ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

HOPKINSVILLE, CHRISTIAN COUNTY KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1897.

MONEY BROUGHT HERE

Big Landed Estate Turned Into Cash.

SHARP'S SIMOLEONS.

Hairs of a Hopkinsville Citizen Secure Ten Thousand Dollars.

Mr. "Hal" Sharp has not been in St. Louis on a mere pleasure trip. It was business of an important nature which called him there.

Mr. Sharp doesn't do much talking, and his doubtful that any casual acquaintance has ever heard from him since that in consequence of his visit to the Western metropolis has a number of shining simoleons in his pocket.

It develops that he is one of the heirs of a big landed estate in St. Louis, and that he went there to convert the property into cash.

The first intimation of the matter was given to Hopkinsville people by the following paragraph in the St. Louis Republic, which tells the whole story:

"A party of King's Lake Club members will make the trip to Troy, Lincoln county, Mo., to-day to attend the sale of the fish and game preserves known as the King's Lake property. The preserves which cover about 1,000 acres of wooded ground, adjoin a large body of water, is owned by the heirs of the late E. J. Sharp, of Hopkinsville, Christian county, Ky. Two of the heirs, Messrs. Henry J. Sharp and K. R. McKee, have been in the city several days, preparing for the sale. It is probable that the property will be bought in by the King's Lake Club, which already owns 700 acres on the opposite side of the property."

The following, in a subsequent issue: "The big 1,000-acre hunting and fishing preserve, known as the King's Lake property, was bought for $10,000 at the auction held Tuesday, by Mr. Joseph D. Lucas. He will present it to the King's Lake Hunting and Fishing Club, which already owns 700 acres adjoining the lake."

"The preserve, which now becomes part of the club's estate through Mr. Lucas' generosity, was the property of the Sharp estate. The heirs, who reside in Kentucky, refused $10,000 for the ground several years ago, but were well satisfied with getting that sum at the present time."

"The King's Lake property, including the lake is now one of the most extensive game preserves in the country."

An Eight-Year-Old Girl While Playing, Falls and Breaks Her Neck—Other Fatalities.

[SPECIAL TO NEW ERA]

Washington, Jan. 11.—It is said by leading Republicans here that it is the intention of Gov. Bradley not to call the Legislature together, as he believes that by its failure to elect a Senator last winter and adjourning sine die without doing so, it has lost its right to elect one, but that on the 5th day of March, the day after the expiration of Blackburn's term, he will appoint Hon. John W. Yerkes to fill the Senatorial vacancy.

[SPECIAL TO NEW ERA]

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 11.—Mr. George Wordsworth, a wealthy retired merchant of this city, suicided this morning. Mr. Wordsworth retired from business several years ago for the avowed purpose of enjoying the large fortune that he had amassed, and he did enjoy it, but a year or two ago his health became so bad that life has since been a burden to him. It is thought that his mind had been so affected by ill health that he was not really responsible for his act this morning. He leaves his family in good financial condition.

[SPECIAL TO NEW ERA]

Pikeville, Ky., Jan. 11.—There was a peculiar, as well as fatal, accident in this town to-day. Mary Baron, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Baron, well known people of this place, was playing with several companions. While running after one of the children, Mary tripped and fell to the ground with considerable force. As she did not at once arise the children became frightened and called Mrs. Baron to come and see what was the matter. When the mother lifted the child from the ground, she thought that she had only been stunned by the fall, but she soon saw from the way the head fell that the neck was broken. The neck was broken at the joint where it connected with the body.

[SPECIAL TO NEW ERA]

Pineville, Ky., Jan. 11.—Another life has been sacrificed by carelessness in handling guns that are not supposed to be loaded. This morning Messrs. Hillton, a well-to-do and popular farmer residing near this place, got down a gun that had not been used for a long time, and concluded that he would clean it up ready for use. He remarked when he began work that the gun was not loaded, but the words had hardly passed from his lips when the report was heard, and when the smoke cleared away Mr. Hillton saw that his eight-year-old daughter, who had been standing by his side a few seconds before, was lying dead on her back upon the floor. The father threw the gun down and ran to pick up his daughter, hoping that she had been only frightened or shocked by the sudden discharge of the weapon, but when he stooped over her, he saw at a glance that she was dead. An examination showed that the entire load of shot had passed through the girl's heart, tearing a horrible hole in her body. The father is almost crazed by grief.

Louisburg, Ky., Jan. 11.—One of the saddest accidents that ever occurred in this county took place here this morning. The handsome young wife of Joe Price, who is a very popular citizen of Louisville, was burned to death. She was alone in the house at the time the accident occurred, but from the surrounding circumstances it seems that in cleaning up her room, while brushing off the mantel-piece, her dress caught fire from the open grate. The frightened woman screamed for help, but before any of the neighbors could arrive to render assistance she was burned to death. She had evidently inhaled the flames, as she sank down dead in front of the fire-place. The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire community. Mr. and Mrs. Price had been married only a short while.

London, Ky., Jan. 11.—The suicide Saturday night of Francis J. Murray, a former theological student, has brought to light a remarkable story of a dual life. Although supported by a church whose officers looked upon him as a godly man, he secretly lived the life of a libertine. A stinging conscience, it is thought, had much to do with his suicide.

TERRIBLE WEAPONS.

A PAIR OF THEM WHICH A TRAVELER PICKED UP IN PARIS.

The Venom Box Which Contains the Most Powerful Poison Known—The Needle That Does Its Deadly Work in a Silent and Perplexing Manner.

"Two of the most beautiful and at the same time murderous objects I have ever seen in all my travels I picked up in Paris during my trip there last summer," said J. V. Atkinson of Savannah to a friend.

"I bought both of these from an old gipsy in the Quarter Latin, and he assured me they were without doubt the only ones in existence, as far as his knowledge of death dealing instruments went, and he also told me that he had purchased them of an old Spaniard who had spent most of his life in the South American countries.

"I am sure he must have had them made to his special order, for, as I have already stated, during all my travels I have never seen anything that would in any way approach them for villainous, murderous purposes.

"The first, as you see, looks innocent enough, and when I ask you what you think it is you will reply—

"A silver matchbox," answered the reporter as he gingerly handled the beautifully chased silver object.

"Touch that spring.

At an easy touch the lid of the box flew open on a powerfully lined spring and disclosed the interior, in a compartment about one-half of the capacity of the box were a dozen wax matches.

"Now you'll find a tiny button on the side next you and near your thumb. Just press that lightly."

As the suggestion was followed a little, sharp pointed, creamy white, carved object popped into view from that portion of the box not occupied by the matches.

"What is that?"

"That," said Mr. Atkinson, "is not more nor less than the fore finger of the Crotalus horridus, the great American rattlesnake, and one of the most venomous of serpents known to ichthyologists.

You will notice that the finger is sharp as a needle at its point; that it is set for a distance up the middle, and that it is hollow. You will also observe that a fine, amber colored, jellylike substance is contained within the hollow of the finger. That is nothing less horrible than the venom of the crotalus, and the rankiest poison, the most deadly of agents known to man.

A single drop of this venom, if it comes in contact with a man's hand or face means certain and a horrible death—nausea, vomiting, retching, convulsions, paralysis, complete paralysis, state of coma, death in a most horrible form and the swelling to horrible proportions of the corpse as it rapidly turns black from the violence of the venom.

You may take the fearful agent, take it between your fingers, force it between blocks of ice, and it will still retain its terrible power. You may inoculate a rat with the venom, and he will die in a few moments, a dog in five and a man in from ten minutes to an hour, according to the amount received and the condition of his system at the time. The blood of the first rat can be inoculated into a second, and the blood of the second into a third, and so on down through 100, yes, 200 subjects—without recourse to the original venom, and the last subject will die as quickly and convulsively as the first, for its violence is absolutely fatal.

"You can readily see what a terrible weapon it would be in the hands of an unscrupulous villain. A scratch or two, and the deed would be done, while the victim would simply imagine that he had been scratched by a pin. Yet in a close fight with some of the despicable footpads and murderous thugs who infest your fair city I do not think I would have any scruples about using it on one of them myself.

"It would be difficult even for a first class physician to discover at the first sight how the man met his death.

"The companion piece, of devilish ingenuity, is a needle gun. A needle looking thing, is it not?" asked Mr. Atkinson as he passed a richly carved and silver mounted object that looked like a cross between a miniature double barreled shotgun and a revolver to his friend, who handled it with extreme caution.

"That little gun is about five inches over all, and yet it contains within those chambers, in the back part between those fine watch spring steel barrels and the pistol grip, enough of fluid mischief to lay out a dozen strong men.

"The charge is a strong but powerful cartridge made of a highly explosive chemical which, by the peculiar construction of the chambers, makes so little noise that it could not be heard by a person ten feet away. The instrument of destruction is a bunch of fine cambric needles that have had their heads slightly flattened to offer resistance and catch the propelling force, and their points have lain in the very same sort of venom of which I spoke until they are thoroughly corroded with it.

"As they leave the gun they scatter and penetrate to the most vital spots, where their terrible work is quickly done. Nothing short of a post-mortem examination of the most rigid kind would betray the cause of death."

—St. Louis Republic.

An Experiment.

"Where are you going, Michael, so early?"

"Apothecary's. Wife got sick last night."

"Doctor been there yet?"

"No. I just found a prescription in the street when I was in town, and I'm going to have that made up and try it."
