We Shed No Tears

Sentimentalists—the kind who furnished no blood in previous wars and who sent no sons into the recent ones—grieve over the internal situation in Japan, and already the press is witnessing maudlin contributions dripping with tears over the dastardly Japs who, so far as Hopkins county is concerned, murdered Bailey Pride Jr. at Pearl Harbor and took a toll of life only partly recorded on our Court Square marker.

According to news from Tokyo, murders and thefts are sweeping Japan. There are terrific increases in the cost of living, and there is much hunger. Swindlers are so common they are taken as a matter of course. With eyes entirely dry, we learn from one commentator that "Japan seems to have degenerated surprisingly as the result of national defeat and the troubles that go with it. Soldiers come home with the barbaric mental state of the battlefields, from which recovery is slow and troublesome."

Financial inflation in itself is a great disaster, and Japan apparently can be saved only by the help of the nation it tried to destroy, another commentator says, in a bid for leniency toward the little brown monkeys who walk like men.

Hopkins countians, not as prone to forget as are the long-haired men and short-haired women who deal in such drivel, will go about their own affairs dry-eyed, seeing in Japan a vivid picture of deliberate national crime, which stabbed a friendly nation in the back, and which must now be paid for in the fruits of that crime. One Song Omitted

Editor, The Leader

Fulton, Kentucky

In your article about Jack Foy Saturday, you failed to mention one of Jack's most popular songs. "He Left the One Who Loved Him For Another."

It may not be so well known in this part of the country, but it is very popular up in the mountain sections.

The song was written about an old farm hand who worked for years on the Foy farm near Dukesboro. The story goes this way. The old farm hand had gone with a maiden, who lived across the field, for years. The two were very much in love and had made plans to be married. When one day, a new lass moved into the neighborhood, the old man dropped his sweetheart of many years, and started courting the new girl.

This broke his old girl friend's heart, so she took poison and died. But before she passed away, she wrote a note to the one she loved. The note read: "You left the one who loved you for another."

Her grave is considered a symbol of true love, and is visited by many lovers.

Once, while in New York, Jack told this tale to a great producer, who immediately asked him to write a song about it. Jack said he couldn't because it was about someone he knew, but the man insisted. So, when Jack returned to Washington, he and Rex Lampman got together and composed this song. Jack wrote the words and Jack the music.

The song, when first heard, seems a bit "corny," but after knowing the story behind it, many consider it a great love song.

Respectfully yours,

Music-Lover

Grandma Gray—A Picture Of Courage In Old Lace

By Hal Boyle

New York, Feb. 17.—When the neighborhood movie is featuring one of those films about psychopathic people with psychopathic problems, I stay at home and thumb through my wife's old family album.

Each faded picture shows a long dead face that once drew breath and had problems. Frances tells me the real life story behind the faces and how they met those vanished problems. It is much more fun than a movie.

My favorite is my Grandmother-in-law Gray, who still looks out from the battered album with the dignity of a duchess, her black eyes, snapping under half of snow.

The thing Grandmother Gray had was the courage to carry her burden.

Once upon a time she was young and slender and fair, with dark elegant eyes and black hair. Martha Lee Force was about the prettiest thing over fifteen in Carlisle, Mo., and two young men in particular thought so.

Martha liked Vincent Gray, but she loved the other suitor, who called him Robert. Both boys knew how they stood.

The Civil War broke out, and both suitors went off to fight on the Northern side.

Both suitors wrote to her through the years of battle, but toward the end the letters from Robert ceased abruptly. Vincent Gray returned, limping from a bad spinal wound, and he renewed his suit.

Martha clung to the small gold band that Robert had given her—in those days they often gave engagement rings that look like the wedding rings of today. But when the war had been over several months and no word came from her "true love," Vincent finally convinced her Robert was dead or had no wish to return.

So one day, all in white, she walked out a church door on Vincent Gray's arm, his wife. And before the sun set on her wedding day a large packet of letters came from her absent "true love." Robert was in a hospital, badly wounded. He wrote he loved her dearly and would come to her as soon as he could be moved.

But in those days people took seriously the words, "when God hath joined together let no man put asunder." Martha Gray sat down and wrote the last letter she ever sent the man she loved. He never came home and she never saw him of had word from him again.

The Civil War broke out, and both suitors went off to fight on the Northern side.

Robert was an unseen ghost between her and her husband, who always was troubled by the knowledge she had married him only through affectionate pity.

Martha bore him four daughters, and the sad man only said: "Four daughters I have to feed and clothe, and not a son to cheer my heart."

But it was Grandmother Gray who had to feed and clothe them. Vincent Gray died young from the after effect of his war wound.

Martha Gray never bustled but she was full of a tremendous quiet energy. She was a wonderful cook. She opened a boarding house. Mornings she cooked and cleaned. In the afternoons and evenings she sewed clothes for her daughters. Three she sent through college.

Once a boarder, seeing her bent cheerfully over her sewing machine, put his hand lightly on her shoulder and said: "Your little hands should never have harder work than this to do," and Grandmother Gray, without turning her head or missing a stitch, said very firmly: "Take your hand from my shoulder, sir, or leave this house forever."

Yes, people once talked that way—and they meant what they said. The abashed boarder moved his hand, but stayed for dinner. He was the only man who ever "insulted" Martha Gray in the years she ran her boarding house.

When her daughters married, her sons-in-law quarreled for

Chain Of Crises

By Dewitt MacKenzie,
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Columnists have a weakness for being AWOL at times, but they generally turn up again like the bad penny—and your correspondent is happy to report back for regular duty after having played hooky quite a bit over a considerable period.

I'm glad to be on the job again for two reasons. One is that I like my work and consider it a rare privilege to be able to talk with you good folk each day. The other is that 1947 may be the pivot on which will turn the fortunes of mankind for a generation—or even more. Certainly it will be a year of vast importance.

This will be a period of big affairs for Uncle Sam at home, of course. But it would be a grave mistake for us to believe that we could reach a correct solution of our own problems without considering many of them in relation to foreign developments. Like it or not, it is imperative that our American course be charted with due regard to external circumstances. If we are to have a true perspective we must know not only what is happening abroad but what it means.

That's the message we read in the headlines of our newspapers these days. Just consider the current crisis, every one of which affects the United States:

Efforts to reach an agreement for international control of atomic energy have blown up, and the United Nations are back about where they started two-thirds of a year ago. The atomic issue is one of the most dangerous with which we are faced, for it easily could produce another rupture of world peace.

Mother England—member of the Big Three—is in the midst of one of the fiercest economic crises of her long history, and at the same time her empire is going through a metamorphosis which involves the granting of freedom to mighty India and adjacent Burma—and heaven alone knows what else. As though that weren't enough, the bloody Palestine imbroglio remains a red-hot problem, not only for Britain but for the world at large.

The position in China—suffering from the effects of her long war with Japan and from the fierce civil strife between the Chinese communists and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's nationalist government—never has been worse. Nothing has happened to change the view of many observers that the only solution is a fight to a bloody finish. Having learned something of this upheaval at close range in that unhappy land I certainly wouldn't dispute the argument that the quarrel must be settled on the battlefield.

Relations between Moscow and Washington are far from being all honey and flowers, as witness Foreign Minister Molotov's sharp note of protest which characterizes testimony by under Secretary of State Acheson before a senate committee is being "gross slander and hostile to the Soviet."

Thus it goes—an endless chain of crises. All these we must study and understand. Not to do so would be to invite trouble.

So this column will call attention to important situations and try to interpret them. And your columnist hopes that readers will continue to participate in our discussions by submitting ideas and questions to him through their local newspapers.

BOWERS CLUB MEETS IN JENKINS HOME

The Bowers Community Club met Feb. 7 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jenkins with 48 members and several visitors present.

After lunch the president called the meeting to order. Mr. Wright led in group singing. Mrs. Reeves read the scripture lesson and Mr. Jenkins led in prayer.

Mrs. William Smith read a very interesting poem. Mr. Ellis of Dresden gave a very interesting talk on his trip to California. Mr. Grath spoke briefly of "The Rural Progress Show" to be held in Dyersburg on March 14, and stressed that everyone who could go would get many helpful ideas.

Mr. Claude Williams made the announcement that the farm meetings would start at South Fulton school Feb. 13. There will be six meetings, one every two weeks.

Later Mr. Grath and Mr. Wright met with the men and Miss Jones with the ladies. Miss Jones gave out year books, demonstrated making of shuck door mats, and discussed how members could make 1000 more liveable.

The next meeting of the club will be with Mr. and Mrs. John Farabough on March 7.

RANDALL KING HONORED ON BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Carl King entertained Saturday night at 6 o'clock with a birthday party for their son, Randall, who was 18 years old. Games were enjoyed during the evening and cookies, sandwiches, and yeast-cakes were served to the guests.

Those present were Nell King, Zenis Ruth Morney, Barbara Roberts, Moezel and Carol King, Eloise Hicks, Joan Smith, Mary Jeanne Linton, Marjorie Bowlin, Norman Barnes, Billy Joe Crawford, Willie Joe King, Lewis Jones, Freddie Roberts, Maurice Coffman, Fred Elam, Marvin Faulkner, J. D. Faulkner, Charles Kimbel, Curtis Cates, Max Long, Leroy and James Coy Kuddle and the honoree.

Joan Hutchins, Emma Ruth Cavender, and Sammie Haddad sent gifts but were unable to attend. Randall received many nice gifts from the guests.

TOMMY EXUM CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Milton Exum entertained yesterday with a birthday party for her son, Tommy, who was six years old. The guests arrived at 3 o'clock and during the afternoon several motion picture cartoons were shown, games and contests were enjoyed.

David Clonts and Sydney Callum were winners of the don-the privilege of having Grandmother Gray stay with them. She lived to be old. She died of pneumonia. Only then did the family learn that some months before her doctor had informed her she was incurably ill of cancer. She told no one and never let her pain be known.

She carried her valor and her problems with her to the grave. Among her effects they found the slim small gold ring she had never seen back to Robert—the one remembrance of her early love.

Quaint, proud, tiny Grandmother Gray! For a story about people like her—people with the character to meet real problems—I'll walk through slush and rain to the movies. The rest of the time I'll stick to the old album.

Uncle Mike Is Improving Now

Jacobs Isn't Back In Fight Game Yet, But Is Showing His Old "Zing"

Rumson, N. J., Feb. 18—(AP)—There is plenty of the old batter still left in Mike Jacobs, and as a result Uncle Mike tells you he figures he'll be "back in harness" any time now.

This, of course, is a lot of optimism on Uncle Mike's part, because the doctors say it'll probably be six months more before he can even think of doing business at the old stand, which is Madison Square Garden where Mike happens to be the world's No. 1 boxing promoter.

But even at that, it's a big win for Mike, who when he was hanging on the ropes and just about ready for the ten count from a combined hemorrhage and acute heart attack back there only a few weeks ago.

And the mere fact that he tells you he's going to come back at all shows just how much of the old Mike still packs.

No doubt will come as a rude shock, too, to the promoters and would-be impresarios and hungry bone-pitchers who rushed to the scene like so many wolves when he was stricken December 3, thinking they could move in and grab off the spot as his successor.

All you have to do is look at Mike, as he slowly gets back his strength here on his Jersey shore estate to realize "he's beating the rap."

He left the hospital in New York just 16 days ago, and while Mike isn't doing any fancy dances yet, he is slowly coming round.

Wall Street Report

New York, Feb. 18—(AP)—Modest gains continued in today's stock market although many leaders suffered from the lack of worthwhile bids.

Dealings slowed to a crawl after a fairly active opening. Advances of fractions to a point or so were a shade in the majority near midday.

Market operations still were confined largely to professionals, the public generally being inclined to caution because of the thought that more of a technical correction of the recent sharp comeback was a possibility.

Du Pont moved upward in further response to record net income and a boosted quarterly. Supported were U. S. Steel, Youngtown Sheet, Goodyear, Goodrich, Anaconda, U. S. Gypsum, Southern Pacific and standard Oil (N.J.). Occasional stumblers were Chrysler; American Telephone, Southern Railway, Union Carbide, Montgomery Ward, International Nickel and Texas Co.

What made Greyhound Grow?

...giving the people
good transportation...at low cost
...and lots of it!

From puppyhood, Greyhound grew on one good idea: to build a new, "American-style" travel system for THE PEOPLE.

Not mail... not freight... but PEOPLE.

The thing Greyhound knows best is how to get people to the places they want to go... at the time they want to go... at prices they can afford.

And Greyhound does this for more cities, towns, villages and corners than any other transportation system in America.

What's more, Greyhound makes this "American-style" travel friendly, easy, convenient... stopping in the heart of big cities... at the drug store
