John Howard Killed In Car Wreck Monday

John Moon Howard, 20 years of age, well-known young man living east of here, was instantly killed about five o'clock Monday afternoon when the car he was driving collided with a Swift and Company truck from the Fulton Plant. The accident occurred a mile and one-half from Mayfield on the Mayfield-Murray highway. Young Howard was alone in his car, while the truck was occupied by John Guy Atkins, Jodie Tanner, and Ollen Williams, all of here. These three suffered minor injuries. Williams had a knee injury and the other two had cuts and bruises. The truck and car were practically demolished.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at four-thirty o'clock at the First Methodist Church, with Rev. Walter E. Mischke conducting the services. Interment was at the Boaz Chapel cemetery with Hornbeak Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lola Moon Howard, his father, Clyde B. Howard, of Frankfort. Other survivors are his uncles, Gilbert, Buzh, Martin Moon, and Guy Howard of Memphis, and an aunt, Mrs. John Hicks of Water Valley.

Young Howard was born near Fulton, on August 30, 1923. He attended local schools and graduated from Battle Ground Academy, Franklin, Tenn., a few years ago. Recently he attended the University of Tennessee Junior College at Martin, and had been engaged in farming near the city recently. He made his home with his mother.

Easter Prayers

MULTITUDINOUS are the words of prayer which will reach heavenward this Easter. Each of us will say a prayer apart—for the safety of a loved one in battle—for the return of a son, or brother, or husband now in an enemy's prison camp—for the healing of a wounded dear one. Yet together, we shall say one prayer for lasting peace following the United Nations' complete Victory. And we shall find our greatest faith—particularly those of us whom the war has already bereft—in recalling His resurrection, for whom this day is reborn each year!

Funds Sought For Country Club Here

The annual campaign for funds for the Fulton Country Club is being conducted this week.

The club must have support of people who are not solely interested in golf, because so many of the members have been called into the armed forces.

Membership this year will probably be smaller than ever before, and there will be few young people as members.

The Country Club offers the only gathering place for picnics and similar affairs which is nearby and which has ample conveniences for such gatherings.

WHO IS DELINQUENT?

By RUTH TAYLOR

Today, wherever we turn, we find the problem of juvenile delinquency staring us in the face. We are deeply stirred by the attacks of hoodlums in our big cities. But—we can't pass off hoodlumism as JUST the acts of children.

Children are not born with a sense of right or wrong. It is the family that has the first chance to civilize the child. The kind of behavior a child displays depends upon the kind of adults after whom he has patterned himself.

The other day I was talking with a truant officer. He said, "There aren't any bad children, but there are a great many bad parents. They are lazy and neglectful. They don't realize that sending a child to school isn't enough."

Lack of religious and ethical training is one of the greatest factors in juvenile delinquency. If a child has no standards by which to grow, he is groping in the dark. If he learns it is smart to dodge the law, that the only sin is getting caught, he is on the road to crime.

It isn't the child alone that is delinquent. It is the parents who stand convicted before the bar of public opinion.

It isn't just a wave of delinquency among children that is sweeping the country and causing so much trouble. It is a wave of delinquency among parents. Let's do something about the delinquent parents—and juvenile delinquency will take care of itself!

A WORLD FULL OF GOOD NEIGHBORS

The scheme to extend the Latin-American "good neighbor policy" to other countries of the world has reached the point where Congressman Bloom of New York has introduced a measure to authorize the President to develop and maintain "such cultural cooperative program of other countries of the world as he may consider justified in furtherance of the purposes of the United States in the present war and in the peace to follow."

MANPOWER

There is a shortage of manpower on the railroads, in private business establishments of all kind, and on farms and in factories. Production of synthetic rubber is slowed down. Statements that say that very little has been done to cut into the "soft cushion" of civilian life here at home are not supported by facts.

CONGRESS AND PRESIDENT

When Congress defeated the President's tax bill veto there was a good deal of rejoicing over the claim that the legislative branch of the Government had reclaimed its "independence." Now the trouble is that Congress is running into complications because it was so free with its checks on grants of authority to the President that when many questions are brought up the Congress discovers that it passed "this and that" law which transferred wholesale legislative powers to the President.

for the past decade. And here is where I undoubtedly will be castigated by my Socialist friends. It is my bounden conviction that they are impelling the two old-line parties to streamline and modernize themselves, and in so doing the Socialists are removing any necessity of the general public climbing on their "bandwagon" in order to obtain reasonable and practical reforms, minus the blight of political domination.

As a concrete example of how the fleas irritate to action, take the proposed Wagner-Murray-Dingle bill to socialize the practice of medicine and hospitalization. Repeatedly in this column I have stated that this is a vicious, un-American proposal, and that I have every confidence that Congress will overwhelmingly reject it.

Then came the threat of the Wagner-Murray-Dingle bill and the medicos were jostled out of their lethargy. The fleas have so itched the American Medical Association as to galvanize it into action. It is bestirring itself to combat this bill. And how is it doing so? It is proposing nothing more or less than physicians and hospitals themselves voluntarily set up the machinery for extending installment plans for services rendered which would bring about the principal reason for the passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingle bill might accomplish.

For this improvement, the Socialistic planners, those fleas on the body politic, will be entitled to the lion's share of the credit, which in the final analysis, would seem to prove that my old philosopher friend knew his fleas when he said: "A reasonable number of fleas are good for a pup."

THE COMMON DEFENSE

By William Agar, Executive Vice-President of Freedom House, Inc. There can no longer be any doubt that we shall ultimately win a military victory. But that can only be a beginning. Peace can only come as the reward for duties performed; for responsibilities assumed and fulfilled. Our fighters can gain us the opportunity. We must accept unreservedly the tasks that opportunity will impose.

THE LEAST WE CAN DO

Nothing less will be good enough. Men's souls are tried by conflict as well as their bodies, and become tired. The desire to relax and nostalgia for what was before softens men's wills. Yet we dare not relax. The old world we knew bred war. And in the face of every urge towards "normalcy" we must assure our fighters a better America—one aware at last of her responsibilities abroad and more true to her principles at home.

PASTURES PAY DIVIDENDS IN RAISING PULLETS

Identical flocks were raised on bare ranges, and on ranges seeded to spring oats, a ryegrass-lespedeza mixture, and alfalfa. From both pasture and pullet - production standpoint, alfalfa made the most desirable range. In short, it was proved that it is good practice to provide growing chicks with pasture—any kind of pasture being better than a bare lot.

PASTURES PAY DIVIDENDS IN RAISING PULLETS

A mixture of ryegrass and lespedeza also was satisfactory as poultry pasture. Spring oats, because they remain in a succulent stage for only a short period, are not recommended to be sown alone; they require lespedeza or some other crop to provide late-summer and fall grazing.

CONGRESS AND PRESIDENT

Let us recognize the beauty and power of true enthusiasm; and whatever we may do to enlighten ourselves or others, guard against checking or chilling a single earnest sentiment.—Tuckerman. There is a confidence necessary to human intercourse, and without which men are often more injured by their own suspicions, than they could be by the perfidy of others.—Burke.

hurts those subjected to it and it corrupts those responsible for it—the majority. Thus the so-called Jewish problem is really a Christian problem, and the Negro problem becomes a question of how the white majority will behave.

If we fail to solve these things justly a light will go out, a hope which we fostered in the hearts of men will turn to despair. We fight to replace unrestricted force by justice under law. But, if racism and prejudice rule our minds; if those to whom economic power grants privilege turn a deaf ear to the rights and needs of others there is no mark left which can distinguish victor from vanquished.

Thus our duty at home is clear. Its demands are inexorable. We shall give a new birth to democracy by living what we believe, or our ideal will perish and we shall lose the war even after victory. We owe it to our fighting men that their sacrifice shall bear fruit. It is the least we can do.

Worse than running a good thing into the ground, is running farming into the subsoil by failure to provide adequate cover crops and conservation measures.

Don't reduce hog numbers too drastically, even though the feed prospect isn't extremely bright, experts advise, because the outlook is for a continuing strong consumer demand for pork during the next few years.

Weight for weight, white potatoes have one-fourth as much vitamin C as oranges or lemons, one-half as much as tomatoes, and supply some vitamin A, Thiamine, and Riboflavin. They are also a good source of phosphorus and iron.

The most effective material for controlling cattle lice is a mixture of derris powder and sulfur containing one-half of one percent pure Rotenone. Shake it on the animal and rub into the hair with a brush or by stroking the hair opposite from the way it grows.

Ammonium Nitrate fertilizer, diverted from surpluses of munitions manufacture at the Muscle Shoals Plant of the TVA, proved to have another valuable wartime usage in increasing the yields of essential foods when placed with unit-test demonstration farmers in Tennessee for trial last summer.

"THOU SHALT NOT COVET"

When I was a boy, I kept the Ten Commandments pretty well, so that I was regarded by the neighbors as a good boy. If they had only known how I violated one of the ten each day of my life, I fear I would have lost my local standing as a model youngster. The last commandment of all has always tried me sorely, "Thou shalt not covet."

Please do not misunderstand me. The literal-minded could not possibly have found fault with me, for not a single phrase of the whole commandment actually applied to me. I certainly did not want my neighbor's ox, nor his ass, nor his wife, nor his manservant, nor his maid-servant, nor his house. The only things I coveted might be covered by the phrase "nor anything that is thy neighbor's." It was not especially anything that could be bought or sold or received as a gift or stolen. But I coveted immaterial things, some of which my neighbors had and some not tangible enough to name.

Since I was a semi-cripple as a child, with a crooked back, I envied daily the boys who could stand on their heads and skin cats and turn cartwheels and walk on their hands. I envied the dare-devils who could walk to the comb of the tallest roof in the community. I wanted to be the boy who could carry a corner at a barn-raising. I envied to the point of sinning the fellow who cut "binds" at wheat-threshing. And I would have given a small mortgage on my chance for eternal happiness to be able to perform on the acting pole at school and to swing out on a tree limb over the swimming hole in the creek and dive like a regular feller. You need not imagine that I ever let the fellows know that I wanted to do these things and was afraid or too weak. I suffered enough ribbing for being a weakling without subjecting myself deliberately to horse-laughter.

Aside from physical prowess I most coveted prominence. I wanted to be an orator and move the crowds as the candidates did when they spoke at Fidelity union church or at the Fourth of July picnic at Sulphur Springs. I got a little of this covetousness satisfied by being called on to speak at Confederate reunions and at exhibitions at the close of school and at Children's day at the local Methodist church.

But these things were memorized; anybody could do them who had big lungs and a fair amount of memory. I wanted to make up my own speech and sway the multitude. Just what I was to orate about I never exactly decided; I doubt whether I even thought one had to have a subject. Life has given me abundant opportunity to speak; I must have attempted several thousands addresses, on every conceivable occasion. But long before I became a public speaker, I lost my desire to orate and have contented myself with a plain, conversational type of talk that differs considerably from the one I hoped to excel in. Probably I still sometimes dream of using the powers that I had practiced before imaginary audiences in the bend of the creek as I overmed and suckered my tobacco, "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife."

I envy, and am afraid I always shall, the musician of whatever sort. We had a few musical instruments at Fidelity; I never saw an upright piano until after I had left the old community. But I have never seen any musical instruments yet that I would not like to know how to play. My piano playing, like my typewriting, is largely a matter of two fingers, but my soul uses all ten fingers and millions more that no musical notation can record. Every time I see a musician of note—and life has been good to me in bringing many into my little world—I want to get up and show him just how he could improve his style. Of course, I do not know A about his technique and am so sure of making a fool of myself if I offered any suggestion that I just play his instrument in an invisible way and get from it sounds that no earthly ear can hear or translate. I shut my eyes and imagine myself bringing strains of unearthly beauty from Fritz Kreisler's violin or Rachmaninoff's piano or out-Tidbitting Lawrence Tibbitt or Lauritz Melchior or John Charles Thomas. Who wants his neighbor's property, anyway, but how I envy his accomplishments in spheres where, if things had been different, I might have been more versatile.

NEW TYPE OF FERTILIZER TO BE USED IN COUNTY

A new type of nitrogen fertilizer, amonia of nitrate, will be used for the first time on many farms this year, according to J. H. Miller, county agent. It is fertilizer containing 32 1/2 per cent of nitrate which is twice the amount in nitrate of soda. At present it is the cheapest commercial source of fertilizer of nitrogen. Like other nitrogenous fertilizers it stimulates the growth. Under average seasonal conditions where phosphorus and potash are limiting factors and where properly applied, 100 pounds of amonia nitrate may be expected to increase the yield of corn from 10 to 15 bushels per acre. A liberal response may be expected from an early spring application on small grains, meadows, and pastures. With the low cost of this nitrogen and the high price of most farm crops it may be a good farm practice to use nitrogen on some of the most important crops. It can be used as a top dressing on small grains and pastures and also as a side dressing for row crops. It may be broadcast and plowed under or disced or harrowed into the soil. The usual rate of applications depends upon several factors including the kind of crop to be grown, relative need for nitrogen, and the kind and amount of other fertilizers to be used. Generally speaking, applications of 60 to 100 pounds per acre on small and sod crops and 100 to 200 pounds on row crops should produce profitable increases. Nitrogen fertilizers would not be recommended on legume crops. The price of amonia of nitrate produced in the United States is about $60 per ton with some variations due to the difference in freight rates. Most fertilizer dealers will handle amonia nitrate. If it can be found at your local dealer's, please contact the county agent.

There Were Great Men In Those Days

Bill Webster buttonholed me on Elm Street yesterday and he had a cute grin on his face. "Joe," he said, "answer me this. What great man was born 201 years ago next week Thursday?" "I admit that stopped me. Next week Thursday? Let's see..." "I'll give you a clue, Joe," Bill said. "He drew up one of the most important documents in American history."

liberty and the pursuit of happiness?"—remember? "Yes, Bill," I said. "Those words of Jefferson are so old they're right up to date again!" From where I sit, we at home ought to do everything within our power to preserve the liberties for which our boys are now fighting. Such liberties as speaking their own minds, choosing their own vocations. The right to enjoy a moderate glass of beer, if they want it.

You Can't Eat Ration Stamps

Food habits of a nation may be changed gradually by education. They can be changed suddenly only by force or by real starvation. This country has housed the best fed people in the world. It is understandable that sudden changes in their diet would cause more consternation than would a similar upset in a less favored land.

A bright spot in our food picture is our stocks of wheat. However, our present policy is to encourage the feeding of wheat to maintain the production of livestock. This is an expensive and shortsighted policy.

Rehabilitation will make heavy demands on our stocks of all foods, and will depend particularly upon wheat, the staff of life.

Sooner or later the nation will be forced to choose among grain for rubber, grain for alcohol, grain for livestock, grain for Lend-Lease, and grain for civilian consumption. There will not be enough to go around.

Food consumption is a compromise between what we can afford, what we like, and what we ought to have, in about that order.

A certain amount of food is essential. On the other hand, there are rather definite upper limits to the amount of food that can be eaten. The human stomach holds about three pints, and food moves through the alimentary canal at the rate of about six inches per hour. An effort to overload the stomach results merely in indigestion.

Difference in Diets

The difference between the diet of the poor and the diet of the wealthy is more in the type of food eaten than in the amount. The wealthy consume large amounts of expensive, out-of-season types of food. The poor on the other hand, eat staple foods in season. Both fill their stomachs, the poor with many calories and little water; the rich with few calories and much water. The so-called rich eat their water, and the so-called poor drink it. These differences have given rise to much concern regarding the adequacy of the poor man's diet. It is undoubtedly more adequate than attractive.

The Main Liners of Philadelphia and the Gold Coasters of Chicago have no politicians to sponsor their food problem. Their problem is quite different, and in a certain sense more serious than that of the poor. They wish that they had stomachs lined with zinc so they could eat hot dogs, greasy fried potatoes, pancakes and sausages in the quantities and with the zest of the downtrodden third.

What Is Adequate Diet?

A farmer once defined a fair price as one which was ten per cent higher than he could get. Similarly, an adequate diet probably is ten per cent better than that which one now receives.

Various minimum requirements have been proposed by nutritionists and dietitians. For some thousands of years, however, the Chinese have been living and breeding on a food level substantially below the "nutritional minimum."

Americans are the best-fed people in the world. From this, one might conclude that the quality of our food could be much reduced in the war emergency. Biologically this is true, but politically it is difficult. The food habits of the nation have become so well established that any reduction is considered a privation.

We Imported Food

For about two decades the nation has been eating about two to four per cent more food than it has produced. Although this experience would seem to make it difficult to expand food exports, the nation has now embarked upon a policy of supplying food not only to our military forces and our civilian population, but also to our allies and for the rehabilitation of depressed peoples throughout the world.

There are at least four sources of additional food for Lend-Lease and rehabilitation:

1. Increased production;
2. Present stocks of grain and animals;
3. Reduction in civilian consumption of livestock products with no change in their production;
4. A curtailment in the production of livestock.

On July 1, 1943, the United States had about 500 million bushels of wheat in excess of normal stocks. This supply would feed the equivalent of about 40 million people on wheat alone for one year. After these stocks had been exhausted, there of course could be no further contribution from this source.

Could Lower Standards

The United States can feed people by reducing its standards of living. This is the method currently followed. If the American people reduce their consumption of the highly prized foods, meats, milk and eggs, by ten per cent and substitute grain—the nation could feed about 3 million more people each year for about fourteen years, until the shift from livestock products to grain would deplete our stocks of excess wheat.

If livestock production were decreased ten per cent, the nation could feed about 17 million additional mouths, and this could be continued year after year. Such a stretching of the food supply would be due to the efficiency of consuming cereals directly rather than indirectly in the form of livestock products.

One of Our Luxuries

It takes about seven pounds of dry matter in the form of grain, in addition to hay, forage, and pasture, to produce a pound of dry matter in the form of livestock products. This is a luxury which few nations can afford even in time of peace. War is a time when luxuries are usually curtailed.

Our agricultural policy has been to expand livestock production and stimulate the feeding of wheat. If the nation assumes that there is an overproduction of grain, that crop production will continue at the high levels of 1942, that our Lend-Lease and rehabilitation programs will not expand much, and that the paramount problem is to provide an attractive diet for the few rather than to fill the stomachs of the many, a continuation of our present agricultural policy is justified.

Every great and commanding movement in the annals of the world is the triumph of enthusiasm.—Emerson.

Christian experience teaches faith in the right and disbelief in the wrong. It bids us work the more earnestly in times of persecution, because then our labor is more needed.—Mary Baker Eddy.

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS WAR PROPERTY

One of the major economic problems arising from modern wars—that of disposing of surplus war supplies—has already appeared in a preliminary form, states the Guaranty Trust Company of New York in the current issue of The Guaranty Survey, its monthly review of business and financial conditions in the United States and abroad.

Its appearance, The Survey continues, has drawn the attention of authorities to the vastly greater disposal problem that industry after the war, and has stimulated administrative and legislative efforts to prepare to meet the problem in an orderly and systematic way.

Such plans, of course, must not be allowed to interfere with the paramount task of winning the war; for it appears that the hardest fight of all still lies ahead. Developments have shown, however, that adequate preparation for the handling of the disposal problem must be made in advance. The steps taken now may go far in determining the speed and smoothness of the transition from wartime to peacetime economy and the strength of the foundations on which the post-war industrial structure must be built.

As the war goes on, the disposal problem will increase both in magnitude and in scope. Materials and equipment, instead of being rechanneled into new branches of war industry, will become available for civilian use. Actual military and naval supplies in the possession of the armed services will become surplus. And finally there will remain the most difficult and important problem of all—that of disposing of the huge industrial plants built and owned by the government.

Only a rough idea of the size of the task and the strength of the economic forces, good or evil, that will be created in disposing of surplus war materials can be gained from estimates of the total money value of the property involved. While it is apparently impossible to arrive at a close approximation, the amount of goods of all kinds that will eventually have to be disposed of has been placed by some authorities as high as $65 billion—a sum not far below the entire national income in a fairly prosperous year before the war. The Government's investment in war plants and facilities alone includes about 2,600 establishments valued at approximately $15 billion, and these totals will be even larger before the war is over.

In the face of these complexities and uncertainties, it will be the difficult task of the authorities charged with disposal to redistribute the many types of surplus property at such rates and in such directions as will be the most conducive to two main objectives; first recovery of the largest possible share of the Government's original expenditure; second maximum benefit, or minimum damage, to the general economic fabric of the nation. It is obvious that, if this tremendous problem is to be dealt with successfully, preparations cannot be made too soon.

Preliminary steps in the adoption of some such program should be taken without delay. Government agencies should immediately establish records of their war property, and any such property becoming surplus should be promptly placed under the control of the disposal authority. The whole plan should be administered with a view of the rapid stimulation of postwar employment, the effects on exiting enterprise and the interests of the taxpayers. Equipment and supplies should be made available, as far as practicable, in quantities permitting acquisition by small as well as large concerns—an objective that can be attained only in part, since many of the facilities consist of extremely large units. No class of property should be disposed of, or terms fixed, except after consultation with committees representing the industry or industries most directly affected. Property should be disposed of, as far as possible, through regular trade channels by the industries that originally produced it.

Close adherence to these guiding principles would permit the accomplishment of the difficult task of disposal with a maximum of benefit and a maximum of disturbance to the national economy as a whole. Especially worthy of emphasis in any consideration of the problem is the requirement that industrial facilities be put to peacetime use under private, not public, operation. Only in this way can the transition be effected with the promptness that will be necessary, and with the assurance that the properties will be operated efficiently, economically and with due regard to the ever-changing conditions of demands.

FARM WORK MUST BE MADE TO GO FARTHER

Work, like supplies, must be made to go further if Tennessee farmers are to meet their wartime production goals, remind farm management specialists with the U-T Agricultural Extension Service.

As especial winter-time labor-saving practices, they recommend the following:

Check up on supplies, seeds, fertilizers, lime and repair parts to be needed in spring and summer, and make arrangements for securing them.

Make repairs on machinery building, fences, roads, drains, terraces, watering facilities, pipes, etc. Break land before rush season starts. Apply lime and phosphate to pastures. Remove stumps, rocks, sprouts, etc., from productive land.

Provide equipment for caring for early chicks, pigs and lambs.

Prepare hot beds, cold frames, etc., for early plants.

Consider the possibility of saving labor by renting land which is better suited to cropping than some of your own fields. Some farmers can rent good fields close to their barns.

In making crop plans for this year consideration might also be given to the following suggestions:

Plant silage crops and any other crops requiring lots of hauling as close to the barn as possible.

Do not plant crops too early or before the land has been well prepared.

Plant crops so as to spread the heavy work of cultivation and harvesting over the season.

Plant cultivated crops only on land which will produce well for the labor spent on it.

Confidence is that feeling by which the mind embarks in great and honorable courses with a sure hope and trust in itself.—Cicero.

Man is neither by birth nor disposition a savage, nor of unsocial habits, but only becomes so by indulging in vices contrary to his nature.—Plutarch.

Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood streams free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feeling tired, nervous, all worn out. # WE'LL GROW MORE IN 1944

Say AMERICA'S VICTORY GARDENERS

The pledge of every American who has a gardening plot is to---GROW MORE IN '44! Make it your pledge, too, because now as the war reaches such enormous and critical proportions, in order to hasten Victory, it is most vital that our fighters and our allies have all that they need to eat. By growing a VICTORY GARDEN you assure your family all the healthful nutritious foods it needs too, without depleting the farm production too much for civilian needs.

22,874 MAN-DAYS LOST IN JANUARY BY KENTUCKY STRIKES

Commissioner of Industrial Relations William C. Burrow announced that a total of 22,874 man-days were lost in January and the first few days of February, 1944, because of labor disturbances and strikes throughout State, in comparison to the 3,610 man-days lost in December of 1943.

"The total number of strikes occurring in January was sixteen," Mr. Burrow asserted. "Two of these strikes occurred in manufacturing concerns and an election was held in one of these to determine whether or not the Union should be the bargaining agent."

The remaining 14 strikes occurred in mining operations and may be chiefly attributed to dissension in mines which have membership in two Eastern Kentucky associations, so far as they more than they did as civilians. A fighting force of eight million men would increase our meat requirements by 6 per cent, and our total food requirements by about 2 per cent. By themselves, the soldiers did not create the shortage, though they did contribute to it.

There can be little question that Lend-Lease has been an important cause of the shortage. It would appear that Lend-Lease will take about 10-15 per cent of our 1943 food production. Much of the Lend Lease food exports have been highly prized nutritious animal foods. The nation exported a better diet than it ate. In view of the fact that prior to the outbreak of the war the nation ate more than it produced, such heavy exports would create a real food problem.

OPA Stimulates Consumption
The contention is made that the consumer himself contributed to the shortage by gorging himself on the highly prized foods.

In order to forestall inflation, OPA set low ceiling prices on the highly prized foods. With advancing wages, full employment, low taxes, and little else to buy, increased consumption of the highly prized foods—meat, milk, butter, cheese and eggs—was encouraged.

Since the dawn of recorded prices food has been effectively rationed by price. Low prices encouraged the consumption of articles that were in abundance. Conversely, high prices discourage consumption and therefore rationed supplies when they were short. Under a system of rigid ceiling prices, this simple mechanism does not work.

The consumer asks who ate the little pig that went to market and therefore who was responsible for the shortage. Figuratively, the fornicator got the ham and most of the bacon. The soldier got a good share of the pork chops and a few good roasts. The civilian got a shoulder and some sausage. Part of the meat was hoarded by the government, and part of it is at the bottom of the Atlantic.

SAFETYGRAMS

The National Safety Council has just sent some more figures that will be interesting to record here on the national traffic toll in 1943.

The 1943 traffic toll was the lowest since 1925, when it was 21,900, but despite the wartime restriction in use of motor vehicles, the 1943 mileage total was 84 per cent above the 1925 level. Automobile mileage in 1943 is estimated at 18 per cent below 1942 and 33 per cent below 1941.

Although the record for the year as a whole is favorable, the rising trend of motor vehicle accidents in the last half of 1943 suggests the need for increased attention to traffic safety problems.

Each of us has a definite responsibility to help in the reduction of these accidents. Your bit will help. Your warning to others who are thoughtless in their driving might prevent an accident.

Start today—help reduce this accident toll.

THE BARUCH REPORT

By GEORGE PECK

We have just about reached the peak of our war production program and from here on it is vital that considerable attention be given by the Congress to the conversion problem. This nation must be prepared for that joyous day when the bugle sounds the cessation of hostilities. Plans must be carefully made well in advance if the bridge between war and peacetime operations is to be crossed without a severe depression and widespread unemployment.

The Baruch-Hancock report on war and post-war problems, recently made to the President, has all the earmarks of being a sound reconversion program. If one can pick a flaw in it, that imperfection is as to where the authority is to be vested to carry out the assignments involved. The report covers the ground most thoroughly, providing a clear "blue-print" for a speedy resumption of civilian production just as soon as war contracts are cancelled. It also provides for an orderly, gradual liquidation of the various war agencies as their work tapers off.

Prompt and full payment of war contracts, with adequate protection for Uncle Sam, is recommended, so that the necessary working capital may be released to meet payrolls and to purchase raw materials. Credit needs for the reconversion period are also provided for.

As to post-war taxes, the report suggests that they be sharply reduced from present levels, and that legislation be passed now so that business will know what the rates will be and thus be able to plan for the future.

Useless war materials is to be scrapped while marketable surplus materials are to be disposed of without disrupting trade channels. And believe it or not the proceeds of these sales are to be used to reduce the Federal debt. It suggests that public work plans are to be in readiness, but are to be used only if private enterprise fails to provide the necessary jobs. The authors of the report, while fully aware of the difficulties to be encountered in the reconversion period, believe that private enterprise can handle the assignment if conditions are made favorable for the exercise of private initiative and resourcefulness.

However, the sound recommendations of the Baruch-Hancock report can only be carried out if risk capital or venture money is given every incentive to flow into business channels. The most effective way to accomplish this, will be to overhaul the tax structure, so as allow in the post-war period, profits commensurate with risks involved.

To have any sustained period of prosperity, it is essential that we have a sound Federal fiscal policy. Government expenditures must be kept within reasonable bounds. We must abandon the fallacy that piling up government deficits do not matter because we owe the debt to one another. All the planning of all the experts will be of no avail if we continue the reckless, spend-thrift policies of the past decade.

We have had an artificial boom due to the war—a period of easy profits and unduly high wages in consequence of tremendous, abnormal Federal expenditures. But this is only temporary. It is not too early right now to start getting back to fundamentals, to control costs and to prepare to meet stiff competition—that hard but indispensable taskmaster.

Yes, viewing it as a whole, the Baruch-Hancock report seems to be perfectly sound—a constructive plan for avoiding the pitfalls of the post-war period—that is, provided the Congress which recently has shown a disposition to resume its constitutional functions, remains in the driver's seat.

PULPWOOD WILL NOT HAVE TO BE BARKED OR SPLIT

A market has been found for pulpwood that will not have to be barked or split according to J. H. Miller, County Agent. The requirements are as follows and must be of one of the following species: birch, willow, sycamore, elm, cucumber, poplar, basswood, black gum, sweet gum, cottonwood, cypress or tupelo gum. Any of the above species must be sawed in 5-foot lengths, not less than 4 inches in diameter and of sound timber. For further information contact the county agent.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world on Sunday, April 9, is: "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" and the Golden Text is: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction" (Psalms 103:2-4). Among the citations are the following passages: "Touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out: he is excellent in power, and in judgment, and in plenty of justice: he will not afflict" (Job 37:23.)

"Sickness, sin, and death, being inharmonious, do not originate in God nor belong to His government. His law, rightly understood, destroys them." ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 472.)

• SOLDIER LETTERS

Dear Mom:

I thought I would drop you another letter to let you know I'm still in the hospital but am getting along fine. I have my appetite back and when I can eat I'm O. K., so it won't be long before I'll be back with the boys and ready to start all over again. You stay back in a hospital awhile, when you start sweating it out wanting to get back with the gang or after being out a while it makes you feel different and that way its not so bad.

Today is a very pretty day and I have just been out getting some fresh air and it sure helped me, I feel a lot better.

Well, Mom, you have been wishing you could send me something, now is the time. I really want some candy so send me any kind of good bar candy, can you send me Milky Way, Clark, Mars or Baby Ruth? The best thing I have run across here is shower baths, we go so long with out a bath that when we do get where we can take one it really makes one feel like a different person. How is every body back home, tell all hello and give them my love. I see in the latest news where the Tank Destroyers have been doing good work on the beachhead, do they ever mention us in the papers back there?

Mom, I won't write much this time so I will end this by writing a pretty poem.

Dear God in Heaven, somewhere up there, I humbly ask you to hear this prayer.

Hear me Lord and understand, it's not just me it's every man.

Give us strength to do this task, don't let us weaken that's all we ask.

When we are sliding off the track, reach down Dear Lord and bring us back.

We realize you pave the way for each advance we make each day.

There's something else that I might add, sort of look out for mother and Dad. Thanks Dear God, thank you again, not just for me but for every man.

Lots of love, MAURICE

Happy Mrs. Gebhart Now Praises Retonga

Was Victim Of Nervous Indigestion And Sluggish Elimination For About Two Years, She States. Regains 7 Lbs. And Feels Fine.

"It seems perfectly wonderful what one month on Retonga did for me," happily declares Mrs. Lillian Gebhart, prominent resident of 474 No. 4th St., Terre Haute, Ind., and a staunch member of the

MRS. LILLIAN GEBHART Evangelical Church. Describing her case, Mrs. Gebhart stated:

"I was a victim of poor appetite, nervous indigestion, and sluggish elimination for about two years. The little food I ate would soon sour in my stomach and cause so much gas that I felt miserable and my nerves seemed like they would go to pieces. I could sleep only an hour or two at a time, and mornings found me simply fagged out. I had to use powerful laxatives regularly. I lost many pounds and seemed to be going from bad to worse.

"Retonga soon brought me the relief I so badly needed. Now I enjoy even breakfast and eat anything without fear. I sleep restfully, and I have regained seven pounds already. Even the sluggish elimination is relieved. I feel splendid. It's hard to believe any medicine could give the grand relief that Retonga gave me."

Retonga is intended to relieve distress due to Vitamin B-1 deficiency, constipation, insufficient flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and loss of appetite. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at DeMyer Drug Co. —adv.
