LEGISLATION VAGUE ON ENDING WAR CONTRACTS

NAM Counsel Says There Is No Provision For Terminating Contracts After The War

Fear that the money and material now tied up in war production under government contract might not be freed after the war was voiced by Lambert Miller, associate counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Speaking here at a meeting of the American Trade Association Executives, Mr. Lambert pointed out that the provisions of the First War Powers Act for terminating contracts during the war may not necessarily apply after the war. Under the Act, a war contract may be terminated where such an action would "facilitate the prosecution of the war." However, he asserted, it is questionable whether this would hold when the war is over.

Methods To End Contracts

In order to clear up any doubts which may arise, Mr. Lambert suggested that (1) government agencies to provide the authority to negotiate agreed settlements which will be final and binding; and (2) that some method be provided for advance payments for postwar terminations.

"If prompt and adequate methods for freeing the money and material tied up in war production under government contracts are not devised," he declared, "most of the other plans for the reconversion of industry to peacetime operations will fail, and many operations pending settlement with business enterprises, large and small, will be forced to suspend winning the war."

BULLDOGS LOSE TO MURRAY 13 - 6

Coach's Bakers battling Bulldogs fought Murray's Tigers to a standstill last Thursday night in the field before bowing to them 13 to 6. Three of the Fulton teams regulars were out of the game and replaced by three first year men in key positions. The Bulldogs led at the half 6 to 0 by virtue of a touchdown by Whitesell plowed over for, after sterling runs by Barron and Meacham.

Billy Joe Forrest was started as spinner back to replace Paul Rhodes. Jimmy Lansden replaced the ailin Don Sensing. Donald Morris and W. O. Jones divided duties between them to take the place of Henry Locke who was ill.

All told, the game redeemed the team from the poor showing made against Huntingdon and established the fact that the Bulldogs can and will fight. With better luck the team might have upset Murray Thursday night and the facts are that the Tigers were substantially outplayed. Oddly, too, the record of Murray-Fulton games since 1930 was more or less preserved. In fourteen games each team has won six, and two have been tied. Until last Thursday night only Fulton had won for three straight years, and now Murray has done that. Again only one touchdown separated the teams, and this game last Thursday night and the facts are straight year for the same score, except for the point after touchdown separated the teams, 14 to 6, in 1942 it was 12 to 6, and last Thursday night it was 13 to 6.

FARMERS PLAN TO BUILD AFTER WAR

That many farmers are planning to have new houses or other buildings as soon as war restrictions are removed is indicated by the number of building plans asked of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

In the first half of this year a total of 1,240 requests for building plans were received by the Department of Agricultural Engineering. This compares to 1,580 requests received in all of 1942 and 1,682 requests received in 1941.

Interest is high in about all kinds of new buildings on farms, the college reports. Some farmers are ear-marking war bonds to pay for new buildings, or for remodeling, or for new equipment.

More than 200 industrial, labor, and newspaper executives gathered here for a 2-day conference at the invitation of the War Department, to receive a confidential report on the war situation and a preview of the war production job just ahead.

Summoned by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who presided at the opening session, representatives of the "Army's partners on the production front" heard General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, discuss the military situation on all battlefronts; Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, chief of military intelligence, present data on the strength of the enemy; and Lt. Gen. Arnold, chief of the air forces, was present to discuss all phases of the air war.

R. C. PICKERING WINS LAWSUIT

The property-sewer right lawsuit of R. C. Pickering vs. C. F. Jackson, which was instituted sometime ago, was decided at this Term of Circuit Court in favor of Mr. Pickering.

The lawsuit grew out of claim made by the Jacksons to five feet of ground by right of possession account of an error in the writing of the original deed from Paul Pickering to R. C. Pickering, the ground in dispute being part of Mr. Pickering's drive way to the rear of his home and which had been used as such since he built his home in 1916, and to a threat by Mrs. Jackson to break the Sanitary sewer line of Mr. Pickering, which runs across the corner of the Jackson property.

EDITORIAL*FOR TAX SIMPLIFICATION

Is there anyone today who does not feel the impact of the complicated tax system? Can there be anyone who does not feel the need for simplification?

Let these people take heart, for from Senator Walter F. George, Chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, whose duty it is to investigate measures and methods for the simplification of taxes, comes this statement:

"If a statute is supplemented by complicated regulations or technical interpretations, little is accomplished by a simple law.

"However, I believe that the first step towards simplification which should be undertaken by the Committee is to make the income tax law more simple and understandable."

"I believe that emphasis should first be directed towards the income tax rather than the excess-profits tax, as I hope the excess-profits tax can be repealed immediately after the termination of the war, in order to encourage new ventures and stimulate private enterprise."

This is a very definite step in the right direction, and, more fortunately, it comes from a man thoroughly conversant with the nation's tax picture. Less preoccupation with the excess-profits laws which are draining industry's post-war reserves, and more attention to the tax quandary of the large majority of the nation would make this phase of the war program far easier to take.

REALISTIC POSTWAR PROGRAM

Americans must not sit back and wait for the end of the war to come and then flounder around for solutions to the problems they will have to face, or worse still, be forced into accepting tailor-made solutions of theorists.

Fortunately, Americans aren't. From Albert Lea, the Minnesota farm community of 12,000, there comes a concrete program for a "full-employment" peacetime economy. In what is probably one of the first community postwar planning studies in the United States, a survey probed into every facet of the town's economic potential to discover the jobs that will have to be found if there is to be a job for every man who wants one when the uniforms come off.

Through interviews with all local employers, data were obtained on the probable number of jobs that will exist after the war. Studies also were made on markets, farm income, business conditions, and projected public works in the community. Potential postwar customers in the city and nearby farming community were queried to learn what they wanted to buy in the first two postwar years.

Here is a community of citizens, genuinely concerned with the post-war picture, who do not lean back dolefully and wait for utter confusion, or indulge in the wishful thinking that envisages the brave new world of wonderful inventions to begin the moment hostilities cease.

Of course we cannot plan against all the eventualities that will occur after the war. But we can take stock now. And each community in the country should be "taking notes" of this kind to refer to when the crucial time comes.

NO BOONDOGGING

"Without free enterprise we cannot have free labor and free government. If we lose any one, we lose the others as well."

This is what Irving M. Ives, majority leader to the New York State Assembly, told the Northeastern Conference of the Council of State Governors meeting in New York. "The program we devise," he said, "must be based on the firm and fundamental belief that free enterprise must be preserved."

SOMETHING'S GOT TO BE DONE

Government's role must be essentially one of cooperation with business, Mr. Ives added, and "public works undertaken in the postwar era must be necessary, justified, and constructive." They must be located where they would do the maximum good in cushioning unemployment. "We don't want boondoggling," he said.

DOWN OUR ALLEY

Sometimes out of the maze of opinions and expressions that come from personalities in every section of our land, we find words that make sense. C. F. Kettering, General Motors vice president, recently uttered some words that should be a great comfort to us all, even though the war's end is far from in sight.

"I am sure that every manufacturer and every industry in the country is going to do everything he possibly can to get into civilian production as soon as possible after the close of the war and thereby cut down the difficulties that come from not having people employed. It is just as important to industry to have people employed as it is to the people themselves."

"The real difference between those who do things and those who don't is that the ones who do things try, and fail, and try again. When the steam locomotive was developed nobody could see a bit of use for it, and yet today we have hundreds of thousands of people employed in the railroad business. Nobody could see any use for anything when it first began. Nobody could find any use for the telephone or the telephone. You may remember when the automobile was just struggling along. Nobody could see that it was going to be the business it became, employing many millions of people. Because the motorcar business isn't simply manufacturing of the automobile. It is the roadbuilding, it's the hot dog stands, it's the dealers, it's the gas filling stations, and the thousand and one other things. Even the real estate business is dependent upon it. So you see, when you get one of these fundamental problems solved, many, many other things—far beyond your ability to predict—will develop."

"I think that with the energy, the faith and determination which this war has proved that free men of all nations possess, we can take this mysterious future, which isn't very clear, and carve out anything that human imagination can think of, provided it is worth carving out and is a benefit to the human family, and also, provided we are willing to work for it."

These practical words make good sense.

The future of the Philippine Islands is a definite responsibility of the United States, and there is no plainer obligation in this war than that of freeing that Commonwealth from the Japanese invaders. A move has been made in Congress to give the Philippines their complete independence. There is no question but what the United States will fulfill all its obligations to the Philippines, and General MacArthur is impatient over delays that prevent him from returning to the Islands as the leader of the war in behalf of the Commonwealth.

Our country needs and must have extraordinary production to win this war. In the face of this need, industries must overcome inefficiency, labor turn-over, absenteeism, and strikes and slowdowns. These four difficulties are problems of democracy, which if solved by law, would mean a Gestapo and concentration camps. The American way would be for each of us, thru self-discipline, to answer for and to himself.

Some industries are plagued by strikes or slowdowns which neither local nor national leaders seem able to control. In the first six months of this year we lost the staggering and shocking total of 60,400,000 hours of production through strikes. That number would have produced 2,626 large bombers, thousands of tank killers or hundreds of thousands of Garand rifles.

Look at it this way. We have our natural resources, our factories and machines, and our industrial techniques. We haven't time and can't afford to take the productive energy to do much about increasing them. What we must do is produce more with what we have. Neither individual indifference, nor governmental restraints and red-tape must be allowed to interfere with our production goals—in our factories and on the farms.

SAFETYGRAMS

Just the other day a very serious accident was called to my attention when a school child was seriously injured in an automobile accident and later died. It was the first day of school and the little girl's mother had sent her away with the usual warnings about being careful at intersections and getting to school safely. Here is what happened:

She passed a driveway on her way to school where the garage was attached to the house and looked like part of the structure. The garage was immediately across the sidewalk, and the owner in backing out in the morning, being late for work as he stated later, back out quickly without warning or looking around, and consequently injured and killed this little girl.

There is absolutely no excuse for this type of accident. The driver in a case like this should take into consideration that pedestrians are on his sidewalk and must pass there, and because of the peculiar construction of the driveway, it is up to him to be extra careful in getting his car in and out of the garage.

If you have a situation like this, or your driveway crosses a sidewalk, regardless of vision and other safety factors, you are the responsible driver, so be careful, slow down, and look around before crossing the walk.

Drive carefully.

Miss Mary Anderson has returned home from Detroit after spending a ten day vacation there.

FOR VICTORYTidbits of Kentucky FolkloreBY Jordan Wilson, Ph.D.
WESTERN KENTUCKY TEACHERS COLLEGE
BOWLING GREEN, KY.FIDELITY—WHERE IS IT?

Some of the best compliments that have come to me because of these articles were in letters written by people who assumed that I was from their home counties and had applied the name Fidelity to some village they must have known by another name. This error came about rather naturally, since many readers of this column—if there are many—do not know that eighty papers use it weekly. But the fact that I drew Fidelity to resemble their own little back-country villages so much that they mistook, adds to my vanity. Several people have written that they have consulted atlases and have been unable to find Fidelity listed in any Kentucky county. This is right, since no place now bears that title so far as I know. But my little Calloway County village did, once upon a time ages ago, and I have revived it because it seems to be the right name for a village, anyway.

Certainly there was such a village and still is. Every county has from one to a dozen just like it, differing only in family names and relative amount of mud or dust. My own village is now on a good state highway, within ten or fifteen minutes from the county seat, Murray, but it used to be a half day away when mud was mud and when transportation meant farm wagons or, at best, steel tired buggies. The village as I knew it in the early nineties and later was already a dying giant, as giants were in those days. Just before my time the railroad had been built through Murray, leaving us ten miles to one side. Our few industries gradually went down or moved to the county seat. When a water-mill on Blood River was damaged by flood and fire, there was no comeback. When wagons could be bought at reasonable prices, the two shops that made them fell into disuse. Even the registered pharmacists, two of them, moved away, and prescriptions had to be taken to town to get them filled. The postoffice stayed and stays, still a part of a general store. And, since my time, the one-room school over in the edge of the woods grew into a two-room graded school and then into a big high school. That big high school building overshadowed the rest of the village and represents modernness to everybody. There all sorts of public programs are given, so that my ex-neighbors and their descendants keep up with the big world quite as well as people in more centrally located towns and villages.

Yes, there is a Fidelity, as real as any flesh-and-blood person you know. But, I must confess, my Fidelity is not the one that stands and stood on the gullied hills in eastern Calloway County. It is a dream world and yet as real as the paper on which this article is printed. My Fidelity is a composite of folk attitudes, of folk fears, folk dreams, folk legends. Everything I have written in these four hundred and fifty articles is truth, historic truth, not a mere dream of what folk life was like fifty or forty years ago. All of my characters once lived in Fidelity and are presented only slightly disguised as to name but not as to character. And yet, they are abstractions in the sense that they so represent types that they could have been photographed as composite characters as well as individuals. There may be other types of people besides those I knew at Fidelity, but I have about given up hopes of finding any such. Some types were well represented, but there was room for quaint ones, quaint even for us. And so, though I have been almost fanatical in my adherence to truth, I know that at the same time I have presented types that seem like your similar people. If you have found your village and its people in my Fidelity, then this column has served its major purpose. If, on the other hand, you have laughed and sneered or wondered at my Fidelity and imagined it the only one of its kind, then I have failed utterly and may truthfully be accused of presenting too intimately the facts of my own life as a boy near an old-fashioned village.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Happened to me yesterday. I'm monkeying with my cart to get it started, when a soldier stops alongside. "Need some help?" he asks. And darned if that soldier wasn't young Charlie Jenkins from Elm Street. You wouldn't know him after six months in the Army. Fifteen pounds heavier—straight and tan and real sure of himself. The Army's done a lot for Charlie—like it has for lots of other fellows.

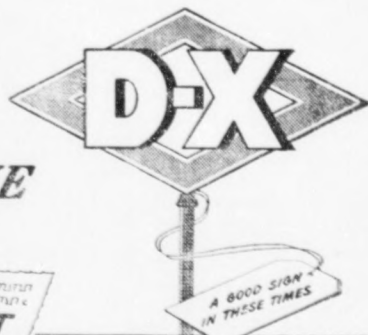

Now I read how some folks worry about the soldiers havin' a glass of beer occasionally. After seein' Charlie, I don't think there's cause to fret.

Just like Charlie says—"if you can trust us with guns and ships and tanks, I guess you can trust us with a glass of beer once in a while."

And I know the beer industry is cooperating with the Army to see that beer is sold in good, clean, decent places.

SPEAKING OF HEALTH

By DR. VICTOR G. HEISER Medical Consultant National Association of Manufacturers

COMMON COLDS
From the beginning of time colds have been regarded as the work of an especially evil demon.

No doubt every one can remember Grandma's seasoned advice
"better wear rubbers and watch out for drafts," which may or may not have been needed. How much of this advice is founded upon actual preventive measures can best be determined by some of the known facts about the common cold.

The Cause
Medical science has proved that a cold is infectious, also it is one of the most contagious diseases known. Ancient superstitions do not pass out quickly. There are many today who still believe colds are contracted by exposure to cold air. It is generally quite harmless to get one's clothes or feet wet.
This may bring on trouble if it causes a chill for a sufficiently long period to draw upon the reserves of strength, especially if one's vitality is at a low ebb. To be wet in this or that part of the body produces no ill effects.

Any condition which tends to lower resistance, such as over-exhaustion, or irregular or faulty eating habits, will predispose a person to an infection. If the cold germ is present, persons with little resistance easily become victims.

People in outdoor occupations, such as lumbermen, trappers, and hunters all agree that while they remain in the frozen North they never have even the mildest colds.
But on their return to civilization, they invariably catch colds within a few days. The symptoms of the common cold are too well known to need reiteration here.

Prevention
Colds far surpass in frequency any other disease. Like all infections, colds confer an immunity against other attacks. But, unfortunately for many persons, the immunity that last only a few weeks or months.

Colds cause immediate disability and are therefore responsible for much absence. They are dangerous because of the possibility of opening the way for pneumonia or other serious diseases. When properly treated, colds are among the least harmful of diseases.

The prevention of colds consists in avoiding the infection and in guarding against the predisposing causes.

Colds may be traced from one victim to another, may run through schools, factories, or any other assembled groups. Therefore, drop-let infection should be avoided, especially from persons coughing and sneezing.

Ever on the alert to bring discoveries into general use, industry has developed a unique lamp to combat the spread of colds by means of invisible germ-killing rays. This lamp was designed to meet the wartime problem of controlling the rapid spread of colds in offices, workshops, schools, and homes as well.
Reports on these lamps indicate they have proved their efficiency in lessening the chances of transmitting colds.

Local Boy Writes Mother, Also Gets Letter From Captain

This letter was received by Mrs. Hammett from her son Maurice, who is somewhere overseas.

Dearest Mother:

I'll write home once again although I don't seem to be getting any mail from you. I did get a V mail letter from you a few days ago but I don't like them so much. It is raining again tonight and what could I do better than write to my folks back home. Well Mom, I went on a pleasure trip yesterday to the beach where we landed when we first hit here and believe me it was a very different atmosphere than before, if you get what I mean. I had a real good time, it was too cool to swim but enjoyed our division band that was there and that night in town we saw a good picture. Coney Island with Betty Grable. At the Red Cross we had plenty to eat and nice Ted cross workers, Mother I want to say this about the Red Cross, they are doing a very fine job over here, with out them we might go crazy, it does a lot of good just to talk to one of our American ladies, I guess you can tell that I say American with pride, the American girls are so far out in front of the rest its no race at all, their smile, their friendliness and actions, so the girls back home can take a bow. Well it won't be so very long till Christmas, I know not any of us will be happy but we have plenty to be thankful for, especially me, I'm thankful because I am still able to write you and think maybe by next Christmas we will be able to celebrate in the same old way.

How is my baby sis, tell her when she is enjoying Christmas to think of her Bud out here because I'll be thinking of her and picturing her in my mind and I'll see that sweet smile and that pretty hair shining in the light and that is exactly what she is to me, the light. Gee, how could I go wrong with three swell sisters and two buds and my Mom and Dad to hurry home to. Please don't worry about sending me anything for you can't send what I want so just write often and give my regards to the Ruddle family. Lots of love to all
Your Soldier Son,
MAURICE
If any one cares to write Maurice

How frequently in reading the Gospels do we find men and women at the feet of Jesus. As He sat at least one day a woman of the street came and kissed His feet, washing them with her tears and drying them with her hair (Luke 7:38). Coming with tears of remorse for her sins, she found forgiveness at His feet. So does any sinner.

Christ cast a legion of demons out of a poor creature living naked in the tombs (Luke 8:27-35), and when he was next seen by those who knew him, he was clothed, "sitting at the feet of Jesus." Here at His feet no demon can control and here the one who has experienced His miraculous power in his life should desire to remain, looking up into His face.

On another occasion a ruler of the synagogue ran to Jesus and flung himself at His feet, begging Him to come to his house where his little daughter, twelve years old, lay dying (Luke 8:41-42). Here was a man bringing his need to the feet of Christ. Here we may, too, make our desires known here we can plead our needs with the assurance of having them heard and met.

A leper that Christ had cleansed came back to fall in thanksgiving at His feet (Luke 17:15). This is the position to which gratitude should force us all who know His mercy and His love. When we have seen His goodness how can we fail to kneel in praise at His feet?

John on the Isle of Patmos beheld Christ in glory and fell at His feet as dead (Revelation 1:17). No man can behold the glory of the Son of God without being conscious of his own humility and unworthiness and weakness.

There is a day coming when all things shall be put under His feet. Every knee shall bow to Him. Kings will cast down their crowns before Him. Then, those who have loved Him here will have the joy of reigning with Him in glory. Now we may in the study of His Word and in communion with Him sit at His feet to be taught by Him.

This letter was received and greatly appreciated by Mrs. Lee Hammett, from Capt. Marvin H. Smith, who is stationed in Camp Hood, Texas.

Dear Mrs. Hammett:

I have returned from overseas duty in North Africa where I had the extreme pleasure of being immediate officer over your son, Maurice. I have received several letters from him since my return to the States and thought I would take the privilege of writing you to let you know he was well and in the spirit of his last news from him. Maurice was a member of my platoon in Ireland, England and during the entire campaign in North Africa and I would like you to know he was an excellent soldier and one of my favorite men. I like to think of him as a close friend than just a man in my platoon, we were quite close to one another and learned to know each other real well. He was always to be relied on, good natured, cheerful and superior in all his duties as a soldier. You may well be proud of him, his performances have been a credit to the army. I know that he will continue his splendid record as long as he is in the service. I would like to assure you that the unit with which Maurice is now working in is a splendid group, grand officers and real men, they have been tried by battles and found superior in action. There is no doubt in my mind that they shall succeed where ever they are.

I trust it won't be long until we shall welcome them home. I last heard from Maurice yesterday and his letter was very cheerful and stated that he was feeling fine and I thought you might like to know this, I last saw him on July 9th, and he was also well at that time. He asked me then if I were ever near his home to try and stop by long enough to give you his love and regards, unfortunately duty has forced me to remain in Texas but I did want you to know he is getting along fine and I hope I won't be long until he will be home recounting his experience. I am stationed at T. D. School at the time and if there are any questions I might answer or anything I can do to let of stress on you please feel free to let me know, the pleasure will be all mine. Perhaps sometime I may be able to have the pleasure of making your visit, and I do hope that Maurice will be with you on that occasion.

I hope I haven't taken too much privilege in writing to you and hope I have been of service to you. There is little I wouldn't do for Maurice and I think of him always as a swell friend and a fine soldier.

Sincerely yours,
Capt. Marvin H. Smith

Retonga Is Grand Says Practical Nurse

Distress From Nervous Indigestion, Sluggish Elimination, And Sleeplessness Promptly Relieved And She Feels Fine Now, States Mrs. Hutchinson. Tells Of Her Own Case.

Among the thousands of well known men and women happily praising Retonga is Mrs. Margaret Hutchinson, 353 E. Oak Hill Ave., member of the Oakwood Baptist Church, and the Rebecca Lodge.

Mrs. Hutchinson happily states: "I suffered so much distress from nervous indigestion that even a light meal would bother me for hours with sourness and gas pains in my stomach. My appetite seemed completely gone, and my nerves were so badly on edge that many nights I slept only an hour or two. Constipation forced me to use powerful laxatives almost every day, and even then my head would swim at times until I had to sit down."

"I think the relief Retonga gave me is simply remarkable. The distress from indigestion, nervousness, and constipation are relieved, and I feel like a different person. I never miss an opportunity to give Retonga the praise it deserves. It is grand."

Retonga is intended to relieve such distress when due to Vitamin B-1 deficiency, constipation, insufficient flow of gastric juices in the stomach, and loss of appetite. Retonga may be obtained at DeMyer Drug Store. (adv.)

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

How to make the packed lunch appetizing from day to day is a lesson homemakers continue to study. Planning that meal when the regular family meals are considered is the best scheme, in the opinion of Miss Florence Im-lay, foods specialist at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Then all may be built around the basic-seven foods which are necessary for good health.

A lunch pattern makes the daily task easier. It should include milk served in its natural form, or as cocoa or soup; bread of enriched or wholewheat flour, usually made into sandwiches with cheese, eggs, fish, meat, poultry, or peanut butter; a cooked or raw vegetable or fruit, and a simple dessert.

One food to be served hot, which may be soup, cocoa or a creamed or scalloped vegetable, should be arranged for, if possible. In many schools where a prepared hot lunch is not served, foods carried from home are easily reheated by setting the containers in hot water for a half hour.

School lunch menu: Ham and egg sandwich, carrot sticks, peanut butter cookies, milk and apple.

Peanut Butter Cookies

- 1 c. peanut butter
- 1 c. sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 c. sifted flour
- 3 tsp. baking powder
- 1-2 tsp. salt
- 1 c. milk

Mix the sugar, peanut butter and well beaten eggs. Sift together the dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk to the first mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased baking sheet about an inch apart. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, about 15 minutes, or until lightly browned.

THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE

By Ruth Taylor

What is the American way of life?

We have used the phrase so frequently that sometimes it seems a trifle threadbare at the corners, its lustre dulled by familiarity. Our public speakers—particularly at campaign time—act as though it were an "abracadabra" or magic word that could unlock hidden troves of treasure.

Of course you know the full meaning of the phrase but have you ever tried to explain the American way of life to someone who did not know America, who was not steeped in the traditions of democracy?

I have—and let me assure you it is no easy task. But it does make you stop and think what you really mean by the American way of life. Here is what I found I meant by the phrase.

The American way of life is the way of opportunity for all. It does not mean an equal distribution of all good things, but an equal chance to work for a living at a fair wage. It means free enterprise—free to develop, but not unbridled license to exploit either man or natural resources. It means an equal opportunity to learn, not an equal ability to get ahead without work.

The American way of life is the way of self-restrained freedom. Under it we may freely express our own opinion—but we abide by the decision of the majority. The American way of life implies a decent respect for the beliefs of others, whether or not we agree with them. Under it freedom is permitted up to the point where it impinges upon the rights of others.

The American way of life is the way to progress through the utilization of every resource—not merely the natural ones of the earth, but of that greatest resource of our nation—the intelligence, the initiative, the productive power latent in every individual, regardless of class, creed or color.

The American way of life is the way to the rainbow's end, to the fulfillment of the dream of brotherhood. We Americans may have different faiths, different backgrounds, different speech, different color. We have the same way of work, the same way of life. We know the same sorrows, joys and hopes. The American way of life is the way by which we may achieve the desire of all for a world untroubled by war, untroubled by want or fear.

The American way of life is OUR way. Let us walk in it for centuries to come, its road made steadily smoother by the patient feet of generation.

Lieut. Clyde Williams, Jr. returned to Fort Bragg, N. C., Monday after spending last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Williams in Fair Heights.

Miss Frances Galbraith has returned from St. Louis, where she attended Market.

Governor Keen Johnson

WHEREAS, pulpwood is vital to the progress of our war against the Axis because of its widespread use in smokeless powder; paperboard containers for shells, food, and ammunition for our fighting forces abroad; blood plasma kits; rayon and paper parachutes; and other materials of war; and

WHEREAS, the present lag in production of pulpwood indicates a shortage of more than 2,500,000 cords under the minimum 13,000,000 cords needed for war and essential civilian requirements for 1943; and

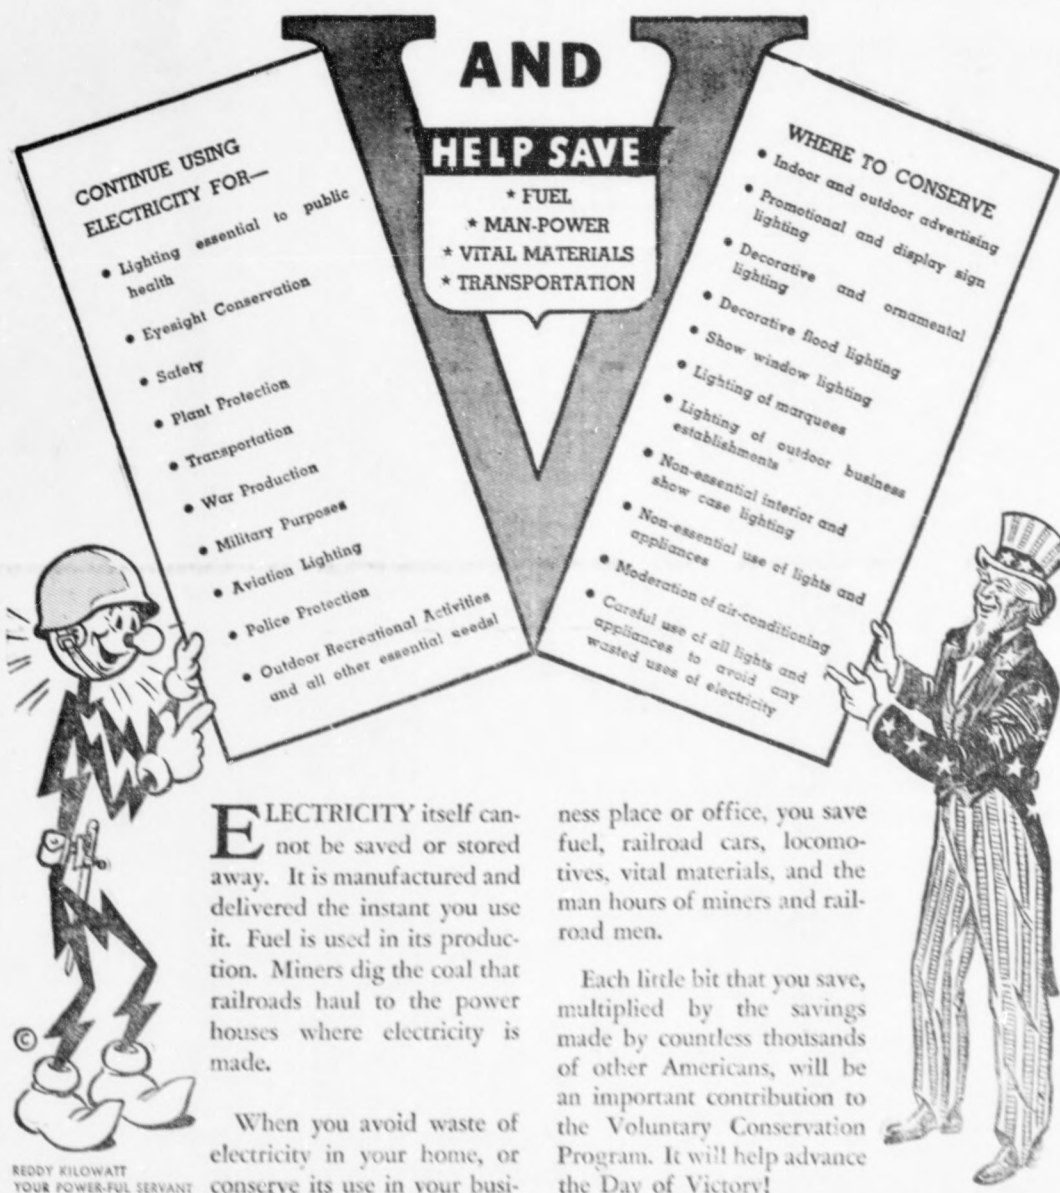

WHEREAS, the Federal Government, through the War Production Board, the Office of Price Administration, the War Manpower Commission, the Agriculture Department, the Office of Defense Transportation, and the Office of War Information, is seriously concerned over this shortage; and

WHEREAS, the newspapers of the Nation again have responded to a patriotic challenge as they did in the scrap metal drive and are devoting their organized efforts to overcoming this pulpwood shortage;

NOW, THEREFORE, as Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, I appeal to all woodland farmers and woodcutters of Kentucky to enlist in the Victory Pulpwood Drive and pledge to devote at least three extra days to cutting pulpwood this Fall, as requested by WPB Chairman, Donald M. Nelson.

Done at Frankfort, Kentucky, this the seventh day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-three and in the year of the Commonwealth the one hundred and fifty-second.

ELECTRICITY itself cannot be saved or stored away. It is manufactured and delivered the instant you use it. Fuel is used in its production. Miners dig the coal that railroads haul to the power houses where electricity is made.

When you avoid waste of electricity in your home, or conserve its use in your business place or office, you save fuel, railroad cars, locomotives, vital materials, and the man hours of miners and railroad men.

Each little bit that you save, multiplied by the savings made by countless thousands of other Americans, will be an important contribution to the Voluntary Conservation Program. It will help advance the Day of Victory!

Up to the end of July, 1943, seven times more money was made available for World War II than was spent for World War I; up to that time more than $323 billion was made available for the present war, against $47 billion estimated spent on the first World War.

Federal real estate holdings are paced at $6,447,407,000, as against an estimated "fair market" value of $4,554,543,000. In other words, the "Book Value" loss on the government's real estate holdings totals $1,892,864,000. Senator Byrd, of Virginia estimates the Government now owns 395,978,724 acres of land, or enough to blanket Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Ohio, Alabama, Illinois and Indiana, with enough dibbles to make 52 Districts of Columbia.

The "cradle-to-the-grave" plan, recently submitted to Congress by the National Resources Planning Board, will cost about $15,097,000,000 annually, a research director of the Insurance Economics Society of America, estimated. Our government is already spending about $4 billion a year on all kinds of social benefits.

The American Farm Bureau Federation declares the Farm Security Administration has spent nearly $1.00 for every $2.00 loaned or given away. From April 8, 1935, to December 31, 1941, it cost the government $275,861,889.27 to operate the F. S. A. and its predecessors.

sor agencies in order to make loans and grants totaling $714,092,031.52.

A study of the above figures will give you a clearer picture of what is happening in our government. These are but a few of examples of the many departments and bureaus, all of which have stupendous costs of administration. Is it any wonder that there is a cry for a reduction in unnecessary governmental expenses? There must be some real, constructive legislation and action by the duly elected representatives of the people, before our tax burdens, and the unlimited restraints upon the natural progress of our nation, can hope to be reduced. The voice of the people must be lifted, from every corner of the land, or we are surely headed for more serious trouble on the home front. Regimentation and bureaucracy are suppressing the real principles of democracy here at home, while our boys are abroad to fight for these self-same liberties. Far too many of our leaders are playing politics, with the war as an excuse for fostering undesirable laws upon the people. Social reforms are more beneficial to the political powers than they are to the common people. Power, greed and graft are foremost in the minds of many, when earnest, devoted and sacred efforts for the "forgotten man" are neglected, or merely used in high-flowered words as a means to gain and end—more power.

A recent advertisement shows the picture of a wife plowing in 1777, while her husband was away fighting for their country's independence. This advertisement stressed the building up of certain financial reserves, as a means of gaining "Freedom from the ugliest fear of all—want."

"Freedom from fear" and "freedom from want" as they are generally presented to our people today, seem to be based entirely on material things, as if easy living and a full stomach were the principal guarantees which we should worry about.

The right to be independent and free of domination by any government, any king, or any bureaucracy, is what the 1777 woman and her husband were fighting for. A full stomach or financial security were the least of their fears.

There still remains doubts in our minds about this price-fixing idea that our government is trying to manipulate. In effect it says to the business world that the only "scientific" way of fixing prices is by combination of producers and distributors working under government permission. Price-fixing laws are passed upon a false assumption that the way to "stabilize" an industry is to stabilize its prices—cut out price competition.

Private enterprise these days is watching the government with much concern—and properly so. It sees all the dangerous tendencies of governmental control slowly being developed by the associated Messiahs in Washington. If business, and the people, want to stay free of Federal interference after the war, it should steer away from all Federal findings in the forms of laws which permit price fixing and other such illusory aids. This price-fixing business is slowing up production, setting up inequalities in wages and earnings, and causing disturbances and strikes on the labor front. In many instances it is driving small businesses to the wall, drying up sources of taxation, and setting precedents that break all our honest to goodness democratic principles of government.

These theists and social reformers in Washington do not even agree among themselves as to just what type of government they want. The only thing they can agree upon is that the ideals and doctrines handed down to us by our forefathers are outmoded and should be swept aside, Roane Waring, National Commander of the American Legion, very aptly stated it.

CRUTCHFIELD, R. 2

Mrs. Hub Lowry and Mrs. Ruth Lomax visited Mrs. George Ferguson Monday.

Mrs. Clyde Corum visited Mrs. Arch Johnson Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Jim Williamson and Mrs. Les Hill entertained with a shower for Mrs. Herschel Williamson Tuesday afternoon. Twelve women played games and enjoyed delicious refreshments. They were: Mrs. Walter Corum, Mrs. Russell Taylor, Mrs. Mag Taylor, Miss Jo Taylor, Mrs. Ruth Lomax, Mrs. Viola Goodwin, Mrs. Jack Woodson, Mrs. Les Hill of Mayfield, Mrs. Albin Morrow, Mrs. Elvin Morrow, Mrs. John Stone, Mrs. Herschel Williamson and Mrs. Jim Williamson. Mrs. Fannie Johnson fell at Cayce one day last week and fractured her hip. At present she is getting along very well.

Manuel O'Rear has been moving some furniture back to Hickman.

Mrs. Kelly V. Rose and daughter Martha Ann, have moved to Mrs. Connie Goodwin's near Fulton. Mr. Rose remained down south for a while longer. Mrs. Rose now has employment in Fulton.

Mrs. Thurman Goodwin works in Clinton on Saturdays. Mr. and Mrs. Albin Harper and son have returned from Detroit and have rented the Byar's place near Mt. Carmel Church. Mrs. Harper will teach at Western the remainder of this school.

Mrs. Cliff Wade (nee Lizzie Mae Corum) has been in the hospital suffering with neuritis.

Mrs. William James Stroud and baby David spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lomax and Bobby.

Mr. Bob Alexander spent Sunday in Cayce.

Mrs. Ruth Lomax and Mrs. George Ferguson attended the annual homemakers meeting in Hickman Wednesday. Seventy homemakers from Fulton county answered the roll call, with three visitors present. The high-lights of the day were the talks made by Miss Monroe and Mr. Garner. The fine spirit of the leaders and the splendid reports they gave were a credit to our organization. The nice meal prepared by the Missionary Society of the Christian Church was appreciated by all present. Special music by Mrs. Margaret Clack and Mrs. Margaret Luten was very enjoyable. The greeting given by Mrs. Allen Hines, district chairman of home-makers was one to be remembered. Mrs. Hines thinks that anyone can belong to the homemakers that want too. The reports given by our agents, Mrs. Thompson and Miss Sullivan were nice. Mrs. Thompson stressed the point on being prepared for your club meeting. You should not go to school without your lessons. You must have your reports written and ready to hand in. In the past year we have reached more families than all the years put together in the 8 years Mrs. Thompson has been here. As there are 218 members of the clubs it will be an easy job for all families to be contacted if we all work. The colored agent, Gladys Shields gave a very fine report. She has reached all the families except 39 and is doing lots of 4-H work. Fulton County is proud of her. There being 1600 colored families in the county this has been no small job. In the election of officers, Mrs. J. C. Lawson was re-elected as president, Mrs. Harvey Bondurant as vice-president, a new secretary and treasurer, Mrs. A. J. Lowe was elected, with new leaders for the ensuing year. I felt every woman left feeling very proud she belongs to this mass army to willing, faithful, conscientious workers of the home front as long as we have such leaders our community will grow and grow.

Robert Bellew came home for the week end. This was a delightful treat to his aged mother.

A thought: Remember no man ever became good or great, with many grave mistakes.

Silo Simpkins Says

To fly the flag of freedom, buy War Bonds and Stamps.

There should be no "laying-by" time in the hen house.

We ought to plan a live-at-home program for farm animals, also.

An unnecessary mile of walking while doing farm chores takes about 15 minutes or nine 10-hour working days each year.

Carefully cull hens at housing time. Destroy all sick birds and market undeveloped ones, thus improving flock health and conserve meat, feed, labor and floor space.

Tests at the U-T Agricultural Experiment Station showed that net acre returns from feeding corn silage to cattle were three times those from feeding shock or ear corn.

Ten lives are lost in farm fires every day in the United States and a farm building catches fire every 15 minutes. For pointers on farm fire prevention, ask your county agent for a copy of Publication No. 269 "Prevent Farm Fires."

Squirrels put up nuts for winter, bees seal surplus honey in beeswax for use when no flowers are in bloom, even the dogs bury bones for future use—so it is indeed an unthrifty farmer who makes no provision for his family food needs by adequate storage facilities.

Alfalfa hay is one-third as rich in protein as cottonseed meal. Cows fed all the good quality legume hay they want will milk well on a small amount of grain ration. The concentrate mixture may contain as little as 100 pounds cottonseed meal or soybean meal to 500 pounds of corn and oats.
