On November 16, 1862, the Cairo Bayou was opened as a protected harbor. It was the first deep water harbor on the Mississippi River from Cairo to Vicksburg.

The Crimson presented a very successful season, losing only one game, which was played in the Glen Central, right wing. The Crimson scored four touchdowns in the first quarter and scored two additional touchdowns in the second quarter at the beginning of the season. The Crimson did not want to fall behind in their efforts.

The game to be played in the passenger station in Fulton, the present building will be thoroughly renovated and modernized, at a cost of approximately $25,000. The present building was erected in 1910. The City of South Fulton will have an election Dec. 2. A mayor and city commissioner will be elected.

The Battle We Must Not Lose

By Ruth Taylor

Each day the newspapers carefully record our battles and the outcome of the fighting or the progress of the war, always with the implication of victory or defeat. They regularly remind us that the country is at war, that the enemy is at the door, and that whatever we suffer, the price is too high.

But there is one other battle we don't hear about - the battle that goes on without our knowing it, the battle of ideas.

The greatest weapon of every battle without and within is the spreading of false ideas. Sometimes these take the form of "sensible thinking," or of the "common-sense" approach, emphasizing the evil and not the good, the facts and not the results. But just as there is no such thing as the "common-sense" of a question, there is no such thing as the "sensible" thinking of an idea.

It is not the single question but the whole body of ideas that is the greatest weapon of the enemy.

"Whatever we suffer, the price is too high."

If the faith and morale of the people are not maintained, the enemy will never be defeated.

It is the responsibility of every American to maintain his faith and to promote the ideas that will contribute to the victory of his country.

THE SINGING RAILS

Adopting the Associated Traffic System, the British government, through its National Railways, has taken control of rail traffic in Great Britain. This move has been hailed by many as a significant step towards increased efficiency and cooperation. Railways have traditionally been managed by individual companies, but now they will be operated as a single entity. The system is expected to streamline operations and improve service for passengers and freight.

Labor Uses Guerrilla Tactics

The strike at the Gary steel plants is generating considerable interest. Labor and management have been at odds over wages and working conditions for some time. This latest round of negotiations has led to a work stoppage, causing concern among consumers and industry. Efforts are being made to mediate the dispute to ensure minimal disruption to the economy.

Facing Steelmen's Labor Problems

Steel workers are increasingly turning to guerrilla tactics in their efforts to secure better conditions and higher wages. This approach involves tactics that are not typically considered conventional union strategies. The tactics are designed to disrupt operations and force management to negotiate from a position of weakness.
