Six Scouts At Trinity Church Receive God And Country Award

TWO TIRED men were riding home from their offices on the bus. Side by side they sat, both looking worried, both remaining silent. Finally, one heaved a deep sigh. The other studied him for a moment, then said: "You're telling me!"

That's sort of the way I felt when I got home last Thursday night from New York, after traveling on every means of conveyance from a carrier pigeon to a jetliner to get here. Knowing me as you do, you must know that I could not have gone on such an interesting mission without some unheard of things happening.

Among the first incidents, there was a cloud-hopping, thunderstorm-skirting trip to Louisville Monday afternoon in a little old one-engine plane that scared the daylight out of me. On reaching Louisville, for a jet flight, non-stop to New York, the weather was fine, sunny and calm. In just one hour and a half, the leader of the giant sky-bird was saying: "This is your captain...fasten your seat belts...we have encountered bad weather...we are over Pennsylvania...we may have to land in Washington...this is your captain...etc. etc." landed on a wing and a prayer.

Got to New York. Went to the Cameron Hotel. You know the city is crowded like mad for the Fair, for buyers, etc. Kennedy Library headquarters made my reservations...said the hotel was recommended by the plush Carlyle...I had a suite...oh, what a way to abuse the English language...hole-to-hole carpeting...no air conditioning...gas stove leaked...that I intended to cook...shades dirty...what a hole! The sounds of New York put me to sleep.

Got up the next morning to move to the Plaza. Brushed my teeth. Filling fell out of my front tooth...not a word of lie...took 45 minutes to get a cab in that neighborhood that looked like the Bowery...got to the Plaza...not room in the inn for me until check out time at three...I had to dress for the luncheon at the Four Seasons where I was to give my report from Kentucky...I begged for a room, any kind, even without carpeting...got one just like I asked...put on my suit, all cleaned 'n everything for my speech...got to the front door of the luncheon room and for reasons known only to the suit designer Susan Thomas, two buttons popped off the front of the jacket...I made a speech holding my chest, but it wasn't for patriotism.

After the luncheon I went to Kennedy Library headquarters...rushed in for a quick dictation session...ran into a group with a gent being pushed along in a wheel chair...it was former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, visiting the library headquarters...rushed to Ella Doyle's office to meet her and Elizabeth Caldwell before the big dinner attended by President and Mrs. Johnson, the entire cabinet, Adlai Stevenson, all the Kennedys...I'll tell you about that next week...left Ella's office and was standing on the corner for a cab when Ella and Elizabeth passed by in one...Ella called out of the cab window "whatcha doing standing there?" "waiting over cab," says I... "Why that's silly," said Ella, "you can walk...it's only four blocks..." said the cab driver "sure, you can walk faster than you can get a cab...go to the corner...turn (Continued on page ten)

Hickman Annexation Now Effective; City Doubles Size After Fight

Hickman has doubled its population after a year-long legal fight and edged past Fulton (Kentucky side only) to become the largest town in Fulton County.

Hickman's population jumped from 1,537 to an estimated 3,277 with the annexation of 850 surrounding acres of land after a long and bitter court battle.

The latest census of the City of Fulton (1960) sets its population at 3,265. The new population estimate for Hickman gives the county seat 12 more people than the Kentucky portion of Fulton.

The Annexation of the built-up areas surrounding the old city limits of Hickman was made possible by a mandate received Saturday from the Kentucky Court of Appeals, the state's supreme court.

The court's Friday ruling in favor of the City was the climax of a long and hotly fought legal conflict intensified by the fact that state laws make annexation extremely difficult for cities of Hickman's size.

The city had claimed that the suburbs were enjoying city conveniences without paying for them. Hickman had extended water, gas, and sewage lines to the surrounding areas with city residents footing the bills.

Judge John Palmore of the Court of Appeals noted in his decision Friday that it was not fair for city residents to pay for utility lines while others enjoy them without sharing the costs.

Stage Is Set For Second Opening Of Outdoor Drama

Everything is ready for the second season premiere of "Stars In My Crown," Kermit Hunter's outdoor drama of West Kentucky, on Saturday, June 27, at Kentucky Lake State Park near Murray.

A few tickets for the second season premiere are still on sale. They are available at the Kenlake Amphitheatre box office for $3.00 and may be reserved by calling 474-2248 in Aurora, Kentucky after one o'clock any afternoon. All tickets are for reserved seats and may be picked up at the box office prior to curtain time at 8:15 p. m. on June 27. In Fulton they can be purchased at The News.

Kentucky Governor and Mrs. Edward T. Breathitt, Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Harry Lee Waterfield, former Governor and Mrs. Bert Combs and Dr. and Mrs. Kermit Hunter will be among the special guests attending the opening night ceremonies.

"Stars In My Crown" is the story of Western Kentucky as seen through the eyes of the late Alben Barkley of Paducah, who was vice-president of the United States in the administration of President Harry S. Truman. The theme of the drama is the struggle of the area against its life-giving, but savage, rivers - the Ohio, the Tennessee and the Cumberland - and their final taming by gigantic Kentucky Dam, which formed the lake on whose shores the story is presented.

Former Police Chief Moves Commission To Distribute Service Station Business

The Fulton City Commission directed City Manager Rollin Shaw to devise a system of equitably distributing the city's service station patronage and took action on a number of other matters at the Commission's second regular monthly meeting Monday night.

Service station manager Duck Smith asked the Commission why only one Fulton service station received all of the city's business. Commissioner Ward Johnson replied that he had not realized that such a situation existed.

Smith then asked the Commission to make sure that the city's patronage is shared among the responsible service stations in town. The Commission readily agreed and discussed several possible methods of distributing the work.

No solution was agreed upon, and City Manager Shaw was directed to devise a system as equitable as possible within the considerations of efficiency and economy.

Smith next said that the two-cent-per-gallon discount that the city gets on gasoline virtually eliminates any possibility of profit for the suppliers. He asked that either the discount be eliminated or the supplying service stations given some form of tax relief to compensate for it.

The commission explained that the discount had been regular practice for a number of years and had always been offered to the city, not demanded by it. Smith was told that as long as the discount was offered by any gasoline supplier, the city could not—in the interest of economy—refuse to accept it or to compensate for it.

In other action, the Commission: 1.) approved the rezoning from "Residential" to "Business" of a piece of vacant property optioned by the Fulton Electric System at the lower end of Arch Street in East Fulton,

2.) accepted City Manager Shaw's proposed city budget for the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 3.) made appropriations for the next fiscal year as proposed in the new budget,

4.) voted that the city enter a float in the International Banana Festival parade as several other cities in the area have done,

5.) considered new wage and salary rates for city employees, and 6.) agreed to renew notes at the Fulton and City National Banks.

City Manager Shaw Is "Get-The-Job-Done" Man

Fulton City Manager Rollin R. Shaw is a quiet, conservative man dedicated to handling the routine day-to-day business problems of the city.

Shaw came to Fulton from Glasgow, Kentucky, the first of April to succeed James Robey, whose record of progressive action as City Manager attracted so much attention that he was hired away by the city of Henderson.

Shaw was City Co-ordinator in Glasgow, his hometown, for six years before filling the vacancy in Fulton left by Robey's resignation. As Glasgow City Co-ordinator, Shaw was responsible for handling the routine day-to-day problems of administering the decisions of the city council and acted as manager of the city service departments.

With the addition of managing the city utilities, Shaw is taking in Fulton the same responsibilities he had in Glasgow.

Shaw sees his job as that of a purely administrative employee of the City Commission. While he plans a few minor modifications in office procedure, he stated he has no plans for any major innovations or drastic changes for Fulton or the administration of its government.

The City Manager largely concerns himself with directing other city employees and making the routine departmental administrative decisions that would otherwise waste the time of the City Commission.

He spends the balance of his office time preparing, at the direction of the Commission, recommendations and lists of alternatives for administrative action to be considered by the Commission.

Shaw was asked why he left his job as Glasgow City Co-ordinator to come to Fulton, a much smaller city. He replied that the financial operation was larger here, and that he had decided that if he wanted to make a profession of city administration he should get a bona fide manager's job.

Shaw and his wife Mary, who moved their family to Fulton at the end of the school term in Glasgow, have three children—Ricky, 10; Scottie, 9; and Joey, 3. The Shaws are Baptists. They live at 400 Court Drive in the home formerly owned by previous City Manager James Robey.

When asked what he did with his leisure time, Shaw said that he had no hobbies and participated in no sports. Eventually he plans to join some civic organizations.

Brand Admits Young People Get State Jobs; Takes Issue With "Brand" Of Need

First District Senator George Brand, in his continuing fight with the policies of the administration of Kentucky Governor Edward T. Breathitt, this week writes to the News pointing out an inconsistency in the summer employment policy of the present Kentucky Administration, and adds an inconsistency to his own views on the subject.

Brand, a Mayfield businessman, at odds with Governor Breathitt and some of his political leaders has charged in newspapers and hand-bills that Governor Breathitt was denying young people jobs in State government. Brand cited that the young people desperately needed these jobs in order to get an education.

(The Governor's ruling did not rule out summer employment for young people. Breathitt issued an order to all department heads and other high salaried personnel that members of their families would not be able to get employment with State government, as perhaps some of them have in past summers.)

In his letter to the News this week Brand says Breathitt is hiring young people for the summer, but Senator Brand does not agree with the "brand" of youngsters getting the State positions.

Here's the Senator's letter to the News.

Dear Jo:
We all know it has been the custom to work several college students thru-out the summer which are needed as the students need the money to help them get an education.
Ned Breathitt announced to the press several weeks ago, because of his economy program, there would be none of these students hired this summer, yet on the 15th of this month, he sent four students out of Paducah to work in Mayfield with the Division of Forestry. They are Alben Barkley III; Geo. Robertson, son of Dr. Robertson; David Boyd, son of a prominent lawyer and Craig Duffy, son of the manager of Claussner Hosiery Mills.

This is happening to your county and I do hope you will pass this on to your readers. I think Ned should stick to his word and treat all alike; we have boys in our county and I am sure you do too, wanting these jobs and needing these jobs.

I don't blame the four boys, I blame where the blame belongs—to Ned Breathitt who has turned his back on the ones who have done the most for him.

Your friend
George G. Brand
1st. Dist. State Senator

Exercise In Warmth, Describes Festival's Brigade For Baby Blankets

"An exercise in warmth," is the way to describe the Brigade for Baby Blankets being sponsored by the International Banana Festival Association. Hundreds, maybe thousands of babies born to impoverished families in certain Central American countries will be kept warm as a result of the warmth that will come when charitable contributions, merchants, church groups, and people in all walks of life in the twin cities of Fulton, Ky. and South Fulton, Tenn. give blankets to babies in Central America.

The Brigade for Baby Blankets is another endeavor of the people in the border cities of Kentucky and Tennessee to create friendships among those banana-producing countries in Central America, whose ties are strong with the 7000 inhabitants of the twin cities.

While the ties between the American cities and the Central of pounds of bananas coming to America from Central America ports are sent directly to Fulton where they are handled for diversion to sales outlets all over mid-America.

Planning an arts and crafts exhibit, an inter-American Music Fiesta, a Banana olympics, and even a machete cutters contest, Festival officials believe that to alleviate some of the dire poverty in some areas of Central America will go far toward creating a feeling of understanding in those places not always touched upon by civic and governmental agencies.

The Brigade for Baby Blankets became a part of the Banana Festival's program when Mrs. Henderson Wright, a Festival official, learned that some charity-burdened hospitals in certain Central American countries were hard-pressed for baby blankets and other clothing when deliveries were made to indigent mothers.

Presenting her plan to the Banana Festival Board she was instructed to plan a campaign to collect new and used baby blankets in the West Kentucky and West Tennessee area to send to certain hospitals in Central America.

"The response has been beyond our wildest imaginations," Mrs. Wright said in revealing that local merchants were generous in their gifts of bolts of material with which to make the blankets. Church, cultural and social groups are planning a special, giant sized sewing circle to turn out the blankets in volume so that they can be sent to the hospitals where needed.

When told of the baby blanket collection, a missionary recently returned from Central America said: "All of your Festival programs are magnificently planned to make friendships with our friends in Central America. But (Continued on page ten)

With Dignity And Restraint Mississippians Await Invasion Of Freedom Schools And Freedom Classes

The news coming from certain Southern states in connection with the civil rights issue challenges the conscience of all Americans. From Florida come reports of new outbreaks of violence, of gang wars, of beatings, of strife.

In Mississippi, where the population is preponderantly Negro, and has been for generations, a small "army of freedom schools and freedom classes" is attempting to change in one long hot summer, the way of life that has prevailed for centuries.

Mississippians, like the people in other Deep South states are not full scale law violators. As we know them, they are not people who intend to reject or impugn the laws of the land. In time, they too will solve their integration problems. As a matter of fact, with "dignity and restraint," as the Clarksdale Press-Register puts it, they have made some real progress in complying with the Supreme Court's ruling of 1954.

It is a fact that nobody, but nobody likes to be pushed, brow-beaten, badgered into compliance under any circumstances. As we see it, that's exactly what the Mississippi Project now is attempting to do in connection with civil rights in Mississippi. We see no reason for this invasion and intrusion into Mississippi by these groups from States where a little charity at home is vitally needed.

But the Mississippi Project has come into being. And since it is there, without invitation, the State is indeed fortunate to have such editors as Joe Ellis of the Clarksdale Press-Register, who wrote in part last Saturday:

This is the first of a series of Press Register editorials dealing with the impending and long-discussed influx of so-called "civil rights" workers, organizers, demonstrators and pseudo-religious reformers into the state of Mississippi — and particularly the Delta—this summer.

The purpose of this series of discussions is not to arouse resentment and fear among our people—among our people of either race. The purpose is to inform our people of what they may expect this summer and to suggest the proper and effective way to react to this unwarranted but long-predicted intrusion.

There have been many rumors and the backers of the movement have indulged in much inflated propaganda. The job of this newspaper—both in its editorial and news handling of this problem—has been and will continue to be to squelch the rumors and deflate the propaganda—to deal in the facts and thereby to keep our people informed and at ease.

For, in truth, while there is much to resent in this summer-long program, there is nothing to fear and, most certainly, nothing to justify intemperate action or reaction on the part of any citizen of Clarksdale, the Delta or Mississippi.

The best advice we have seen to date can be summarized in Attorney General Joe Patterson's recent statement of confidence in the state, county and local law enforcement agencies and officers with its concurrent appeal for all Mississippians to obey and respect our laws and in the following statement by Balmer Hill Jr. of Natchez, president of the Mississippi Economic Council, which bears repeating:

"Within the next few weeks the patience and self-control of Mississippians will, no doubt, be taxed to an extreme degree by the unfriendly activities of many outside students and adults coming into our state.

"It is imperative that we conduct ourselves with dignity, poise, forbearance, and, if possible, even good humor. We should not gather into curious crowds or allow ourselves to be provoked into impulsive acts that would reflect discredit to our state. We should support the governor in his declarations that law and order will be maintained and leave law enforcement duties in the hands of those trained to handle these matters.

"We have great confidence that the sound judgment, self control and good sense of all people of all races will prevail so the goodwill and good feelings which have always existed will continue among the races."

Banana Festival Bringing Us National Recognition; Staging Event Is A Job For All 7000 Local Citizens

This week two top flight national public relations people were in Fulton conferring with local Banana Festival officials concerning this year's event on October first through the third. The men were sent here by the National Banana Association to help put into motion the various programs planned for the three-day Fall event.

So many times lately, particularly in New York last week, we wondered if the majority of our people in the twin cities really know what the Banana Festival means to us. In saying that the eyes of the Nation are focused upon us and our activities in connection with the Festival we do so with a feeling of pride. For in our efforts to do something that few other communities in the Nation, large and small, fear to do we have commanded the attention of high ranking diplomats, political figures and industrialists.

Let us give you a for instance. In between our busy schedule in New York in connection with the Kennedy Library Foundation, we took time out to do a little calling to people who might be able to help us in staging the Festival. The first person we called was the executive vice-president of the Ford Foundation, who needed no background briefing on the plans for our second annual Festival. All of you, in the twin cities, and the State officials of Kentucky and Tennessee, should be proud to know of the prestige we have gained in attempting to promote goodwill and friendships with our Central American neighbors.

Here's what the Ford Foundation "veep" said: "We simply cannot understand how a community the size of yours can undertake such a wonderful program with such remarkable success and enthusiasm." He added, "Indeed we know all about your twin cities and we are watching your progress and plans with deep interest."

Which brings us to the "meat" in this editorial. The Banana Festival is not the responsibility of just a few people. It belongs to all of us. Work on the Festival entails hard and dedicated labor on the part of all 7000 of us, and still we need more. So you must realize that if you are not doing something to help the program festival it means we are handicapped by the lack of your efforts.

There must be hundreds of you who feel that perhaps you have nothing to contribute to the Festival plans. You are wrong! The Festival needs you, your neighbors, your friends and even outsiders you know to help stage the giant program.

You well know that already the Ambassador to Ecuador has accepted an invitation to be here. Every week from now on there will be other acceptances from high ranking dignitaries, artists, national leaders and international figures. The closer we get to Festival time, the more the Festival needs your help, your advice and your brawn. Get in the fun, start working on the Festival today.

Call Bill Cottrell at the Chamber of Commerce and enlist as a volunteer worker. Tell Bill what you can do best. But even if you have no specialty, Bill can find a job for you.

This is a twin city Festival. Every citizen on both sides of the border, officials and citizens alike, should feel a part and a worker of the Festival.

There's too much work to do for any citizen to be just a spectator. So give your services today . . . now!

100 Years Ago This Week

An historical review of the Civil War day by day in Kentucky, as reviewed by the Kentucky Civil War Commission

By JOE JORDAN

One hundred years ago this week Brig. Gen. Stephen G. Burbridge, military governor of Kentucky, received a letter of advice and instructions from Maj. Gen. William T. Sherman, who wrote from his headquarters in Georgia. Sherman went so far as to offer to exile to foreign shores Kentuckians, both men and women, whom Burbridge would have arrested and would collect at Louisville for Sherman to have transported down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers and thence to the open sea. He did not say what their final destination would be.

Sherman had had his own troubles with Kentuckians earlier in the war. In October of 1861 he had relieved Brig. Gen. Robert Anderson of command of the Union forces in the state, Anderson stating that he was unable to endure the "mental torture" of the post. Within less than a month the newspapers were reporting that Sherman was insane, and in November he was relieved of command and ordered to Missouri.

"Before starting on this campaign," Sherman wrote to Burbridge, "I asked Gov. Bramlette to at once organize in each county a small, trustworthy band, under the sheriffs, and at one dash arrest every man in the community who was dangerous to it, and also every fellow hanging about the towns, villages and crossroads who had no honest calling—the material out of which guerrillas are made up, but this sweeping exhibition of power doubtless seemed to the governor rather arbitrary . . .

"You may order all post and district commanders that guerrillas are not soldiers, but wild beasts, unknown to the usages of war . . .

"Your military commanders, provost marshals, and other agents may arrest all males and females who have encouraged or harbored guerrillas and robbers, and you may cause them to be collected in Louisville; and when you have enough—say 300 or 400—I will cause them to be sent down the Mississippi, through their guerrilla gauntlet, and by a sailing ship send them to a land where they may take their Negroes and make a colony, with laws and a future of their own . . ."

Sherman had not said anything about trials to determine whether the "males and females" so arrested actually had "encouraged or harbored guerrillas and robbers." When Burbridge came to the issuing of orders "for the suppression of guerrillas," he solved that question by declaring that "Rebel sympathizers living within five miles of any scene of outrage committed by armed men not recognized as public enemies by the rules and usages of war will be liable to be arrested and bent beyond the limits of the United States."

During the week under review, Col. Frank Polford, who had been speaking in the Green River counties in opposition to President Lincoln's re-election, was arrested at Lebanon and ordered sent to Washington for trial.

By F. W.

It's a small world. Was visiting my parents up in St. Joseph Missouri a couple of weeks ago—525 miles away—and what should I find on the front page of the Sunday paper there but this story about the St. Joe police picking up a couple of boys from Martin, Tennessee, 11 miles south of Fulton. Here's the story: LONG DISTANCE CALLS CLEAR PATH FOR 2 PACKING $14 IN PENNIES

Two Martin, Tenn., youths, 17 and 18 years old, had some explaining to do to police about 11 Friday night when they tried to sell $14 worth of pennies. . . . However, their explanation satisfied officers Saturday and the youths continued their car trip. Their destination was a relative's home in North Dakota.

The boys explained that the generator on their car had become inoperative and they wanted to get it repaired. After talking with them Glen Thomas, assistant chief of detectives, made telephone calls to their parents in Tennessee. The parents of the boy who had the pennies said he had been saving the pennies for the last few years and took them with him on the trip.

Notice on the wire service this week that a truck in England crashed into the only remaining Roman arch spanning a highway in Britain. The arch, 1800 years old, was destroyed.

How that thing survived the G-I trucks all through World War I is a mystery to me.

To you students hereabouts who sorta like journalism but wonder how good a career it will make you, I might say that things have come a long way since the day I tucked my journalism degree under my arm and went home to go to work at the handsome starting salary of $12.50 a week.

A survey of 22 Journalism school deans this spring shows that "starting" salaries were up 6 percent over last year, and that the demand far exceeds the supply. The survey revealed that:

The highest starting salary—$128.50 a week—was offered to a senior at a southwestern university. Four schools reported top starting salaries of $125 a week. Only one school had a top salary under $100 a week. The lowest starting salaries accepted by graduates at these schools ranged from $75 to $105 a week. Four schools had no starting salaries under $100. Three schools reported starting salary offers under $70 per week. All were rejected, the deans said.

Another dean noted: "Our people have so many job offers that they hesitate to accept until they can survey the field."

The dean of a West Coast school who reported a top salary of $90 per week commented: "Two seniors, both news majors, took public relations jobs at $135 and $100 a week, respectively. Our graduate students have received salary offers for public relations work ranging from $6,500 to $9,000 a year. The highest newspaper offer to any graduate student was a $6,000 a year."

The schools in the survey expect to award 932 Journalism degrees this year. About 53 percent, including 283 men and 211 women, are trained to work as reporters for newspapers and wire services. More than 900 job opportunities were reported. At the April 30 survey date 199 seniors had accepted positions.

EDITORS CAN DO A SERVICE:

Ivan Jett, executive vice president of the Kentucky Retail Federation, Inc., in discussion with publishers at the mid-summer meeting, pointed out the insidious rising trend of shoplifting among teenagers in the state's retail stores. Investigations have found, for instance, that in many schools, clubs are being formed in which teenagers have to steal so much in order to become a member. These, and many other single instances, have alarmed our merchants and police and courts to a high degree, and Mr. Jett, stating that such incidents are certainly heartbreaking for the parents when offenders are caught and such clubs exposed, and the greater tragedy is the effect on the culprit himself, believes and requests that newspaper editors frankly discuss the growing situations in their editorial columns as a distinct public service.

Bobby Anderson, formerly with the Central City newspapers, writes that he will become managing editor of the Trenton, Tenn., Gazette later this month. He has been a staff member on the Union City Daily Messenger.

The right track to live beside

Living is good in communities along the Illinois Central. Good for people and good for industry.

Each year a hundred new industrial plants spring up along this railroad. They like Mid-America, its people and the up-and-coming, low-cost transportation the Illinois Central provides.

Manufacturers know we get results for our shippers: By working out new ways to do jobs better—and by ample investment each year in new and finer railroad equipment.

Our new equipment saves money for shippers—and that saves money for you. This year we are spending some $35 million for improvements, bringing our total since World War II to $485 million. We want to keep business good for everyone in Mid-America.

WAYNE A. JOHNSTON
President

MAIN LINE OF MID-AMERICA.

New Telephone Office At Cayce Buzzing With Service

Southern Bell Telephone is busy at work taking calls in the new central office at Cayce. The new office was put into service early in June.

This is the second new telephone office to be put into operation in the Fulton area in the last 30 days. The new dial office gives Cayce subscribers 7 digit telephone numbers. The first 3 digits identify Cayce and will be 838.

The new central office building is located directly behind the old office in Cayce. Each Cayce, Dukedom, Fulton, Hickman and Water Valley subscriber has received a new Cayce-Dukedom directory. If you have not received your new directory please call the telephone business office, Fulton 9000, and ask that one be sent to you.

Cayce subscribers will also have zone rates, which will eliminate 4 and 8 party service in the Cayce exchange.

RILEY ALLEN, service foreman for Southern Bell, directing cut over operations in the Cayce office.

MR. A. A. MCGUIRE made the first long distance call from the new Dukedom telephone office. Mr. McGuire was the President of the Dukedom Telephone Company. He called his daughter, Mrs. H. E. Eudy, in Hayward, California. This long distance call initiated Southern Bell service to the Dukedom community.

ADDED CLASSROOMS TO TOP 59,000

WASHINGTON—When the federal Office of Education says the nation is 124,300 classrooms short of its needs in public schools, it means this: The shortage includes 59,400 due to excess enrollment and 64,900 due to unsatisfactory facilities. More than 59,000 classrooms are to be completed this year.

RED-SAGE BERRY CAN BE POISONOUS

CHICAGO — The green berries of the common red sage, Lantana camara, can poison children, the American Medical Association says. The plant is also called wild sage. It grows in fields and is sometimes planted as an ornamental.

It's about time: For the June wedding rush.

FLOWER FOSSIL OLDEST

DENVER — Eighteen-inch fossils found on red rock in Colorado's San Juan Mountains show a palmlike flowering plant that flourished about 165 million years ago — the oldest flowers known.

PHONES NEARS 81 MILLION

Washington—The United States has 80,969,000 telephones — more than any other country.

PIERCE STATION

By Mrs. Charles Lowe

The many friends of George Cooley of Union City will regret to learn of his death on June 21. He was buried in Johnson Grove Cemetery on June 22. He was a former resident of Pierce.

Mr. and Mrs. McNatt and Frankie Ann spent Sunday in Dyersburg with their daughter and sister, Mrs. Kenneth Alford and family.

Those enjoying the occasion were Mrs. Jackie Long, Mrs. Peggy Holland, Mrs. Elizabeth Lilker, Mrs. Dorothy Erranton, Mrs. Estelle Copeland and Mrs. Winnie Freeman.

Ned Holman of Dayton, Ohio spent the weekend with his sister, Miss Mary Holman.

Mrs. Mattie Rogers and Harold spent a few days last week with Mrs. Rogers' daughter, Mrs. Lester Alford, and husband in Dyersburg.

John Smith is a patient in Jones Clinic. We wish him an early recovery.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Long and family were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Long and Polly of McConnell and Dewitt Matthews.

Dairy Shows Boost State Tourist Plan

A by-product of the five annual national purebred dairy shows sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture has been its promotional boost to state tourism.

Every group of out-of-state sellers and buyers visiting Louisville for the shows has toured the Louisville area and the horse farms of Central Kentucky.

The Agriculture Department credits these tours with introducing Kentucky to many visitors and influencing them and their friends to visit the state for their vacations.

Scholarships Offered Through 4-H Work

College graduates with degrees in the agricultural sciences are being sought by agri-business. One West coast firm is launching a recruiting program "to entice young people into following agriculture careers."

This company also encourages students to major in agronomy, entomology, plant pathology, horticulture and related courses by annually offering two scholarships of $800 each to college sophomores. They cover the areas of crop production and protection.

One of the qualifications for the grant is that the young man or woman must have been a 4-H Club member for at least three years. The scholarship donor is California Chemical Company, Ortho Division of San Francisco.

"Talented young people will be needed in increasing numbers," said Dr. M. H. McVickar, California Chemical's manager of agronomy, "so we may continue to enjoy the prosperity which starts with economic food production."

An East coast manufacturer is equally interested in attracting young people to agricultural careers. Homelite, a Division of Textron Inc., Port Chester, New York, offers four scholarships of $1,000 each to former 4-Hers who will major or minor in forestry. These scholarships are available to colleg freshmen.

REMARKS In August 1963 I took out a Cancer policy with the Cates and Hyland Insurance Agency, with an annual premium of $23.00. In April 1964 my wife became ill with cancer, and this policy saved me hospitalization and medical costs amounting to $422.50, as the above voucher will show. This was surely the best $23.00 I EVER spent for protection. I heartily recommend Cates and Hyland's Cancer Insurance policy to everyone in this area: young and old. Henry Z. Sams

Special Project Will Emphasize Turnpike Safety

The Kentucky Junior Chamber of Commerce and the state Departments of Safety and Highways are cosponsoring a Highway-Safety Program which will focus attention on Kentucky's interstate highways and parkways, Governor Edward T. Breathitt has announced.

On July 2, just before the Independence Day weekend, Junior Chamber of Commerce members will drive from Princeton, Prestonsburg and Covington to Frankfort. In each case, one vehicle will travel the modern four-lane super-highway and the other vehicle will travel the old route.

During the trip, travel time, number of stops, gas mileage, speed and other data will be recorded in order to present a representative comparison.

"The purpose of the program is to present a comparison between the two travel routes," Highway Commissioner Henry Ward said. "We will prove that new, modern highways are safer, more efficient, less costly to travel and are vital arteries which connect our communities. We know they are one of the major factors considered when industry decides to locate."

Automobile dealers in each of the communities will furnish the vehicles to be used during the study.

Flies are about to descend upon you and your livestock. The house fly crawls down your nose when your hands are full of milking equipment and drives ole Bess to the point of wrapping her tail around your neck in a frantic effort to whisk them off her neck and back. Horse, stable, horn flies—and the so called new face fly are less annoying to you personally, but their vicious attack on the livestock really digs into your pocketbook. These are the biting flies that do their dirty work when livestock are busy gathering in forage to make your profit.

Entomologists estimate that during the four month fly season, biting flies will decrease milk and beef production an average of fifteen percent, if not controlled in some way. This estimate, they tell us, leaves no room for doubt that efficient control measures taken for these pests will pay handsome returns.

This brings up the problem of control, which has become a real problem with farm people and especially dairymen. House flies have become resistant to practically all residual sprays and dusts. Because of milk contamination, NO residual sprays can be used to control biting flies on milking cattle. Be sure to use an APPROVED CONTROL for dairy cattle and in dairy barns. The Health Department is very strict on this and the rules MUST be followed to the letter.

Sanitation is the most important weapon for eliminating the house fly. This pest breeds very rapidly in manure piles and moist refuse. By keeping manure spread and cleaning calf pens weekly, this situation can be improved. All life must have moisture in order to live and the fly comes under this rule. This is another measure that should be taken into consideration. Do you have excess water around the barn or house?

Down on the Farm

Are your cattle drinking from the pond, or do you have a pipe in the levee and let the livestock drink from a tank?

Applications of chemicals must be adjusted to the biting habits of the pests. Stable flies attack the legs and flanks, horn flies cluster about the poll, neck, and shoulders, and the face fly around the head and on the face. The horse fly, however is content to bite most anywhere he happens to light. Back rubbers saturated with a 5 percent, methoxychlor, or toxaphene in oil will give control of horn flies on NON MILKING CATTLE. This does, however, leave the legs and flanks unprotected, so do not expect complete elimination. Research shows, you can count on earning more profit for your labor if you take steps to keep the biting fly population as low as possible.

No Banana Harvest In Fulton, But Festival Sowing Seeds For Latin American Friendships

In the twin cities of Fulton, Ky. and South Fulton, Tenn., the 7000 citizens live by a dynamic creed that goes about like this: "The difficult we do right away. The impossible takes just a little bit longer."

Having accomplished the difficult task of staging a fantastically successful Banana Festival in nine short weeks last fall, the cities earned the undisputed title of "The Banana Crossroads of America."

Now working enthusiastically on the "impossible" facet of their creed, it looks mighty like the twin cities will henceforth be known as a branch office State Department, "anxious to know you" diplomatic corps and the good shepherd of a flock of people-to-people programs, whose harvest will be a bountiful crop of healthy understanding between Fulton, Ky. - Tenn. and the banana producing countries of Central America.

Impossible though it may seem to others, there is nary a twin citizen who does not view the Banana Festival as a long range program to solidify relationships between North America and Central America.

For the annual Banana Festival in Fulton, Ky. - Tenn. is a program with heart, with vigor, with imagination, with determination and dedication. Many large philanthropic foundations, certain State Department agencies and other groups have endorsed the Latin American phase of the program with enthusiasm and good wishes, but with a "wait-and-see" attitude as far as financial help is concerned.

The Banana Festival planners, proceeding with the consummate faith that where there's a will, there's a way, not only will show, but they also have placed the responsibility for winning world peace on their collective and individual shoulders.

Even though the twin cities of Fulton, Kentucky, and South Fulton, Tennessee, are two thousands miles from the nearest banana plantation, the community is as banana-conscious as if it were located in the heart of Central America.

When the Second International Banana Festival is held October 1-3, visitors, too, will sense a close kinship with the banana-producing republics of Latin America.

While—of course—no bananas are grown in the twin cities in far-western Kentucky and Tennessee, they are "the banana crossroads of the United States" and "the banana capital of the nation."

For many years the community has prided itself on the fact that it is the center of the nation's banana distribution. Fulton is located half-way between New Orleans, the country's greatest banana port, and Chicago and is in the center of the Eastern half of the United States.

As the hub of five lines, Fulton is the main diversion point on the Illinois Central Railroad, the biggest carrier of the finger-shaped fruit after it arrives in New Orleans and Mobile by ship from Guatemala, Ecuador, Honduras, Panama, and Costa Rica.

From 2,000 to 2,500 refrigerated cars of bananas come into the Twin Cities from the Gulf coast each and every month. The carloads of delicate fruit are all immediately re-iced to prevent spoilage and are speedily sent out all over the country.

Last year the town's interest in the five and one-half billion pounds of bananas handled in the Fulton redistribution centers in the last decade manifested itself in the 1963 International Banana Festival.

ing is easy communication, the months before the Festival will see Fulton and South Fulton become the world's largest Spanish Class.

The tremendous energy and enthusiasm the citizens of the Twin Cities threw into last year's Festival indicates that by the time the three-day Festival begins October 1, almost the entire community will be able to welcome and communicate with the many important representatives of the banana-producing countries who will be honored guests at the Festival.

Festival officials have been working closely with the United States Department of State and the Pan American Union to develop the program for Latin American Day, October 2. Many events are planned for that day and throughout the Festival to carry out the theme of international understanding.

All the schools in the Fulton area will be asked to sponsor the writing of essays entitled "Why It Is Important That We Have Friends in Latin America."

Latin American Day expresses Fulton's feeling that in having various officials and representatives of certain Latin American countries come to the International and crafts of our country.

An exchange of musical talent between certain Central American countries and the United States will also be held in connection with the Second International Banana Festival. The Pan-American Union's headquarters in Washington is co-operating in arranging to have a large number of Latin American musicians and musical groups in Fulton to participate in the Inter-American folk fiesta.

An Inter-American soccer game will be included as a part of the Latin American program of the Festival. The sport is very popular in Latin American countries; teams from Costa Rica, Ecuador, and Honduras will stage a match to show Americans a sample of the sport that is to them what football is to us.

Another feature of the program to increase understanding of Latin America will be the showing, daily throughout the festival, of a movie picturing the story of the banana industry as it relates to each individual country, as well as information about the countries themselves. The film will be produced with the aid of the State Department, Pan American Union, and cluded as Festival activities. A special attraction will be a "banana shoot" and a "banana split."

The shoot will involve the governors of Kentucky and Tennessee and other officials competing at hitting bunches of bananas hung from football goal posts. Just to make things more interesting, the contestants will use bows and arrows.

The banana split will be what its name implies—if the soda fountain connotation is forgotten. Representatives from each of the banana-producing countries will test their skills in the precision splitting bananas with machetes.

For glamor, a beauty review will lead to the crowning of a new International Banana Princess who will serve for one year as the official representative of the American banana industry.

Miss America will hold the spotlight in the most spectacular event in the three-day Festival—a five-mile-long parade on October 3. Last year's much less ambitious parade attracted more than 25,000 people to Fulton-South Fulton, a town of only 7,000.

This year's parade will feature

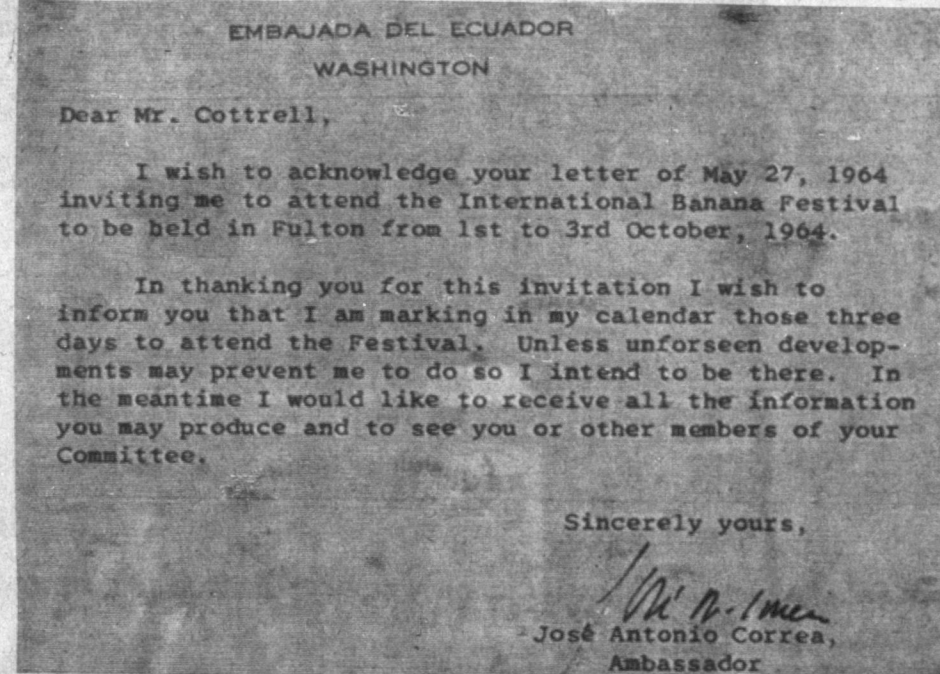

The Fulton Rotary Club had the pleasure of hearing dynamic Bill Cottrell tell of his various travels in connection with the festival. Mr. Cottrell is executive secretary of the International Banana Festival. Others in the photo, left to right, are: Larry Metcalfe of New Orleans, with the National Banana Association; Bob Morgan, president of the Rotary Club; Mr. Cottrell and Nathan Wade, festival president.

swarms of floats, bands, beauties, military units, drill teams, horses, old cars, ponies, mules, and anything else that can move along the route. Everybody loves a parade, and this one will be an extravaganza.

The parade will be followed by the serving of the world's largest banana pudding, which will be big enough to serve thousands of Festival visitors.

The desire of the people of Fulton and South Fulton to establish people-to-people friendships with Latin America is not even waiting for the Festival to begin. The citizens of the Twin Cities are already engaged in a drive to provide receiving blankets for many areas of Latin America where women are so poor that they are now forced to carry their babies home from the hospital wrapped in newspapers.

tival. It was a mammoth undertaking which involved the energies, enthusiasm, and strong wills of the entire community. It was such a spectacular success that it was given nation-wide press, radio, and television coverage including coverage on NBC's Huntley-Brinkley news report and fourteen minutes on the Steve Allen Show.

While the first Festival was sort of a homage paid by Fulton's citizens to the industry that has been a central feature of their local pride, this year's festival is motivated by a sincere desire to reveal the co-incidence of interests that lie parallel to those of our country and those countries to the south of us.

The people of Fulton and South Fulton realize the great need for international understanding, and the program of the Second International Banana Festival is designed to create opportunities for friendships and understanding between North Americans and Latin Americans. The theme of the Festival is "Project—Unite Us."

Feeling that the firmest foundation for international understand-al Banana Festival they will be able to see first-hand what kind of people populate a small community located between the mid-western and southern sections of America.

Government agencies in Washington are enthusiastic about the Festival's contributions to good relations between the United States and Latin America, and the Rockefeller Foundation has said that what is done in the second Banana Festival could make Fulton - South Fulton become a model or pilot town under the Alliance for Progress program.

To help bridge differences in environment, circumstance, and language, and to bring hearts and minds closer, an exhibition will display throughout the Festival arts and crafts of Latin America that coincide with similar arts the banana-producing countries.

A soap box derby—called a "banana box derby", of course—will signal the beginning of the first day of the Festival on October 1.

In this year of the Olympic Games in Tokyo, Fulton will stage its own "Banana Olympics" as a part of the Festival activities. All the ceremonies of the regular Olympics will be observed, including the carrying of the symbolic torch—now shaped like a banana.

The importance of the railroads that made Fulton "the banana Capital of the World" will be saluted with races of old-fashioned hand cars. The Illinois Central, which carries Fulton's bananas, will provide an exhibit of rail equipment.

All kinds of contests will be in-

Members of the executive board of the Banana Festival Association, in one of their many meetings were in a happy mood at the national response they are receiving on this year's Latin-American good neighbor program. Seated clockwise are: Frank LeMaster, Fulton Mayor Gilbert DeMyer, Mrs. Bob Morgan, President Nathan Wade, Bill Scott, Floyd Martin, O. L. Lamascus and Mrs. Paul Westpheling.

Twin city artists are busy these days "brushing up" on their exhibits that will be shown side by side with the art works of Latin-American artists that will be shown at the Arts and Crafts exhibit. Show here, left to right are: Mrs. Ray Hunter, Mrs. Allene Homra, Mrs. Wilmon Boyd, Mrs. Hendon Wright and Miss Van-Aaltje Vandenburg, who comes over weekly from Martin Junior College to teach the class. Miss Vandenburg is head of the Department of Related Arts and Crafts of the University of Tennessee, Martin Branch.

TELL FOLKS ABOUT IT!

Let's make the Banana Festival a Fulton home-coming. Send your friends and relatives copies of this festival feature. They may be obtained at the News office for 10c each or three for 25c.

This article prepared for THE NEWS by Jo Westpheling and Wayne Anderson.

Si, yo habla Espanol . . . Mrs. Hendon Wright tells teacher Jose Otano as they go through their twice weekly Spanish lesson on Radio Station WFUL. The "classes" are conducted on radio, in newspapers among civic and cultural groups as part of the plan to have all 7000 residents in the twin cities speaking Spanish at least "un poco" when scores of Latin-American dignitaries, singers, dancers and artists come to the Festival for the three day affair October 1-3. It's the world's largest Spanish class, don't you think?

Your Wisest investment of time... REGULAR CHURCH WORSHIP

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

A well of water...

Many important events have taken place at the well. In days long ago it was a meeting place, where all came because of the necessity to obtain life-sustaining water.

Jacob met his beloved Rachel at the well. Moses met the daughters of his future father-in-law at the well in Midian. Much later Jesus Christ met a woman of Samaria at the well and said, "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst: but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

The church of God today is a meeting place where many come to obtain this life-giving and life-sustaining water of which Jesus spoke. Won't you come to this meeting place next Sunday?

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

NOTEBOOK—

left . . . and it's shorter . . . As anybody can tell you I never listen to directions about directions . . . I musta turned wrong . . . It took me one hour to get there . . . panting, carrying an attache case that weighed a ton when I got to the Plaza . . . I was within 45 minutes of dinner-time at the St. Regis, just around the corner. Seemed like time enough!

But it wasn't-for me! Because I knew that the long dress I was to wear, and the unmentionable undergarment I had to wear needed somebody to fence me in . . . the family asked what I was going to do in New York about this . . . I told them I could manage . . . I could have if I hadn't gotten panicky . . . I opened the door and intended to ask the first lady passing by to help me . . . luckily it was the floor maid . . . bless her . . . she not only got me into the dress and the unmentionable . . . she calmed me and even called a cab.

As I said, the St. Regis was right around the corner . . . yet it cost $1.25 cab fare . . . when I got there the place looked like a police academy . . . the street was blocked off and nearly 200 policemen were three deep because they were expecting the President and Mrs. Johnson momentarily . . . There I was, all foxed up, mink stole and the hurtiest shoes any human being ever wore . . . I had no identification, but I told a cop I was a guest at the dinner, as he could see by the way I was dressed, and I might say perspiring . . . Said he: "Lady, I've only got a silver badge, you gotta see somebody with a gold badge" . . . I found somebody with a gold badge, and a couple of gold teeth, too . . . I repeated my sad story . . . I must have an affidavit because he said . . . "I'll see what I can do" . . . He walked me to the front door of the St. Regis . . . I went through the same story . . . but I dropped a few names "Call the Attorney General . . . Call Stephen Smith . . . Call Miss Helen Keyes . . ." Obviously I convinced him . . . though I shouldn't have, what with recent tragic events about a President . . .

Well, I got to the ball-room, taken sky-ward by an elevator boy who wanted to tell me how pretty I looked and wondered if my husband was proud of me . . . I got to the ballroom before I had to answer the question . . . I think I'll ask Paul. Well, safely in my arms, I looked around and I think . . . gee, what is this . . . Adlai Stevenson, Chief Justice Warren, Justice Goldberg, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murray and Averill Harriman all standing at the table waiting to be issued their table assignments . . . I walked to the refreshment area and there I saw what seemed like the oldest friends I ever had . . . Don Douglas, president of Douglas Aircraft and Gov. and Mrs. Fritz Hollins of South Carolina . . . they were at the luncheon with me and we had gotten right friendly . . . we were standing around meeting folks . . . Pat Lawford, Arthur Schlesinger . . . Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges . . . when all of a sudden we hear this screaming, yelling commotion coming from the foyer of the ball-room about three feet from us . . . gads, I thought, here I am on a mission commemorating one tragic event in history and now I'm about to witness another . . . all of a sudden I see a fire extinguisher fly through the air and about 20 secret service men ducking and trying to catch the fellow who threw it . . . some nut had gotten to the ball-room, claimed he was a friend of the President, and got belligerent when they didn't give him a card for his dinner seat.

Well, we all backed away of course . . . nearly backed into President and Mrs. Johnson who had just arrived from another door . . . we told them nothing of the incident, but it was mighty hard for us to make small talk with our wits scared out of us . . . as if that wasn't enough, our group, which had now been joined by the Governor of Vermont, moved away from the President only to almost bump into Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, who had arrived with the Attorney General. We chatted with her, had our pictures taken with her . . . then so many other dignitaries started coming in, we got lost in the glamour . . . At my dinner plate was a beautifully, leatherbound copy of "The Burden and The Glory," by John F. Kennedy. In it was written . . . "With appreciation, Jacqueline Kennedy." Since she sat at the table next to mine I was able to thank her personally.

After the dinner Don Douglas was our host in making the rounds of New York . . . Toots Shor . . . 21 Club . . . Tony Pastore . . . Greenwich Village . . . as we left the ball-room, completely awed by all the dignitaries and glamour, I just knew I was going to trip on that long gown . . . I did . . . but the accident was unnoticed except by me . . . my knees are still skinned!

The next evening I had dinner with Ella Doyle. Got up at four A. M. to catch a plane from Newark . . . got to Louisville, missed my connection, stayed around the airport all day long and chatted with every mechanic, fuel pilot and employee of the airlines . . .

When I got to Fulton, I was so bushed I went to bed before sun-down. Woke up the next morning only to remember I had promised Commissioner John Hornsby of Paducah that I would be a judge at the Miss Kentucky pageant in Paducah Thursday night. I still shudder when I think about not letting him know. There were other things that happened . . . but I'm too weary to write them now.
