HOBBIES IN HOPKINSVILLE

Noets Relating to Folks We All Know.

The man who has the relations for friends. For once in a year has 100. For most of his hard earned cash he expends for presents and Christmas toys.

FOLKS AND "EVERYBODY" the big THEIR FADS, would be a wee daft, save you and me, John, an' sometimes I opine that you be just a tiny bit daft."

There are a lot of well-known citizens of Hopkinsville who are not exactly "daft," but they have certain fads and fancies, and call on different kinds of hobby horses. These peculiarities, trifling in themselves, elevate the possessor above commonplace and make them people of interest.

Mr. Charles M. Latham, the hand some Main street merchant, who is, without any sort of doubt, the best dressed and swiftest looking man in the city, has a mania for collecting pipes. He owns all sorts and conditions of pipes, from the best to the worst. He has a fine collection of bird dogs. Mr. Ellis is constantly on the outlook for fine bird dogs. His pack can't be surpassed in Kentucky.

The small boy's feeling might be good. He seems to be enjoying himself. Soon he can be seen with him jumping on a street car.

Everybody knows that Col. Hiram Phelps is evenly balanced, except in one direction. He is insatiable upon writing "pomes." His last is always worse than the one preceding, and it is feared by his friends that he will soon be known as the Kentucky Walt Whitman. His feet are as lame now.

Mr. J. M. Crumrine's ruling passion is magazine literature. He is a subscriber to every periodical of any worth, and one room in his handsome residence is used to store away his papers and journals. He is an inveterate reader and buys more reading matter than anybody in the city, unless it is G. F. Campbell.

Next comes the soldier and Statesman, Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, whose record is known to all men. His distinguished services to the Confederacy and his war with Mexico are known to all men. As Governor he made an enviable record, and his opinions on all subjects of public interest are always commended.

The distinguished man who at present fills the executive chair north of the Ohio river, is a kind, hearted gentleman, and a Governor who will bear comparison with any of his predecessors.

Selected a Guardian. Miss Millie Adams is engaged to be married. Her natural guardian being dead, it was found the only way by which she could obtain license to wed could be to select a guardian. A relative of the groom was named and qualified by taking the proper oath. The marriage will take place Monday. The happy man who has won Miss Adams' affection is Mr. J. M. Foster, a clever young farmer.

Drank Too Much Whisky. The prettiest line of Hatters and the best Bakers in the city. It will pay you to see them before buying. Come and you will be treated courteously, whether you want to buy or not. I want to show the goods.

Women Burned To Death. News have been received here of two women burning to death and a third fatally burned near Rocky Hill, a few miles from Bowling Green. All of the women were negroes, and it is thought that the house was fired by parties who had a spite against the negroes.

Killed By A Fall. Yesterday afternoon I. E. Borchard died at his home in Hopkinsville. Early that morning, while going to work, he received a fall which resulted fatally.

A LOOK BACK.

Short Sketches of Our Executives.

ROBINSON TO BROWN.

History of the Governors Condensed.

Gov. Bradley will be the first Republican Governor of Kentucky.

During a period of thirty-five years there have been ten Governors of the State, beginning with James F. Robinson, who succeeded British Magill, elected in 1809 by the Democratic over the Whig candidate, Joshua F. Bell.

By a majority of eight votes he was re-elected by Governor elect Bradley thirty-six years later, wrote "W. A. P." in the Louisville Post, Gov. Magill was the promoter of the Public Land Institute, which was established in Frankfort in 1850, and he recommended in a message to the Legislature, while Governor, the passage of a stringent law for the prevention of the marriage of first cousins. His proclamation favoring armed neutrality for the State at the beginning of the hostilities is well known.

When Gov. Magill resigned, in 1862, James F. Robinson, who was a member of the Senate, was elected Speaker, and there being no Lieutenant Governor, he became acting Governor of the State, and served until the end of the term, about one year.

Gov. Robinson was a Whig, and always strongly in accord with the administration of the National Government.

In September, 1863, Thomas E. Bramlette, while organizing a division of Union soldiers, was nominated for Governor and elected. Gov. Bramlette was a pleasing speaker and a fair writer, and was a warm advocate of a State Normal school.

John L. Helm, a Whig before the war, was nominated by the Democrats in 1867 as their candidate for Governor, and was elected over Judge William B. Kinkadee, the Union candidate, and the R-republican candidate, Col. Sidney Barriss. Gov. Helm contracted a fatal illness in his campaign, and died five days after the inauguration.

John W. Stevenson, who was elected Lieutenant Governor on the same ticket with Gov. Helm, was elected Governor in 1868. Gov. Stevenson was elected United States Senator in 1869. He also served as a member of the third Constitutional Convention in 1849, as delegate to various Democratic National Conventions, as President elector and as member of Congress two terms. He was a distinguished and able lawyer. Portions of his first message to the Legislature after assuming office, it will be remembered, was the subject of considerable discussion during the late campaign.

In 1871 Gov. Stevenson was elected United States Senator and resigned Governorship.

Preston H. Leslie, who succeeded Gov. Stevenson, was a self-made man and the son of poor, hard working parents. Gov. Leslie was originally a Whig, and a follower of Henry Clay. After the death of Mr. Clay, however, he joined the Democratic party, and became one of the strongest advocates of the principles of the party.

He was a Southern man, and took the South in the civil war, but when the cause was lost, used all his influence to restore harmony between the sections.

James M. McCreary, at present Congressman from the Eighth district, was, after having served six years in the Legislature, nominated by the Democratic party in 1875 for Governor, and elected over Gen. John M. Hays, an Republican. Although an ex-slaveholder, he did much to aid the freedmen, and was a friendly foe to the North and South, and in his inaugural address and in his first message to the Legislature, recommended the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia as a fitting occasion for the development of a fraternal feeling between the people of the whole world.

Luke P. Blackburn, author of Senator Jo Blackburn, was elected Governor in 1879. He was a man of great vigor and warm impulses. He rendered great service to his State and country as a physician, and was a surgeon in the Confederate army. Gov. and Mrs. Blackburn will be remembered for their zealous efforts to reform the penitentiary and to make it habitable.

Gov. Blackburn was succeeded in 1883 by the Hon. J. Proctor Knott, a member of Congress for several terms, and who was a distinguished member of the late Constitutional Convention. Gov. Knott has acquired a national reputation. He now has charge of the law department of Centre College, Danville.

Next comes the soldier and Statesman, Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, whose record is known to all men. His distinguished services to the Confederacy and his war with Mexico are known to all men. As Governor he made an enviable record, and his opinions on all subjects of public interest are always commended.

The distinguished man who at present fills the executive chair north of the Ohio river, is a kind, hearted gentleman, and a Governor who will bear comparison with any of his predecessors.
