WAKE UP, KENTUCKY!

The recent census report shows that the population of Kentucky has declined 10.1 percent in the last three years.

Obviously, this fact, together with the least state to which old-timers in Kentucky before the war call for the question to be asked all interested: "Where is Kentucky's plan for the future?" and what solution is there to be found to enable small business not only to subsist but throughout the nation be properly financed after the war?

The industrialization of Kentucky shows only clearly that centralization of power as evidenced by big business and large corporations is a great deterrent to private initiative and the only way that private initiative can be realized is through decentralization of power where possible, either political or corporate. The present federal government and the General Assembly should enact the bill now before it for the formation of a War Planning Commission. Only when are without such an organization, one being Kentucky and Kentucky probably needs such an organization more than any state in the nation.

The postwar economy, to function properly, must solve the problem of the development and financing of small and middle-sized businesses. Arrangements must be made to raise large amounts of new equity capital for all types and sizes of private enterprises. There is no reason why Kentucky need lag a year or more behind Connecticut in this one.

All private agencies, the commonwealth, cities and towns, must find a solution if we are to attain a dynamic, decentralizing and not carry out our pledge to make opportunities available for men who are no longer looking for those of us who are attempting to carry on along the home front. We have pledged ourselves to the North, to the West while we are at least the least we can do is hand back to them the type of economy they left behind, revitalize with enough�� conception for the future opportunities in this State and nation.

If we do not find the answer to this problem and make business an engine of growth to turn to government by bureaucracy and "statism" again as is being done presently in the Federal government, we are in danger of leaving an industrial vacuum, a void in the economic life of the state of Illinois.

The only solution is decentralization or at least a slight decentralization of the power of the national government in industry, particularly in the South. All producers and consumers of the world to get new industry to come into the state will be impossible if the present system continues in postwar era.

Big business has had every chance already during the last twelve years of the New Deal, and especially during the war period. While this has not been allotted 70 percent of war production to firms employing fifty workers or less.

Small business and the small business man--this includes the small farmer--should get a break. Small producers have not received the incorporated first for the mixture of necessary civil goods. This would partially overcome the obstacles of many years which big business received from both the Republican and the Democratic Parties.

The philosophy of government in postwar planning must be favorable to the American way of life. Federal government must be streamlined, expenditures and regulations must be reduced to a minimum. Agencies which have been built on years of depression must be abolished. Bureaucratic agencies which are a part of the Nation of both financial solidity and surplus of manpower must be eliminated. The national economy must begin now--not after the war. We must break the monopoly power of industry, create new outlets.

There is no place for monopoly either in politics or in economy.

What we need is a vast expansion of production and each individual a part of the new economic order. If this does not occur, the armed forces will be detached individually and individually. In the rest of the world, W. F. A. debt may platly, private enterprises will wither, and we shall be dominated and the proceeds of the key system we went to war to defeat.

The conviction of Kentuckians is fighting all over the world. Others are working at home, with a durable peace and preserve and love the American way of life. Most of the boys want the opportunity to come home and start a small business or enterprise of their own, or go into some profession, or build a nursery farm, or be their own boss as long as possible; fight their own economic battle and set their own course on the economic path.

Let us make certain that our sacrifices which have been and are being made by all Americans, are not in vain. Plans should not only be ready for the economic development of the peacetime era, but they should actually be in operation when wars have ceased.

Wake up, Kentucky! There's a lot of work to be done, and much depends upon what we do today!

The Ten Commandments will not come home and start a small business or enterprise of their own, or go into some profession, or build a nursery farm, or be their own boss as long as possible; fight their own economic battle and set their own course on the economic path.

Let us make certain that our sacrifices which have been and are being made by all Americans, are not in vain. Plans should not only be ready for the economic development of the peacetime era, but they should actually be in operation when wars have ceased.

Wake up, Kentucky! There's a lot of work to be done, and much depends upon what we do today!

Stop, Look and Listen

The design patented to prevent merely which is at stake in the issue of the American way of life. The United States government to maintain the national parks and national monuments as a part of the national heritage and the commonwealth of Kentucky by major national park to be constructed in the Bluegrass State.

Where is Kentucky's plan for the future, and what solution is there to be found to enable small business not only in Kentucky but throughout the nation to be properly financed after the war?

GIVE THE BOYS A FIRST CHANCE AT LONG DISTANCE

It means a lot to where the speeder will be placed in the race and how he will be run. It is the enervating thing to do. In running a speeder, the driver should be careful in selecting a horse that will give the right kind of speed. He should always be careful in selecting a horse that will give the right kind of speed. If the horse is too fast, it will be difficult to control. If it is too slow, it will be difficult to overtake. The best solution is to have a horse that will give the right kind of speed.

CAYCE SCHOOL

The Freshman Home Economics class of eleven students had a most enjoyable year. The class, under the supervision of Mrs. L. M. Branson, was divided into two sections, each with a teacher. The following program was carried out:

1. Cooking for a family of four.
2. Sewing for a family of four.
3. Stove cleaning for a family of four.
4. Kitchen equipment for a family of four.
5. Flint bottles for a family of four.

The class then took a field trip to the State Fair, where they saw many interesting exhibits. The trip was a great success, and the students returned with a greater appreciation of the work of home economists.

While in the class, the students learned how to make a variety of foods, including pies, cakes, and cookies. They also learned how to care for the home, including the care of the kitchen, and the care of the garden. The students were given an opportunity to practice their skills in the kitchen, and they were able to see the results of their work. The class was very successful, and the students were very satisfied with their work.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"We, therefore, being surrounded with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us: looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be weary and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, flowing out of the way of righteousness." (Hebrews 12:1-3.)

Public Sentiment Supported the Passage of the 1932 Act

The Lincoln-Jackson Act, 1932, was passed, not as a step in increasing the limitations on weight and size of trucks, but as a step in reducing the limitations upon weight and size of trucks, together with an increase of the national highway system. The provisions of the Act are as follows:

1. Truckers' Weight Limitation: The Act of March 4, 1944, provides for the limitation of weights and sizes of trucks, together with the provision that the limitation on weights shall be increased from 5,000 pounds to 6,000 pounds, and the limitation on sizes shall be increased from 36 inches to 42 inches.

2. Highway System: The Act of March 4, 1944, provides for the construction of a national highway system, consisting of a network of roads, including the present state highways, together with an increase of the national highway system.

3. Funding: The Act of March 4, 1944, provides for the funding of the national highway system, together with an increase of the national highway system.
