wanted to take him out, and he had hurt me and I had hurt him. In the 15th, I just wanted to give a good closing show."

Two of the judges gave the final round to Holmes and one favored Norton, and there was just one point difference on each card, under the 10-point must system where the winner of the round gets 10 points and the loser nine or less.

Judges Harold Buck and Joe Swessel scored 143-142 for the undefeated Holmes, while Lou Tabot favored Norton by the same count.

Norton wasn't a total loser, collecting $2.3 million for the unsuccessful defense of the title. Holmes' share of the gate and TV money was $300,000.

Holmes hid the fact he had a sore arm during the last week of workouts, and was undergoing therapy on the left bicep since Monday, when he had last sparred.

"Norton hurt it when he hit right on the sore spot," said Holmes. "I think he might have had some idea of the trouble but I didn't want to let him know. I didn't throw my jab as well as I might have."

The jab was still effective enough to keep the 8-5 favorite Norton at long range much of the time.

Norton was hurt by a left hook in the final round as the fighters belted toe-toe in the nationally televised fight at the Sports Pavilion of Caesars Palace. The ex-Marine, who was declared the champion when the WBC stripped Leon Spinks of recognition, had opened the round with jabs and a smashing left to the body. Then the two slugged it out with Holmes gaining the advantage.

"I made a mistake in judgment," the 32-year-old Norton said. "I misjudged in letting him win the early rounds. I was trying to let him use up his energy."

That was what Muhammad Ali had done when he fought and lost against Spinks here, when the 1976 Olympic champion proved surprisingly durable for 15 rounds.

Holmes said he planned to be a fighting champion and hoped to end the dual recognition since Spinks holds the World Boxing Association crown.

"I want to be a fighting champion," the Pennsylvanian said. "There is no doubt in my mind that I will hold the title for a number of years."

Seemed Like Old-Timers Night To Detroit Fans

By TOM CANAVAN

AP Sports Writer

It was supposed to be Polish-American night in Detroit, but don't tell Whitey Herzog and Ralph Houk that.

Herzog thought it was Old Timers Night and Houk decided to make it Mexican Night.

"I've seen more Walter Johnsons and Lefty Groves this week," Kansas City Manager Herzog said after watching Jack Billingham and John Hiller combine on a three-hitter, leading the Tigers to a 3-2 victory over his Royals Friday night.

"Billingham pitched good," Herzog said. "We only hit two balls hard all night."

While Herzog may have been complaining about the old timers, Houk was gloating about his Mexican, third baseman

Aurelio Rodriguez. "It should have been Mexican night tonight," Tigers' pilot Houk said with a smile, alluding to the annual Polish-American Night given at Tiger Stadium.

If a right-hander had pitched for Kansas City, Houk would have started Phil Mankowski, a Polish-American, at third base instead of Rodriguez. But when the Royals, who have now lost four in a row, elected to pitch left-hander Paul Splittorff, Rodriguez started and Kansas City footed the bill.

Jason Thompson was safe on an error by Kansas City third baseman George Brett to open the Tigers' second. Rodriguez then lined a Splittorff pitch into the lower deck in left field for his fifth homer of the season.

Detroit added its third run in the fourth off

Splittorff, 7-5, on an RBI single by rookie Alan Trammell.

Billingham, 5-3, gave up an unearned run in the opening inning and needed help from Hiller in the ninth when the Royals put men on first and second with none out. The lefty relief specialist got out of the inning surrendering a sacrifice fly to Al Cowens to pick up his seventh save of the season.

Orioles 5, A's 31 Rick Dempsey and Eddie Murray hit home runs to back up Mike Flanagan's three-hit pitching as Baltimore rolled to its eighth straight victory. Flanagan has won seven of his last eight decisions and pitched complete games in seven of his last nine starts.

Indians 7, Twins 3

David Clyde picked up his fourth victory with a brilliant assist from reliever Jim Kern as Cleveland defeated Minnesota to snap a four-game losing streak.

Clyde, 4-0, gave up a run in the first inning and got a major assist from Kern in the seventh inning when the flame-throwing right-hander came on and got Cleveland out of a bases-loaded, none out jam.

Brewers 3, Blue Jays 2, 10 in nings Ben Oglivie, after failing twice to sacrifice, singled with none out in the 10th inning to score pinch-runner Jim Gantner from second as Milwaukee nipped Toronto.

Mike Caldwell, 6-3, went the distance for the Brewers who won their fourth game in their last five starts.

Yankees 3, Angels 1

Bucky Dent singled home two runs with two-out in the ninth inning snapping a 1-1 tie and leading New York over California and Frank Tanana. Chris Chambliss started the Yankees winning attack in the ninth with a out-out double. After Tanana, 9-3, got the second out, Cliff Johnson was intentionally walked but Dent singled down the left-field line, scoring both runners.

Thurman Munson, previously 0-for-36 lifetime against Tanana, homered in the fourth inning for the Yankees.

Red Sox 3, Mariners 2

Dwight Evans knocked in the game-winner with a ninth-inning single, helping Boston over the Seattle and giving unbeaten Luis Tiant his fifth victory of the season. Tiant scattered nine hits, including a solo home run to Bruce Bochte in the ninth inning.

White Sox 4, Rangers 3

Bill Nahorodny's two-run single capped a three-run sixth inning as Chicago defeated Texas Rangers and posted its fifth straight victory and 12th in the last 13 games.

Al Oliver homered for Texas, which had a four-game winning streak snapped.

Reds Sign Last Picks

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds announced the signing Friday of their ninth and 10th draft choices in baseball's free agent talent pool earlier this week.

The number nine choice was Charles Leibbrandt, a 21-year-old lefthanded pitcher from Miami (Ohio) University. He was 7-2 this spring and compiled a 1.65 earned run average, tops in the Mid-American Conference.

Also signed was Chris Stropolo, an 18-year-old outfielder from Metairie, La.

Eight Kentuckians Are Drafted

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Eight Kentuckians were taken in the National Basketball Association draft Friday, with UK's Rick Robey going to Indiana as the third choice of the first round.

Jack Givens of the Cats went second to Atlanta as the 16th pick.

Rick Wilson of the University of Louisville was the third Kentuckian to be picked. Wilson went to Atlanta as the third pick of the second round of the draft.

Also in the second round, UK's James Lee was taken by Seattle as the 17th pick.

Mike Phillips of the Cats was the first choice in the third round, going to New Jersey. Billy Ray Bates of Kentucky State went to Houston as the third pick of the round.

Also in the third round, Ricky Gallon of Louisville went to Buffalo on the 7th pick and Ken Higgs, a native of Owensboro who played for Louisiana State University, went to Cleveland as the 13th choice of the round.

Robey, Givens, Lee and Wilson had been expected to be early selections in the draft.

Robey, a 6-foot-10 bundle of muscle and energy who keyed Kentucky's national championship team last season, was considered a possible No. 1 choice.

Givens was Kentucky's leading scorer for the past three seasons, capping his career with a 41-point explosion in the Cat's 94-88 win over Duke in the NCAA championship game. The 6-4 native of Lexington was called a "pure shooter" by pros.

Givens played forward in high school and college, but his size will probably dictate that he switch to guard in the pros.

Lee, a 6-6 muscle man who was Kentucky's celebrated sixth man, will undoubtedly be a "small" forward in the NBA. He and Givens each played that position opposite Robey during college days at Kentucky.

The 6-4 Wilson was a guard throughout a steady but unspectacular career at Louisville. Under the system employed by Louisville Coach Denny Crum, Wilson shared the scoring load with several other players.

But Crum steadfastly insisted throughout last season that Wilson is the equal of Lee and Ford.

Eaves' 29 Points Lead West Stars To Cage Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jerry Eaves of Louisville Ballard scored 29 points to lead the West All Stars to a 107-101 basketball victory Friday in the annual East-West All Star game.

Eaves scored six straight points late in the fourth quarter to extend the West's lead from 97-90 to 103-90 with 1:43 remaining.

The East began a comeback, cutting the West's lead to 103-97 with 38 seconds left as Doug Schloemer of Covington Holmes scored seven straight points.

But the West, getting two free throws from Eaves, upped its lead to 107-99 with 20 seconds left to secure the win.

The East was led by Schloemer's 24 points, 17 coming in the second half. Greg Coldiron of Cawood added 12 points while Cere Myrick of Maysville had 11 and Rocky Adkins of Elliott County added 10.

The West got 15 points from Norris Beckley of Shelby County and Alfred Smith of Butler while Carrell Boyd of Caldwell

County and Gus Rudolph of Louisville Shawnee both pitched in with 12.

The West All Stars led 54-51 at halftime and built up a 10-point lead at 77-67 with 2:25 remaining in the third quarter. They later stretched the lead to 13 points at 92-79 with 7:02 left in the game.

The East opened a five-point lead, its biggest of the game, at 11-6 before the West posted a 12-2 scoring drive, tallying nine straight points to take an 18-13 lead early in the first quarter.

The West opened up a 28-21 lead late in that quarter — the biggest margin of the first half. The East, however, closed within 30-28 at the end of the first quarter.

The West held on to lead in the second quarter, but its greatest margin was only six points at 44-38 with 4:46 left.

The late Gil Hodges made the first home run in New York Met history, connecting against Larry Jackson of the Cardinals on April 4, 1962.

England Vs. Scotland In Amateur Golf

TRON, Scotland (AP) — Just as it was last year, the British Amateur Golf Championship final will be an England vs. Scotland battle as defending champion Peter McEvoy, 25, of England, meets 22-year-old Paul McKellar of Scotland.

McEvoy, who hasn't lost a home match in two years, beat David Suddards, the South African strokeplay champion, 4 and 3 in his semifinal. McKellar, the Scottish amateur strokeplay champion, beat John Davies of England, a Walker Cup player since 1973, 3 and 2 in the other semifinal.

Suddards, 24, was the second South African McEvoy had ousted Friday. In the morning quarter-final he beat Gavin Levenson, the current French champion, also by 4 and 3.

In the other semifinal, McKellar went off like a bomb. In the wind and rain he was 4-up by the fifth but Davies fought back and took the sixth and seventh holes to go only 2-down. But McKellar immediately got back to three by winning the short eighth.

For the second year running there were no U.S. representatives in the last stages. The best American performance this year was by Frank W. Campbell and he was beaten 3 and 2 in the fifth round Thursday.

The final will be played over 36 holes Saturday.

Madison Is Named UK Baseball Coach

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Keith Madison, 26, assistant baseball coach at Mississippi State, has been named head coach at the University of Kentucky, Athletic Director Cliff Hagan said Friday in a statement.

Madison replaces Jordan E. "Tuffy" Horne, who resigned last month. Madison graduated from Edmonson County High School in Brownsville, Ky., where he was offered a baseball scholarship to Murray State.

He chose instead to sign a professional contract with the Montreal Expos of the National League as a pitcher.

He then joined the Cincinnati Reds organization and registered 15 saves in 42 relief appearances with the team's Class AA Tampa team.

Madison was scheduled to move up to Class AAA the next year, but an off-season knee injury ended his career.

COACHES — This season's coaches in the American Junior Bowling Congress approved league here

In NBA Draft

Indiana Gamble Pays Off

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Leonard's gamble apparently paid off Friday as the Indiana Pacers coach, desperately needing size and scoring on the front line, picked 6-foot-10 forward Rick Robey of Kentucky on the first round of the National Basketball Association draft.

"I'm tickled to death," said Leonard, who also took Wayne Radford of Indiana University, Ricky Lee of Oregon State, James Sparrow of North Carolina A&T, Sherman Dillard of James Madison and Ollie Matson of Pepperdine in later rounds.

Leonard dealt the Pacers' No. 1 pick to Portland on Thursday, in exchange for guard Johnny Davis and the right to choose third in the draft. The Trail Blazers, as expected, took Minnesota's Mychal Thompson, and Kansas City, picking second, took North Carolina's Phil Ford.

"I was a little afraid that either one (Portland or Kansas City) would take Robey," a relieved Leonard said. "But the thing about those first three—Thompson, Ford and Robey—there's still all kinds of deals around the league. We're still sitting in a super seat."

Leonard would have taken Indiana State's All-American Larry Bird on the first round if he had assurance Bird would not return to school for his final year, or if he had been able to keep forward Danny Roundfield, who signed with the Atlanta Hawks as a free agent.

As it turned out, Bird was picked sixth on the first round by the Boston Celtics and later repeated his intention to return to Indiana State. Sycamore teammate Harry Morgan was tabbed by San Antonio in the sixth round.

"I'm very happy the Celtics have shown enough interest in me to draft me even though I'm not going to sign until after next season," Bird said. "I'll be interested in sitting down to talk things over after Indiana State's 1978-79 season has been completed."

For Leonard, however, the decision to go for Robey instead of Bird "came down to the fact I didn't sign Roundfield."

"But the amazing thing, talking to Bird, he said to me, 'I'll tell you who the NBA rookie of the year will be,' and he said it'll be Rick Robey."

Robey, an excellent shooter for a big man, was one of the key figures in the Wildcats' march to the NCAA championship this year. Fully recovered from a knee injury two years ago, Robey trimmed down to 230 pounds this season and added quickness and mobility to his formidable size.

The Pacers, who bolstered their front line with the acquisition of free agent Alex English, a 6-8 forward, from Milwaukee, chose the 6-3 Radford on the second round, the 6-7 Lee on the fourth round and the 6-5 Sparrow on the fifth round. Dillard, a 6-4 guard, went on the sixth round, and the 6-6, 215-pound Matson, the son of the former pro football great, was picked on the seventh round although he has one year of college eligibility left.

Girls' All-Star Cage Game Is Set Tonight

RICHMOND, Ky. (AP) — Twenty of Kentucky's top senior girl basketball players, and four coaches who guided teams in the state tournament, square off Saturday night in the EastWest All-Star game at Eastern Kentucky University.

Laurel County Coach Roy Bowling, whose Lady Cardinals captured a second straight state title this year, and Breathitt County Coach Joyce Mayes, whose team fell to Laurel County in this year's title game, will coach the East squad.

Bob Steenbergen of Barren County and Reese Wilkins of Louisville Assumption, whose teams reached the state semifinals, coach the West.

Top players for the East, which has won the last three East-West games, include Breathitt County's Irene Moore, Sheldon Clark's Robin Harmon and Ashland's Barbara Harkins.

All were named to the all-state tournament team and Moore, who later signed a grant-in-aid with Morehead State, was named most valuable player.

Top players for the West include Barren County's Terri Wilkinson, also an all-tournament selection; Hughes Kirk's Laurie Heltsly, and Louisville Moore's Sharon Miller.

Rounding out the East squad are Brenda Ryan, Campbell County; Amy Flaughner, Bracken County; Tanya Fogle, Lexington Lafayette; Sandy Gutenson, Lincoln County; Lesia Chadwell, Corbin; Almada Neace, Breathitt County, and Bonnie Sizemore, Laurel County.

Other members of the West include Jill Hart, Lowes; Jeannie Hinchey, Crittenden County; Patty Underwood, Taylor County; Kim Reddington, Presentation Academy; Sheri Price, Henry County; Ann Rush, Tompkinsville, and Robin Beard, Louisville Butler.

Americans Win Men's Doubles In French Tennis

PARIS (AP) — Americans Hank Pfister and Gene Mayer won the French Open men's doubles title Friday with a 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 victory over the Spanish team of Jose Higueras and Manuel Orantes.

Pfister, 24, and Mayer, 22, played crisp, aggressive tennis to gain the $18,000 title and to uphold a bit of American honor here at Roland Garros Stadium.

Dick Stockton of the United States faces defending champion Guillermo Vilas in the men's semifinals Saturday, but no other Americans are left in the final rounds of clay court play.

The final pairing for the $24,000 women's title here was decided in semifinals matches on center court with No. 1 seed Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and Romania's No. 2-seeded Virginia Ruzici scoring straight set victories.

Friday was the lightest day of competition in the 14-day tournament, with most attention focused on Saturday's semifinal matches for the $48,000 men's title.

Belmont Fans Ask

Will Alydar Finally Catch Affirmed?

NEW YORK (AP) — Will Alydar finally catch Affirmed? John Veitch, who trains Alydar, thinks so. "This'll be the easiest of the three," the 30-year-old Calumet Farm trainer said Friday after putting Alydar through his final workout in preparation for Saturday's $184,300 Belmont Stakes, third leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

"He's tremendously strong," said Veitch. "He has the stamina and the extra quarter-mile to wear him (Affirmed) down."

With regular rider Jorge Velasquez up, Alydar worked three-eighths of a mile in a sharp 35 seconds and was eased up in 47.5 for the half-mile in the fog and over a sloppy track at Belmont Park Friday morning.

Meantime, Affirmed, who galloped the Belmont Stakes distance — 1½ miles — on Friday, was pronounced fit and ready for his bid to become the 11th Triple Crown winner in history.

"If he's not fit," said trainer Laz Barrera, "no horse is fit in America."

The 110th running of the Belmont matches two of the greatest rivals in history, with Harbor View Farm's Affirmed holding a 6-2 edge over Alydar. In their only two meetings this year Affirmed won the Kentucky Derby by 1½ lengths over Calumet Farm's Alydar, then beat him by a neck in the Preakness.

They have run more than 7½ miles in their eight confrontations and Affirmed holds an edge of only about 25 feet.

Affirmed, who will have 18-year-old sensation Steve Cauthen in the saddle, is the early-line 3-5 favorite with Alydar, the second choice in the field of five, listed at even-money. The others are rank outsiders with James W. Phillips' Darby Creek Road at 10-1, Miami Lakes Ranch's Noon Time Spender at 20-1 and Ogden Phipps' Judge Advocate at 30-1. Barrera, who trained 1976 Derby and Belmont winner Bold Forbes, also thinks the Belmont will be Affirmed's easiest task of the Triple Crown events, although he has high respect for Alydar.

"In the 20 years that I have been around the races in this country," he said, "The only 3-year-old that I could rate above them is Secretariat." Secretariat, a Triple Crown champion, won the 1973 Belmont by a whopping 31 lengths. Affirmed has won all six starts this year and has lost only two races — when he finished second to Alydar — in 15 career outings. With career earnings of more than $1 million, the son of Exclusive Native will go from post No. 3 and, as usual, will be on the lead or right close to it.

Alydar, a son of Raise A Native, will leave from post No. 2 and Veitch promises a change in strategy this time. First, Alydar will be running without blinkers for the first time in 12 races.

Also, the Calumet colt, who normally comes from behind with one late burst, will attempt to stay with Affirmed at the outset, according to Veitch.

"Alydar is going to be Affirmed's shadow," Veitch said. "Alydar is not going to let Affirmed slip away on his own. We'll go right with him. The Belmont boils down to which of the two horses endured the long, hard campaign the best."

Veitch's colt has four wins and two seconds in six 1978 starts after five victories and four seconds in 10 starts last year.

A crowd which could exceed the Belmont Stakes record of 82,694 is expected to turn out with sunny and warm weather forecast. The track was expected to be fast by race time (5:40 p.m. EDT) for what could be the first consecutive Triple Crown in history, following Seattle Slew's 1977 sweep.

"This is no match race," said Barrera, suppressing a smile. "There are five horses in the race."

Darby Creek Road, who will be ridden by Angel Cordero, was fourth in the Derby but skipped the Preakness. He has one victory in seven starts this year.

Noon Time Spender, who was fourth in the Preakness after bypassing the Derby, is winless in seven outings this year. Ruben Hernandez has the mount.

Judge Advocate, who'll have Jeff Fell up, didn't race as a 2-year-old and has one triumph in four starts.

All will carry 126 pounds in their first try at a distance farther than 1¼ miles, the Derby distance. If all go, the winner's purse will be $110,580.

CBS will telecast the race with an hour presentation starting at 5 p.m. EDT.

Luzinski Smashes Double Homers In Phils Victory

By The Associated Press

Mets 3, Giants 2

Greg Luzinski has hardly been a bull in a china shop so far this season, but things are finally starting to break for him.

"The big guy's back," said Larry Bowa after watching his husky teammate crash two home runs Friday night in Philadelphia's 6-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Luzinski, a ferocious swinger in past seasons aptly called "The Bull," had been hitting more like a lamb of late. Before his breakout against Atlanta, the Philadelphia left fielder had carried the weight of a 10-for-69 slump on his broad shoulders, the most frustrating of his major league career.

But the ball looked as big as a grapefruit to him Friday night.

"I kept saying to myself, 'see the ball and wait on it,'" Luzinski said. In the first inning, he was patient enough to wait for a walk. Then in the third, he hit a solo homer. And in the fifth, Luzinski hit a two-run shot.

The Phillies, who have won seven straight games and nine of their last 10, reached Solomon for two runs in the first as Bake McBride, Schmidt and Luzinski walked to load the bases, and Richie Hebner lashed a two-run single to right. Luzinski then walloped his 11th homer of the season in the third to make it 3-1 in the Phillies' favor. Then, in the fifth, Larry Bowa doubled with one out and scored on Mike Schmidt's single. Luzinski worked a one-ball, one-strike count and walloped the next pitch over the left-center field fence for his 12th of the season and a 6-1 Philadelphia lead.

Meanwhile, with the exception of a home run by Biff Pocoroba, Larry Christenson held the Braves scoreless for his fourth victory in eight decisions, and first since beating Cincinnati on May 14.

Pirates 11, Reds 9

Bill Robinson and Willie Stargell drove in three runs each as Pittsburgh came from seven runs behind to defeat Cincinnati. The Reds led 8-1 after five innings with the help of a three-run homer by George Foster and the five-hit pitching of Paul Moskau.

Willie Montanez' 40th RBI of the season drove home Steve Henderson with the winning run in the eighth inning as New York rallied for two runs to beat San Francisco.

Expos 10, Dodgers 9

Larry Parrish hit his first major league grand slam homer to cap a six-run fourth inning that powered Montreal over Los Angeles. The rally made a winner of reliever Dan Schatzeder in his first decision of the year. Dodger starter Tommy John, 7-4, took the loss.

Astros 11, Cardinals 7

Jose Cruz blasted four hits, drove in five runs and scored twice to pace Houston over St. Louis. Houston right-hander J.R. Richard fanned 12 batters, boosting his National League-leading total to 111, before needing relief help from Joe Sambito during a Cardinal rally in the sixth.

Cubs 5, Padres 0

Dennis Lamp pitched a one-hitter and Dave Kingman blasted a two-run homer in the first inning to lead Chicago over San Diego. Lamp, 2-5, helped his own cause with a pair of run-scoring singles as the Cubs captured their seventh victory in their last eight starts.

Lamp, a 25-year-old right-hander, had a no-hitter until Gene Richards use of a golf cart.

singled with two out in the sixth inning. The only other baserunner for the Padres was Gene Tenace, who walked in both the second and seventh innings.

BISMARCK, N.D. — OLD AGE — Clarence Mathys, Bismarck, carded his first hole-in-one Monday. The 130-year-old ace came on the No. 12 par-3 hole at Bismarck's Riverwood Golf Course. "When I can't walk around the course, I'll quit playing," says the 90-year-old Mathys, who disdains use of a golf cart.

Americans Win Men's Doubles In French Tennis

PARIS (AP) — Americans Hank Pfister and Gene Mayer won the French Open men's doubles title Friday with a 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 victory over the Spanish team of Jose Higueras and Manuel Orantes.

Pfister, 24, and Mayer, 22, played crisp, aggressive tennis to gain the $18,000 title and to uphold a bit of American honor here at Roland Garros Stadium.

Dick Stockton of the United States faces defending champion Guillermo Vilas in the men's semifinals Saturday, but no other Americans are left in the final rounds of clay court play.

The final pairing for the $24,000 women's title here was decided in semifinals matches on center court with No. 1 seed Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and Romania's No. 2-seeded Virginia Ruzici scoring straight set victories.

Friday was the lightest day of competition in the 14-day tournament, with most attention focused on Saturday's semifinal matches for the $48,000 men's title.

AS THE ENERGY SQUEEZE TIGHTENS

more and more people will be turning to the electric heat pump for efficient year round comfort from two reliable energy sources — electricity and the sun.

The heat pump's major attraction is its ability to actually draw the sun's warmth from the atmosphere and pump it into your home — even on cloudy days or when the temperature drops way down. In this region, the central electric heat pump actually produces two units of heat for each unit of electricity it uses. This means that, compared to central resistance heating, you can cut your heating bills in half. And in summer the heat pump will cool your home like central air conditioning.

See us for more information about the electric heat pump — one answer to the energy squeeze.

'Bill Of Rights' For Handicapped

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Congress provided them with a Bill of Rights but there are hundreds of handicapped persons still unaware of its existence.

And some lawyers are baffled by the law when they attempt to obtain equality for disabled clients.

"Hopefully, this situation is ending," said Diane Schneider, who is putting together a "How To" manual for the legal profession and the general public.

"The book, a first for Kentucky, should furnish all tools necessary to protect people who have traditionally been devalued in our society." Diane has been working on the project nearly a year and when the publication goes to press in September, it will be divided into three sections.

"There will be chapters explaining the handicapped person's right to an education, to a job, to a supplemental income if one is needed."

She also is including medical and social data on various physical or mental impediments.

"The third part will be a resource directory so that you need only flip through it to find what specialized services are available to your client."

Lawyers have been known to avoid such cases, claiming that they "end up being half-doctor, half-social worker."

This is what Diane expects to prevent, and one reason why she volunteered to compile the information needed to humanize the law.

At 29, her educational background is impressive. She attended the Lexington Theological Seminary; obtained a degree from the University of Kentucky School of Law, and found time to undergo training as an interpreter for the deaf.

Eventually, Diane returned to her home at Covington, where the idea for the book was born.

"Ten of us got together with Paul Vesper, who had called the meeting, and began discussing the abuses that sometimes are perpetrated on the handicapped.

"We agreed that the best approach was to provide these people with personal, vigorous legal representation. We would familiarize ourselves with the legislation and teach others to use it. A committee was formed, we got a federal grant to pay for my salary, and the Development Disabilities Law Project was under way."

It will be explained in more detail to the Kentucky Bar Association and the public during seminars this fall in Louisville, Madisonville and Covington.

The Bill of Rights is less than three-years-old and, said Diane, "many lawyers will have to start from scratch in learning what the act guarantees and what state laws have been passed in this field. The subject is so new it's not part of the curriculum of our law schools. Nor is it covered on the bar examination."

During her travels around the state, Diane has encountered a number of angry parents.

"They were angry because the school system told them it lacked the support services that would permit their disabled children to attend normal classes."

Those days are gone, Diane said.

"If schools don't have these facilities now, they are required to find them. It's the law."

Dating Computer Was Wrong, Couple Wasn't Compatible

CHICAGO (AP) — A secretary who went out on a computer-arranged date has been charged with setting fire to the man's house and killing him after he chased her around his bedroom naked.

Authorities on Wednesday charged Bobbie Ryan, 29, with deliberately setting several fires with newspapers in the basement of the townhouse of Peter Hoban, 36, after they had gone on their first date to a tavern in the Northwest Side neighborhood. She was charged with murder, felony murder and aggravated arson.

Police said both had registered at a computerized dating service, leaving their names, interests and descriptions. The computer suggested each to the other and they arranged a date by telephone, apparently the same day they registered, police said. They met last Friday evening at Hoban's residence.

His naked body was found in the bedroom of his burning townhouse Saturday morning. Authorities said the death apparently was caused by smoke inhalation. Hoban was a Democratic precinct captain in the 47th Ward and a former Chicago Park District safety inspector, police said.

A police report on Miss Ryan's arrest said Hoban continued to drink after the couple had returned to his house from the tavern. "Miss Ryan went to a bathroom, and when she came out Hoban was standing naked in the bedroom and began chasing her," the report said.

Miss Ryan worked at a law office as a legal secretary and attended night school at the Loop College. Attorney Martin Bresler of the law office said "she had worked for us only three days and was hired from an employment service."

"She was neat and attractive and did her work well, but beyond that we know nothing about her," he said.

Records show that Hoban was indicted on perjury charges for voting in a precinct where he was not properly registered during the February 1975 aldermanic election. He pleaded guilty in December 1976 and was placed on probation.

Police said Miss Ryan was arrested after her name, address and telephone number were found on a dating service slip in Hoban's kitchen. Keys to his townhouse and to his missing car were found in Miss Ryan's apartment, they said.

Investigators said Miss Ryan told them she and Hoban went to a tavern and returned to his residence, where he "made advances" toward her.

Police said at 5 a.m., after Hoban had fallen asleep in his second-floor bedroom, four small fires were set in several areas of the basement. They said Miss Ryan left in Hoban's car.

Judge Maurice D. Pompey of Circuit Court denied bond for Miss Ryan, saying the charges made her case one of a possible death penalty.

80-Year-Old Wisconsin Man Is Patron Saint Of Hitchhikers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — At age 80, Fred Grant is the patron saint of every hitchhiker who ever choked on the exhaust of passing cars.

Other cars may roar past, but Grant and his late model sedan are a sure-fire cure for a bad case of hyperextended thumb.

Every day at about 8 a.m., Grant turns up his hearing aid, cautiously pulls the car out of his driveway on Madison's East Side, steers to the main thoroughfare heading downtown and aims for the University of Wisconsin campus.

Ten minutes, four miles, a couple of stops and a good conversation later, Grant drops off one, two or maybe even three hitchhikers.

Then he heads back toward his house, sometimes giving a lift to a hitchhiker heading in that direction, maybe to work at a factory.

But Grant still isn't finished for the day.

He makes another run toward campus, picking up another hitchhiker or two. In all, he may make three circuits and give a half dozen rides before easing his car back into the driveway after an hour or so and settling in for daytime TV.

"I started this hobby six years ago," said Grant. "I've probably given 10,000 rides. Want to see my book?"

Actually, Grant has three books, leatherbound volumes labeled: "The Hitchhiking Guests of Fred Grant."

"There are 5,000 names in there," he says proudly. "I've picked up a lot of people more than once, but I only let them sign once."

Grant, a widower who lives alone, says his hobby gets him out of the house and the contact with young people makes life more interesting. "It's a kind of social event for me. It keeps me young."

Grant, who said talk in his car is most often about the weather, started picking up thumbs regularly after he tried it once and got into a stimulating political discussion with a young man during the 1972 presidential campaign.

He particularly likes to give rides to young women. During warm weather he also gives them fresh-cut flowers from his garden.

"I get a lot of pretty girls," he says. "At my age, they know I'm not up to anything. They're always glad to see me a second time."

Cattlemen Protest Beef Imports

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Rancher Dick Pringle worries that President Carter's decision to raise beef import levels may lead to federal price controls on the meat he and other U.S. cattlemen produce.

Carter announced Thursday an increase in the supply of imported beef by 200 million pounds this year. The president's action is an effort to slow rising beef prices, but cattlemen say the action in itself will have little effect.

Pringle and other Kansas beef producers worry that when Carter finds his action has had little effect on the rapidly rising price of super-market beef, the next step may be price controls.

"Our beef producers really fear a price freeze on beef," said Pringle, of Yates Center, in east central Kansas. "I would hope that chances of that are no more than one out of three, but I know sentiment can change awfully fast."

Harold Koehn, who operates a cattle feedlot near Larned, Kan., scoffed that "200 million pounds is three days' kill for us."

But to an industry that has faced heavy losses over the past four years because of an abundant supply of beef, Carter's decision is viewed as a slap in the face at cattlemen seeking to rebuild.

"Even though it won't have an effect immediately, it gives us an indication of what the administration's policy is toward our returning to profit," Koehn said.

Scott City feedlot operator Floyd Fairleigh, president of the Kansas Livestock Association, said he had planned to expand his feedyard capacity, but now will wait "to see how far the administration will go in reacting to our market."

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

We have a bathtub that has rust stains caused by water dripping from the tap. Do you have any suggestions as to how I can remove this rust? The tub is porcelain. — Esther Saele Seems many of our readers have the same rusty tub problem. It's very widespread, isn't confined to any one area — and it can be a pain in the neck. But our friends at the Porcelain Enamel Institute have come to our rescue. They suggest if the rust stains are light they can be removed by first rubbing the stain with a cut lemon, then rinsing with a warm water detergent solution. If the stain is really bad, make a paste of cream of tartar and hydrogen peroxide. Use a small brush, such as a toothbrush, and scrub the stain until it disappears.

Rinse the paste off thoroughly and your tub should be shiny and bright again. But remember this cleaning method is for a porcelain tub, not the new fiber glass ones. Good luck! — Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE: Coffee doesn't taste the same when the morning newspaper gets lost. So don't get lost, Heloise. — Martha

Do I love you! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I clean an office which has many artificial plants. These get awfully dusty and it is quite difficult to get at all the leaves. One day I decided to spray window cleaner on the leaves, then wipe the ones I could easily reach. The ones I couldn't, I lightly spritzed with the spray and they looked so clean! They even had an added shine from the dried cleaner.

Now I just spray them about once every two weeks. No need to bother trying to dust all the little leaves. — Lynne Hoffman

DEAR HELOISE:

When warming baby's bottle, fill an empty 46-ounce fruit juice can with the top cut out with the hottest tap water.

The bottle always turns out just the right temperature (check it, of course, before giving to baby) without having to turn on the stove burner. — Vera Quinn

DEAR HELOISE:

With so many folks wearing baseball-type caps nowadays, I'm sure there are many who are faced with the problem of washing them. Whenever I laundered my husband's caps, they always came out limp and wrinkled and he wouldn't wear them again.

Finally, I came up with a solution!

After the cap has been washed (I put it in the washing machine along with my regular wash), I make sure the adjustable band in back is fastened.

Then I stuff the cap as tightly as possible with a terry towel and spray the entire cap liberally with spray starch, giving special attention to both sides of the bill.

Shape the bill carefully and let the cap sit until dry. It will look almost like new. — Brenda Richardson

Need Extra Copies?

Will you be needing extra copies of a particular issue of the Messenger?

Many times when a write-up of an event, such as an engagement, a wedding, an anniversary observance, a sports event, etc. appears, those involved call later for issues of that paper, only to find that our supply is exhausted.

If you know you will want extra papers, please inform the news office or business office, and the desired number will be saved for you. They will be held for one week.

Due to the tremendous increase in cost of newsprint, we want to have sufficient issues on hand to fill an individual's request, however we are trying to eliminate the problem of having an oversupply of papers to dispose of.

We thank you for your cooperation, and if notified in advance, we will be happy to see that you have copies of any story you need, in the amount you desire.

LRC Tightens Control Of Electricity Cost Adjustment Clause In Kentucky

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A regulation giving the state Public Service Commission increased control over electric utilities' use of the controversial fuel adjustment clause has been approved by the Legislative Research Commission.

The clause has been used by Kentucky's six electric generating utilities to automatically pass along increased fuel charges to customers.

PSC approval had not been required for fuel charges to be added to bills, and the practice frequently resulted in sharp or unexpected increases in consumers' basic monthly rates.

Under the new regulation drafted by the PSC, and given LRC approval Wednesday, utilities must file their proposed monthly fuel adjustment with the PSC 10 days before billing customers.

Also built into the regulation is a requirement for public hearings at six-month intervals to determine whether fuel adjustment charges were justified. Utilities are also required to appear before the commission every two years for a review of the fuel clause and a reassessment of basic rates.

One of the most controversial sections of the new clause requires public disclosure of all coal purchase contracts by utilities.

Utility representatives had testified extensively against portions of the proposed regulation at two hearings held previously by the PSC, so only one utility spokesman — representing Big Rivers Electric Corp. — showed up Wednesday at the LRC subcommittee meeting.

Big Rivers repeated its request that it be given additional time beyond the three-month period in the regulation in which to implement the regulation.

However, PSC attorney William Sawyer said the PSC had previously rejected that request by Big Rivers because it did not seem fair to the other utilities.

The LRC also approved a regulation that extends the deer archery season by 11 days, but that does not permit statewide crossbow hunting during the deer archery season.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources amended its original regulation which would have permitted crossbow hunting statewide after receiving numerous objections from longbow hunters and others.

The Department said it determined that the safety and performance of the weapon deserved further study and that until such study is completed, the regulation would permit use of the crossbow only in the Pioneer Weapons Wildlife Management Area in Bath and Menifee counties during the statewide long bow and compound bow season.

The new dates for archery deer hunting are Oct. 1 through Nov. 8, Nov. 18-30 and Dec. 9-31.

The LRC also approved regulations governing the use of plastic plumbing pipe in new construction, but heard several representatives of the Louisville and Kentucky homebuilders say the regulations do not go far enough. They said Kentucky lags behind other states in not allowing expanded use of plastic pipes in plumbing.

Mondale, Connally To Visit State

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale and former Treasury Secretary John Connally are scheduled to make separate visits here within the next five weeks.

Connally will help kick off the 1978 Republican campaign in central Kentucky with appearances at a pair of GOP fund-raisers on June 28, according to Onie McBride, Fayette County Republican Party executive assistant.

One gathering is to raise money for Louie Guenther Jr., who is seeking to unseat Democratic incumbent Walter Huddleston in the November election for senator.

The other benefit is for Mary Louise Foust in her race for the 6th District Congressional seat. Foust, a former Kentucky state treasurer, will oppose state Sen. Tom Easterly, D-Frankfort, who defeated incumbent Rep. John D. Breckinridge, D-Ky., in the May primary.

Mondale is scheduled to participate in the Midwestern Governors' Conference, which is scheduled to meet here July 12-15.

Bob Babbage, an aide to Gov. Julian

Carroll, said he and Mondale met Tuesday in Washington to work out details of the visit.

"He'll be here, but we don't know when," said Babbage. "We're working to secure the date and time now."

Mondale is scheduled to speak at the formal opening of the conference July 13, but Babbage said the schedule would be rearranged should Mondale be unable to attend.

Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn. — who replaced her late husband, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, in the Senate — turned down an invitation to the conference, as did Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

Others invited to attend the conference include Robert Strauss, President Carter's inflation adviser; Henry Ford, head of the Ford Motor Co.; Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, and Huddleston.

Fifteen midwestern governors, their families and staffs are expected for the meeting.

Babbage said the focus of the session would be on rural development, with prime topics to include energy and health care.

Carter Changes Mind, Permits Sale Of Equipment To Red China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is permitting the sale of $2.8 million in military-related equipment to communist China, reversing a decision made only one month ago.

Administration officials disclosed the reversal Thursday but contended that the action did not reflect a change in U.S. trade policy toward Peking.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said approval was granted only after the administration was convinced that the equipment's technology would be used for civilian, not military, purposes.

The equipment involves sophisticated airborne infrared scanning devices and high-speed recording devices that can detect potential earthquakes and help locate oil deposits. The initial export application from Daedulus Enterprises of Ann Arbor, Mich., was rejected early last month on national security grounds.

The administration reportedly was concerned that the Chinese could adapt the equipment to intercept U.S. military signals.

The company criticized the rejection as "absurd," and filed an appeal. A company official argued that the technology was more than 20 years old and that the Chinese could obtain simpler methods for intercepting U.S. military signals.

Commenting on the reversal, one administration official said, "We satisfied ourselves that the equipment would not be diverted for military purposes."

Deaths and Funerals

Mrs. Eathyl Hopwood Dies This Morning; Services Not Set

Mrs. Eathyl Hopwood, 73, a resident of the Kaler community, died at 4:30 a.m. today at the Community Hospital.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Rosetta Johnson, Hickory, route 2, five grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Bea Hicks, and Mrs. Vada Cash, of Mayfield, and two brothers, Raymond Thompson, of Kaler, and Eugene Thompson, Bridgeport, Conn.

Friends may call at Filbeck and Cann Funeral Home in Benton after noon Sunday. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Services Today For Mrs. Barger

The funeral of Mrs. Willie B. Barger, widow of Alvis Barger, was held at 2 p.m. today at Roberts Funeral Chapel, with the Rev. John Huffman officiating. Burial was in Maplewood Cemetery.

Mrs. Barger, 83, was a resident of 951 Paris Road, and died late Thursday at the Community Hospital.

Surviving are a son, six grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Fort Campbell Helicopter Crashes In Tenn.

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A UH-1 Huey U.S. Army helicopter from Fort Campbell, Ky., crashed Friday in a farm field about 13 miles south of Clarksville, injuring one soldier, authorities said.

The Huey, workhorse of the Vietnam War, apparently lost power and crashed onto the field owned by Herbert Baggett, Maj. A.T. Brainerd said in a telephone interview. Five soldiers were aboard the craft.

He said injuries to the soldier were minor and damage to the aircraft, attached to the 2nd Squadron of the 17th Air Cavalry, was minimal.

Lora Baggett, the farmer's wife, said she was washing her hair when the crash occurred.

"It just began to make a terrible racket and I was here in the kitchen and I just looked out the window and it had crashed," she said. "One soldier was laying straight down on the ground. The others were walking around."

Brainerd said the cause of the crash has not been determined.

James Sanderson Family Receives Certificate

The family of the late James Sanderson has received a certificate stating that the United States of America honors the memory of Mr. Sanderson, and reads:

"This certificate is awarded by a grateful nation in recognition of devoted and selfless consecration to the service of our country in the Armed Forces of the United States."

It is signed by President Jimmy Carter.

Local REACT Unit

Members Meet Monday

The Mayfield-Graves Co. REACT Unit No. 3776 will meet Monday, June 12, at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building of the North 5th Street Housing Project.

All members are urged to attend and all CB's are welcome, a spokesman said.

Timothy L. Perkins Is Honorary Page

Timothy Lynn Perkins

Timothy Lynn Perkins, 4-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Perkins, of Mayfield, route 3, has been appointed an honorary page of the Kentucky House of Representatives by Representative Ward (Butch) Burnette.

Timothy's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Peoples and Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins, both of Mayfield, route 3.

Two Eddyville Convicts Are Recaptured Friday

EDDYVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Two convicts at the Kentucky State Penitentiary were captured near Dawson Springs, Ky. Friday only hours after they escaped.

Officials at the prison said Ronnie Franklin Hood and Robert Allen Luttrell, both 26, escaped from the industry area of the facility about 12:25 p.m. The pair apparently escaped in a industry delivery truck.

They were apprehended by state police about five miles east of the Dawson Springs toll plaza on the Western Kentucky Parkway.

They were apprehended by state police about five miles east of the Dawson Springs toll plaza on the Western Kentucky Parkway.

Brainerd said the cause of the crash has not been determined.

Puerto Rican Says He Would Shoot Up U.S. House Again

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Andres Figueroa Cordero, free from prison but dying of cancer, says he would shoot up the U.S. House of Representatives again — just as he did nearly 25 years ago with three companions in the cause of Puerto Rican independence.

"I would do it half a million times if I had to. To save your country, there is no other recourse than to give your life," he said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

Figueroa Cordero, now 53, was released from the federal prison in Springfield, Mo., last Oct. 6 after President Carter commuted his sentence to the time already served.

Carter's action came in response to an appeal by Puerto Rican Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo for the prisoner's freedom on the grounds he had terminal cancer.

Figueroa Cordero had served 23 years of a 25-to-75-year term for his role in the attack on the House of Representatives in 1954. Five congressmen were wounded.

Figueroa Cordero's companions in the attack — Mrs. Lolita Lebron, Rafael Cancel Miranda and Irving Rodriguez Flores — remain in U.S. prisons, also serving 25-to-75-year terms.

Gov. Romero Barcelo, differing sharply with Figueroa Cordero's aims, wants Puerto Rico to become a U.S. state and has said that if re-elected in 1980 he would call a plebiscite on the statehood issue.

In the interview, Figueroa Cordero claimed that statehood would precipitate an armed struggle here. In a 1967 plebiscite, pro-independence groups obtained less than one percent of the vote while statehooders got 38.9 percent and advocates of Puerto Rico's present commonwealth status got 60.8 percent.

"We will have a revolution either today or tomorrow," the nationalist revolutionary said. "If we don't, then the Puerto Ricans no longer have blood running through their veins."

Speaking of the House attack, Figueroa Cordero said old pistols had failed him and his companions.

He added that hand grenades would have been better.

"Prison is a school both for the criminal and for the revolutionary who wants to learn more effective techniques," he went on. "We only had four pistols and the need of our struggle forced us to do it, but a militant must be well trained in all weapons — that is, if he is going to fight. If not, he would do better remaining idle."

He said his feelings are unswayed by the lack of support for independence registered at the polls. "Most people do not admit they favor independence because then they will be swallowed by the Yankee shark. People here live in fear. It has always been like this."

He has returned to live in his hometown of Aguada, a small village on the west coast of the island, where he claimed he is under constant surveillance by the local police.

"If I go to the toilet they want to know who took me," he said, adding that a similar situation existed in federal prison when all his friends and visitors were monitored.

He said the prison years were lonely, visitors were few and only occasional correspondence was allowed among five Puerto Rican nationalists serving terms in various federal prisons on the mainland.

The fifth nationalist is Oscar Collazo, serving a life sentence for the attempted assassination in the fall of 1950 of President Harry S. Truman at Blair House, then the president's temporary residence.

Four young followers listened as Figueroa Cordero spoke in a friend's living room, whose peeling walls bore paintings of the 1937 Ponce massacre in which 20 persons, 18 of them nationalists, died in a clash with police at a Palm Sunday rally.

"I fight for our independence," he said. "Once we have it, it is up to our youth to decide if it is Marxist, socialist or whatever."

In the last four months more than a 100 bombs have exploded in Puerto Rico, according to police figures.

"I admire the groups that are placing them (the bombs) if it is in the fight for the national liberation, because I do not detest the bombs or the glorious men who sacrifice themselves," Figueroa Cordero added. But he said he is glad nobody has been injured in the bombings "because it shows we are not, as they claim, murderers."

He denied that the nationalists who attacked at Congress and Blair House were suicidal.

"There are very few who climb the tree we climbed and that makes them think we were suicidal, but we were willing to do anything to call attention to the colonial situation of our people."

Figueroa Cordero said he remains optimistic despite his illness.

"My future plans are to go on fighting for the freedom of my comrades and then take a vacation. If I survive the cancer then I'll open any kind of business to survive."

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Andres Figueroa Cordero, free from prison but dying of cancer, says he would shoot up the U.S. House of Representatives again — just as he did nearly 25 years ago with three companions in the cause of Puerto Rican independence.

"I would do it half a million times if I had to. To save your country, there is no other recourse than to give your life," he said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

Figueroa Cordero, now 53, was released from the federal prison in Springfield, Mo., last Oct. 6 after President Carter commuted his sentence to the time already served.

Carter's action came in response to an appeal by Puerto Rican Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo for the prisoner's freedom on the grounds he had terminal cancer.

Figueroa Cordero had served 23 years of a 25-to-75-year term for his role in the attack on the House of Representatives in 1954. Five congressmen were wounded.

Figueroa Cordero's companions in the attack — Mrs. Lolita Lebron, Rafael Cancel Miranda and Irving Rodriguez Flores — remain in U.S. prisons, also serving 25-to-75-year terms.

Gov. Romero Barcelo, differing sharply with Figueroa Cordero's aims, wants Puerto Rico to become a U.S. state and has said that if re-elected in 1980 he would call a plebiscite on the statehood issue.

In the interview, Figueroa Cordero claimed that statehood would precipitate an armed struggle here. In a 1967 plebiscite, pro-independence groups obtained less than one percent of the vote while statehooders got 38.9 percent and advocates of Puerto Rico's present commonwealth status got 60.8 percent.

"We will have a revolution either today or tomorrow," the nationalist revolutionary said. "If we don't, then the Puerto Ricans no longer have blood running through their veins."

Speaking of the House attack, Figueroa Cordero said old pistols had failed him and his companions.

He added that hand grenades would have been better.

"Prison is a school both for the criminal and for the revolutionary who wants to learn more effective techniques," he went on. "We only had four pistols and the need of our struggle forced us to do it, but a militant must be well trained in all weapons — that is, if he is going to fight. If not, he would do better remaining idle."

He said his feelings are unswayed by the lack of support for independence registered at the polls. "Most people do not admit they favor independence because then they will be swallowed by the Yankee shark. People here live in fear. It has always been like this."

He has returned to live in his hometown of Aguada, a small village on the west coast of the island, where he claimed he is under constant surveillance by the local police.

"If I go to the toilet they want to know who took me," he said, adding that a similar situation existed in federal prison when all his friends and visitors were monitored.

He said the prison years were lonely, visitors were few and only occasional correspondence was allowed among five Puerto Rican nationalists serving terms in various federal prisons on the mainland.

The fifth nationalist is Oscar Collazo, serving a life sentence for the attempted assassination in the fall of 1950 of President Harry S. Truman at Blair House, then the president's temporary residence.

Four young followers listened as Figueroa Cordero spoke in a friend's living room, whose peeling walls bore paintings of the 1937 Ponce massacre in which 20 persons, 18 of them nationalists, died in a clash with police at a Palm Sunday rally.

"I fight for our independence," he said. "Once we have it, it is up to our youth to decide if it is Marxist, socialist or whatever."

In the last four months more than a 100 bombs have exploded in Puerto Rico, according to police figures.

"I admire the groups that are placing them (the bombs) if it is in the fight for the national liberation, because I do not detest the bombs or the glorious men who sacrifice themselves," Figueroa Cordero added. But he said he is glad nobody has been injured in the bombings "because it shows we are not, as they claim, murderers."
