FACING NEW TASKS
Behind A Series Of Articles in Observance of American Education Week

There was a time when education consisted of little more than reciting the "Three Rs," reading, writing and 'arithmetic. It is true that simple arithmetic is a part of every student's education, but we cannot overlook the fact that the curriculum has greatly expanded in the last few decades. Today, a student's education includes a wide range of subjects, from science and mathematics to literature and the arts. This expansion of the curriculum is a positive development, as it helps students to become well-rounded individuals.

Newspaper Article

Mrs. Maben returns

The first article of this series will be a look at the "Three Rs" of education, reading, writing and arithmetic. These are the most basic elements of education, and they are still important today. However, we must also think about how we can improve the way we teach these subjects. For example, we must consider how to make reading more engaging and interesting for students.

Mrs. Maben has been teaching for many years, and she has seen the evolution of the curriculum firsthand. She believes that the "Three Rs" are still important, but that we must also consider other elements of education, such as critical thinking and creativity. She plans to discuss these topics in more detail in her upcoming articles.

Mrs. Maben's teaching career

Mrs. Maben has been teaching for over 40 years, and she has seen many changes in the field of education. She has taught at both the primary and secondary levels, and she has taught in both public and private schools. She has also worked as a school administrator and as a consultant for educational organizations.

Mrs. Maben's philosophy

Mrs. Maben's philosophy of education is centered around the idea of fostering a love of learning in her students. She believes that every student has the potential to learn, and she works hard to provide the support and guidance that each student needs to succeed.

In her upcoming articles, Mrs. Maben will discuss the importance of collaboration in education, and she will also share some of her own experiences as a teacher.

Mrs. Maben's impact

Mrs. Maben has had a significant impact on the field of education. She has taught thousands of students, and she has inspired many of them to pursue careers in teaching. She has also been a leader in her community, and she has worked to improve the quality of education for all students.

In conclusion, Mrs. Maben's articles will provide valuable insights into the evolution of education, as well as some practical advice for teachers and parents. We hope that you will enjoy reading them.
